1. Procedure for Virtual Hearings Held Under the Licensing Act 2003

The purpose of this procedure is to clarify how the Licensing Sub-Committee (“the Sub-Committee”) will conduct virtual licensing hearings made under the Licensing Act 2003 (as amended) and for licensing applications under other regimes. All hearings are conducted with due regard to the Council’s Constitution, relevant legislation and case law, regulations and guidance.

2. Accessing Virtual Hearings

Virtual Licensing Sub-Committee hearings will be held on Microsoft Teams as a live Teams event. Each application will be dealt with by a separate Teams meeting. All applicants, responsible authorities and other persons (who have submitted a valid representation) (collectively called “Parties”) will be provided with a link to the meeting beforehand. Only these parties will be able to participate in the hearing (together with their adviser) provided they have registered, in advance, with the Licensing Authority, as specified below. A link for the general public to watch the meeting will be available on the Council’s website.

3. Final Submissions Before the Hearing

The parties (or their representatives) should use their best endeavours to ensure that all of their final submissions have been made so as to be included in the Sub-Committee report (typically no later than 5.00 pm, 5 working days before the Sub-Committee hearing). This means by 5pm on the Thursday, the week before the Sub-Committee hearing is due to take place. Final submissions should set out the key points, policies and conditions that a party wishes the Sub-Committee to take account of in determining the application.

Any final submissions that a party wishes to make, (that have not been submitted so as to have been included in the report), must be submitted to the Licensing Service by 12 noon, 3 working days before the hearing is due to take place. The Licensing email address is: licensing@westminster.gov.uk

4. Rules During Licensing Hearings

The following rules must be followed by all parties to ensure the virtual hearing can progress as successfully as possible:

- 4.1. All parties wishing to participate in the hearing must register their wish to participate in the hearing and provide their email addresses to the Licensing Service at licensing@westminster.gov.uk no later than 12 noon on the Monday before the Thursday hearing is scheduled to take place.
- 4.2. All parties should join the virtual hearing at least 15 minutes before the advertised start time to ensure they are ready to start at the advertised start time. After the advertised start time has passed no registered parties will be allowed to join, except in exceptional circumstances, when permitted by the Chairman, as this could disrupt the meeting.
- 4.3. All parties must only address the hearing when invited to do so by the Chairman.
- 4.4. All parties must keep their microphones on mute unless they are speaking. The Chairman has the ability to mute all parties’ microphones.

- 4.5. If a party wishes to interject, they should put their name in the messaging field. The chairman has the discretion to invite the party to make their comment at an appropriate stage in the hearing.
- 4.6. All parties are asked to keep their comments as succinct as possible.
- 4.7. If a party has a question for another party, this must be addressed to the Chairman who will have the discretion to ask the relevant party to respond.
- 4.8. Parties wishing to make suggestions as to the conditions that may be imposed in the event of the application being granted should do so by reference to the schedule of proposed conditions set out in the Conditions Schedule annexed to the committee papers. In so doing, they should use the same numbering in that schedule. This is to ensure that there is ease of referencing the conditions by all the parties.
- 4.9. To ensure the smooth running of hearings, a time limit will be placed on each party's submissions. This time limit must be adhered to but the Chairman has the flexibility to amend the time limit when it is considered appropriate to do so.
- 4.10. When referring to the hearing papers, participants should give the page and paragraph number when appropriate.
- 4.11. The Chairman has the discretion to amend these rules in any given case where they consider it is appropriate to do so.

5. Procedure

- 5.1. The Chairman will open the meeting and introduce the members of the Sub-Committee and the other officers attending with the members, including the legal adviser, policy adviser and committee officer.
- 5.2. The Chairman will confirm the procedure that the hearing will follow.
- 5.3. The Sub-Committee members and officers will be asked to declare any interests they may have and any other procedural business will be transacted.
- 5.4. The presenting officer from the licensing service will introduce the application, giving a brief description of the application and introducing all the Parties in attendance for each application
- 5.5. Each party who has registered to speak, will be invited to make their representations and will be allowed a maximum of 10 minutes each. In order to ensure that the hearing is fair to all parties and is conducted in an orderly manner, the Chairman has the discretion to extend this time limit where it is appropriate for the determination of the application.
- 5.6. Parties will normally speak in the following order, (the order may change for other types of licensing applications):
  - (a) The applicant
  - (b) Responsible authorities
  - (c) Other persons
- 5.7. The Chairman has the right to grant each party the opportunity to ask questions of each other for the purposes of clarification only where it is appropriate to do so. The Sub-Committee members will then be able to ask questions of the parties.

- 5.8. The legal adviser and/or policy officer may ask questions of the parties as they consider appropriate, including in relation to the conditions which should be attached to the application if the Sub-Committee is minded to grant the application.
- 5.9. Each party will have an opportunity to make a short closing submission each (not introducing any new evidence or case law) of no more than 5 minutes each, in the following order:
  - (a) Responsible authorities
  - (b) Other persons
  - (c) The applicant
- 5.10. The Chairman shall then close the meeting and all parties will leave the meeting. A Decision will not be announced at the end of the hearing unless there is a legal requirement to do so.
- 5.11. The Sub-Committee will deliberate in closed session and all parties will be advised of the outcome in a written Summary Decision. Unless otherwise required or permitted by Regulations, summary decisions will be made within a period of five working days of the last day of the hearing. The written summary of the decision ("Summary Decision") will be sent to all the parties as soon as possible after the Decision has been made. The full Decision, setting out the reasons for the Decision, (Formal Notification) will be sent to the parties as soon as possible thereafter. The time limit for appealing will not commence until the Formal Notification has been sent to the parties.

Please state the ground(s) for review (please read guidance note 1)

This review is sought in relation to The Cow PH and Dining Rooms, 89 Westbourne Park Road Premises Licence No. 16/06783/LIPDPS refers, a full copy of the Licence is attached at

This review is sought to prevent:-

- 1) The potential for crime and disorder,
- 2) The potential risk to public safety,
- 3) The potential for public nuisance

The full circumstances are set out below but the brief facts include the following incidents:-

On Thursday the 19th of November 2020; Officers responded to a complaint made to the Police directly, the officers noticed a number of people drinking inside the venue. The officers were wearing body cameras. The venue was serving drinks in open containers for consumption on the premises and not as a 'takeaway'. Police spoke directly with the Licence Holder Mr Tom Conran and deemed the matter to be a breach of regulations.

The venue was unable to provide the full premises Licence, when required to do so by the Police.

This breach of Covid regulations was dealt with by way of a Fixed Penalty Notice issued by Westminster Council.

Subsequently this notice was appealed by the venue, this appeal was rejected by another officer and later the Notice has been discharged by way of a £1000 fine.

The Notice and the e mail appeal are attached at Appendix 5

On Sunday 30th of August at 6.42pm the weekend of a virtual Notting Hill Carnival; a City Inspector detected a breach of social distancing outside the premises; on intervention The Cow was advised to cease trading for a while,

On the 7th of August 2020 at 00.30 a City Inspector attended the pub to find loud music escaping into the street, a number of people inside drinking and dancing, again in close proximity to each other. This was beyond the terminal hour.
The DPS was present but was unable to produce the full premises Licence.

On the 4th of July; the first day of restrictions being lifted, Police were called to the venue, following a disturbance. A male has subsequently been charged with a serious assault; this matter is still awaiting trial.

On the 4th of July at 8.26pm and again on the 31st of July 2020, WCC received complaints of music noise and general disorder by customers outside this pub. These complaints resulted in a meeting between WCC City Inspectors and the management team of The Cow PH. Advice was given and the venue explained the adjustments they had made subsequent to the first day of trading.

Similar complaints have been received, including the Saturday night 5th of September at 10.30pm and again on the 16th of December 2020 at just after midnight.

Since July the 4th 2020, Westminster Council have received five complaints relating to noise from the venue and the behaviour of customers outside. One further breach was found direct by Westminster officers and two others were found directly by Metropolitan Police.

Please provide as much information as possible to support the application
(please read guidance note 2)

Saturday 4th July 2020

Police attended the venue in relation to a disturbance; ultimately one male was arrested for a serious assault. The time of the incident and how it was notified are unknown.

This matter is still awaiting trial and cannot be commented on much further. The investigating officer has indicated that he was able to view internal CCTV, with the assistance of The Cow PH, although the assault took place somewhere outside

Saturday 4th of July 2020

A local resident contacted Westminster Council at 8.26pm and made a complaint of noise and nuisance generated by The Cow. This matter was recorded on 20/20196/ENC45; although no action, or investigation was able to take place that day. This was the first day of opening and proved to be very busy, so incidents had to be prioritised.

This complaint was subsequently brought to my attention and I spoke with the resident on the 23rd of July; I then sent a message to The Cow the same day. I expressed my concerns and requested a meeting.

The Cow responded on the 29th of July and a meeting was agreed; e mails attached at appendix 3

Friday 31st of July 2020

A further complaint was recorded on 20/23695/ENC45; a different, local resident complained of loud music and customer noise on a regular basis over the whole weekend until 1-2am. This complaint was made subsequent to any actual incident and we were unable to investigate, so this matter was also left to be addressed at the planned meeting with the management team.

Friday 7th of August 2020

At 00.10 a complaint of loud audible music escaping from the venue was received at WCC; in response to this complaint, City Inspector Adam Webb attended the venue at 00.30. He found music audible from at least 50 meters from the location; he saw many people inside, drinking and dancing, he recorded the matter on 20/24384/ELREAC.

The management team present claimed that the people were staff and therefore not necessarily an offence under The Licensing Act if the alcohol had been supplied free of charge.

However, the lack of social distancing and actions of those present, certainly contravened Covid guidelines, giving a cause for concern, when those committing the offence, were the very same people charged with enforcing the guidelines.

The venue was unable to produce a Full Copy of the Premises Licence; an offence under Section 57 of The Licensing Act 2003

A full statement from Adam Webb is attached to these papers at appendix 2

This matter came to our attention just before the planned meeting.

Wednesday 12th August 2020

A meeting took place between various members from The Cow and WCC. Those present from The Cow were Mr Hajrullah Gashi (the Designated Premises Supervisor), Mr Yavor Pinev (General Manager) and Mr Wotjek Peresada (Assistant General Manager) Mr Tom Conran (Licence Holder) had been invited but was unable to attend and sent his apologies. Officers present from Westminster were City Inspector Sam Bucpapaj and Glyn Franks. We discussed at length, the incidents of nuisance since the premises had reopened on the 4th of July.

We also talked in detail about the incident on the 7th of August

The Cow explained that they had taken on security staff, specifically to deal with the outside areas at busy times, as they had recognised a change in the demographics of their customers.

Other conversations took place about their arrangements for social distancing, the management resilience in relation to Personal Licence Holders, or managers on duty at all times; CCTV and other related subjects.

The suggestion was made for agents representing The Cow PH, to submit a Minor Variation, to put additional conditions onto their Premises Licence, many of which were already being implemented voluntarily.

The details of this meeting are fully recorded on 20/24535/ELREAC.

Ultimately, the managers decided to rely on their operational plan and not to make such an application, this decision was communicated on the 18th of September.

I responded to this decision on the 19th September; I also attached two images (appendix 4) taken on the 30th of August; which showed customers and or other pedestrians in the roadway, a potential risk to Public Safety made more difficult by the need to keep customers distanced.

This message was responded to on the 21st of September, by; or on behalf of the Licence Holder (Mr Tom Conran)

The details of these messages are attached to the papers. Appendix 3

Sunday 30th of August

On the weekend of the virtual Notting Hill carnival at 18.42; City Inspector Racheal Ejuetami found a large number of customers outside The Cow PH. Racheal advised the staff to stop serving alcohol for a period of time to regain control of the customers. When she returned later, the situation was improved. The details are fully recorded in her statement here attached at Appendix 2. The images exhibited by Racheal, are attached at appendix 3

Monday 7th September 2020

On Monday the 7th of September an e mail was received by the Licensing Service at WCC; the message was ultimately passed through to me for information.

The message talked about matters occurring on Saturday the 5th of September. The contents of this message are self-explanatory; but not verified.

A slightly redacted copy of this message is attached at appendix 3

Thursday 19th November 2020

On Thursday the 19th of November 2020 at 18.50 uniformed Police found a number of people drinking alcohol from glasses in the venue; there were a significant number of staff and customers present. The Police formed the opinion that the premises were trading normally and in contravention of Covid Regulations.

One of the attending officers, PC Nicholas Peach, has made a full statement which is attached to the papers. At appendix 2

The venue were again unable to provide a copy of the Premises Licence; an offence under Section 57.

This matter has been recorded on 20/36316/COVFPN

Thursday 26th November 2020

Police attended The Cow in response to a call made directly to them, they found that customers were drinking 'take away' beer directly outside of the venue. This was in contravention of the guidelines.

They intervened and spoke to staff present at the time.

This matter and others, has been recorded on a statement by the dedicated local officer; PC Andy Burgin, which is also attached to these papers. Appendix 2

Wednesday 16th December 2020

On the 16th of December 2020 at 00.07 a complaint was received from a local resident that a number of customers were still present outside The Cow PH. It was stated that they had been there for a couple of hours, having remained after the pub had closed.

This was the same day that Greater London went into Tier 3 and premises could only deal in take away and delivery from midnight onwards. Essentially trading on the 15th was the last night.

This matter was not subject of further investigation and is recorded on 20/38943/ENNS45.

- 9) A response was received from The Cow on the 29th of July, the contents of that e mail signed by a Wotjek Peresada is also attached to the papers at appendix3
- 10) A meeting was arranged for the 12th of August; this being the first opportunity both sides were able to fulfil.
- 11) On the 1st of August 2020 a local resident contacted WCC via its website to complain of activities taking place the day before 31st of July 2020; the text of the complaint follows:-
Location: The Cow Pub music and people on streets in front and around the pub
Notes: Every single Thursday, Friday and Saturday there is 100s of people outside The Cow until 1-2am.
The pub continues to play loud music until this time and keeps serving drinks to customers.
- 12) The receiving officer contacted this resident; as the matters were now history, he also passed them to the local team for attention. It was known by this time that a meeting was planned with the venue, to be dealt with at the same time.
- 13) On the 6th of August 2020, at 23,54 a complaint was made regarding noise from The Cow PH in Westbourne Park Road. This complaint was made anonymously, but from a different address to the two residents referred to above.
- 14) A City Inspector attended on the 7th of August some 15 minutes after the complaint was received. He found The Cow to be still operating, with loud music audible from a distance of 50 metres. He also observed people drinking and dancing, in contravention of Covid guidelines and possibly in contravention of the Premises Licence. The officer engaged with the managers on duty including the Premises Supervisor.

- 15) The managers were unable to produce the Full Current Premises Licence, this is an offence in itself under Section 57 of The Licensing Act. Please see the full statement by Adam Webb attached to these papers for his account; at appendix 2
- 16) On Wednesday the 12th of August 2020 at 11am, with City Inspector Sam Bucpapaj, I met with the DPS Mr Hajrullah Gashi; Mr Yavor Pinev (General Manager) and Mr Wojtek Peresada (Assistant General Manager) Mr Tom Conran (Licence Holder) had been invited but was unable to attend. From the discussions I was confident that his management team were able to represent him adequately.
- 17) I explained the concerns regarding the complaints around the outside area, plus the recent visit by Adam Webb. In broad terms all three of the team accepted that some difficulties had been encountered since the re-opening on the 4th of July. For this reason, they had now employed SIA staff to monitor the outside area at busy times especially Friday and Saturday evenings.
- 18) We talked about the procedures for making a Covid safe and compliant operation, the CCTV system in place and other general management responsibilities. I was satisfied that procedures were in place; however, I suggested that The Cow should consider a Minor Variation to the Premises Licence in order that we could better enforce these amendments and for The Cow to display a commitment to the Licensing Objectives. The meeting ended amicably.
- 19) I later sent a message with a link to the WCC model Conditions and identified a number of conditions for consideration. I received a response dated the 18th of September sent by Mr Peresada; which indicated following consideration they would not be submitting a Minor Variation, but they had increased the number and times for the SIA staff. The details of these e mails are also attached to the papers at appendix 3
- 20) I responded to this message on the 19th of September, to which I added two images taken outside The Cow PH on the 30th of August (Notting Hill weekend) which showed customers and others walking in the roadway. The images are attached at appendix 4
- 21) I received a response to these images via a message dated the 21st of September signed by, or on behalf of Tom Conran (Licence Holder) the details are again attached. Mr Conran indicated to his team the need to maintain Covid compliance in a difficult working environment.
- 22) From November the 5th 2020 another National Lockdown restricted all pubs from opening, other than for take away and delivery; until December the 2nd.
- 23) On Thursday the 19th of November Police officers attended The Cow PH at around 1850; they found a number of people drinking from open glasses, they saw a number of staff present and they formed the opinion that the pub was trading as normal in contravention of the Covid Regulations. The officers had body worn cameras recording the incident.

- 24) Mr Thomas Conran was present and engaged with a Police Officer directly. The details are found in the statement of PC Nicholas Perch. Attached at appendix 2
Again the management were unable to provide the full Premises Licence, another breach of Section 57 of The Licensing Act
- 25) On the 20th of November Mr James Hayes a Team Manager issued a Fixed Penalty Notice to Mr Conran and The Cow PH for the breach of regulations. A copy is attached at appendix 5
- 26) On the 20th of November I received a request from The Cow PH, for a PDF version of their current Premises Licence, which I sent along with some advice regarding the Licence Holder's responsibilities under Section 57.
A extract of the message is attached at appendix 3
- 27) On the 29th of November a written representation was received at WCC, the venue disputed the circumstances and asked the FPN to be removed. This appeal was reviewed by another authorised officer at Westminster and the appeal was dismissed on the 10th of December. Subsequently, we have been contacted by a representative of The Cow, a Mr Thomas Flynn; attempting to discharge their responsibility by paying the amount of £1000.
- 28) On the 26th of November, uniformed Police attended The Cow PH to deal with customers drinking "Take Away" alcohol on the terrace of the pub. No social distancing was taking place and customers should not have been drinking in the vicinity of the pub. The customers were moved away. The details of this incident are recorded in a statement from PC Andy Burgin attached at appendix 2
- 29) On the 3rd of December I sent an e mail to The Cow, asking them to retain the images from their CCTV for the evening of the 19th of November as described at paragraph 23. My message was passed by The Cow to the attention of a Mr Thomas Flynn. On the 6th of December a reply from The Cow was sent to WCC; which indicated that the CCTV was being upgraded during this period and was therefore not operating.
An extract from the e mails is attached. At appendix 3
- 30) On the 16th of December at 00.07 Westminster Council received a complaint as follows:- Location: Outside the cow pub
Notes: There are around 30 people standing on the street screaming and shouting, they have been there for a few hours at the Cow Pub and when it closed they are just standing in the street.
This complaint was not investigated further at the time.
- 31) The date has some significance; as Greater London went into a Tier 3 Lockdown at midnight on the 16th, allowing take away and delivery only; so 11pm on the 15th would have been the last night of 'normal trading'

- 32) The complaints received from members of the public show a consistency of complaint and yet have been made by different people. In the matters where details were given, most of the complaints relate to their neighbours, living locally.
- 33) I have also attached an extract from a message received into the Licensing Service on the 7th of September. The customer speaks about his concerns on the 5th of September. This matter was never investigated and cannot be substantiated; however, it echoes similar complaints as evidenced above, and I submit the details for information only. Appendix 3
- 34) In my opinion the Licence holder and management team for this venue, show little regard for the principles of the Licensing Act ; or to the guidance under the Covid regulations; the reports and failings as detailed above, have taken place, despite receiving advice, enforcement action and visits by authorised officers.
- 35) All of the above events have taken place during an exceptional time for the Country and for commercial premises in particular. Advice from Central Government; which has been echoed by Westminster Council, has been to allow a very light touch when it comes to enforcement action. The management of The Cow have received that light touch, however, their actions have made this review inevitable.

This statement is in regards to the COW Public House at 87 WESTBOURNE PARK ROAD W2. On THURSDAY 19th NOVEMBER 2020 I was on duty in Police uniform conducting COVID 19 patrols using call sign AW677L. I was on duty with PC JETHWA 2212AW. At 1756 hours cad 5659/19NOV20 came out over the radio regarding a Pub that was open for business and trading. Because the information we had was that the pub was full of customers I was unsure the amount of customers inside or the risk. Therefore I contacted another covid 19 car on duty. Call sign AW660L. They attended with us. We arrived at 1850 hours. As we approached the outside of the premises there were at least 10-15 people sitting outside the front in the seating area drinking and socialising. These are built in seating areas split into one section each side of the door. All the seats were occupied and everyone was drinking. I entered the pub via the door to the right of the seating area. As I entered the pub it was obvious the pub was doing some sort of trading. Inside in the bar area there were at least 7-10 customers standing at the bar. They were standing there with drinks that had been served to them. The drinks were in open top glasses with various amounts and levels missing which was consistent with people having drank from them. They had been served from behind the bar. Stood behind the bar were at least 6-7 staff members working behind the bar and 9 in the pub in general. A male came up to me who I now know to be Mr Thomas CONRAN date of birth 03/04/1964, He informed me he was the owner of the pub. He said 'WE ARE NOT OPEN'. I said 'YOU ARE THERE ARE PEOPLE HERE DRINKING'. At this point people started to leave. I Said. 'YOU'RE OPEN AND TRADING SIR.' He replied 'WE ARE NOT TRADING. WE ARE NOT TRADING.' I replied, 'YOU ARE OPEN. PC YOUNG who was in AW660L said 'YOU HAVE BEEN TAKING NO MONEY?' He replied 'THROUGH THE HATCH WE HAVE'. All customers then left the pub leaving the staff behind. At this moment Mr Lindon PERCIVAL from WESTMINSTER COUNCIL arrived at the location. I liaised with him and he sought advice from his office on how to proceed with this matter. Mr CONRAN did not have any ID or a personal licence on as did none of the staff behind the bar. There was also no licence visible in the bar area and staff had to go and search for it. Once this situation was under control police left the scene leaving Mr PERCIVAL to finish the council business. I would describe Mr CONRAN at about 56 years of age, white male, slim build, F509, wearing a brown jacket, white shirt, black tie, brown trousers. This incident has been recorded on body worn video. I exhibiting my body worn as NPP/01

This statement refers to the recent dealings between police and The COW Public house, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London, W2.

I am the above named police officer and the current dedicated ward officer for Bayswater. Part of my role is to review ongoing issues within the ward and work with partnership agencies to resolve them. During COVID lockdown I have been made aware of multiple residential dwellings as well as private businesses whom are not abiding by new regulations imposed as a result of COVID Laws. One of these venues being The COW Public House, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London, W2.

On the 17th July 2020 I received a report from a member of public stating that they had witnessed large groups of people gathered outside The Cow Public House over a course of weekends. Stating the groups were breaching COVID regulations. Around the same time I received an email from Westminster Council stating they too had reports of a similar nature that The Cow Customers are gathering in groups, urinating in the street and blocking the pathways. Due to limited resources, officers were unable to visit on the evenings the reports were made. However, officers did attend the following day to speak to The COW Pub and staff within. Strong words of advice were given explaining that it is their responsibility to ensure public safety around social distancing inside and outside they're venue. Officers were reassured that they will hire help such as door staff to help manage the flow of people.

I then received a second report on the 07th August 2020 from a different member of public, stating the same thing. This time, the member of public stated that The Cow Public House was allowing up to 150 customers to be stood outside the venue drinking, not abiding by social distancing rules. To the point that traffic was being disrupted and blocked by these customers. Police attended that night and spoke with the staff. They stated they were trying to manage the disruption however lacked the staff to do so. Whilst officers were on scene, the groups began to disperse. There was evidence of "balloons" "NOS" being used outside by possible customers.

Local officers attended the address the following day to once again speak to the staff about the evenings problems, caused by lack of control and management of the customers outside the venue. The management was spoken to, whom appeared to take the advice well, but did mention that they had struggled business wise during lockdown and was just trying to recuperate money back. Officers explained that although this is understandable, it is also unacceptable as they are breaching COVID guidelines.

I was then made aware of an incident, whereby officers attended a call to The COW PH on November 19th 2020. Where reports came in that they were serving and trading inside the venue, during lockdown, breaching COVID Legislation. The officer explained in their statement that when they attended on this date at approximately 1850hours, they saw 10-15 people stood outside the venue, drinking alcohol and socialising, then upon entering the venue, they saw around 7-10 customers stood at the bar drinking served alcohol, whilst bar staff stood behind the bar. Evidence that the venue was still trading during lockdown. I have attached the officer's statement along with mine to provide the evidence direct from them.

The last time this venue came to my attention was on the 26th November 2020. I was emailed by one of Westminster Councillors, who happened to walk past The Cow that evening, to see groups of people gathered, drinking alcohol once again, without social distancing after buying drinks from The Cow Public House.

Officers attended that evening and the following night and also established that the COW pub were indeed serving customers, but for take away only. The main issue noted, was that the customers were gathering directly outside the Cow pub, potentially breaching licensing conditions.

Since the 26th November 2020 I have not received any further complaints to date – 04th December 2020.

I am employed by Westminster City Council as a City Inspector for City Operations, Public Protection and Licensing. I have held this position since 1 December 2015. Prior to this date, I have held enforcement roles within five Local Authority community safety teams for over 15 years. I am authorised to enter and inspect premises, make enquiries within these premises and to exercise the functions and powers as contained under the provisions of the Licensing Act 2003.

This statement is compiled from my original pocketbook notes Ref No. PPL0584 pages 52-53 and my referral report to the relevant City Inspector team on the 8th December 2020.

I received a service request through the City of Westminster's noise service on Friday 7th August 2020 at 23:53Hrs under case reference 20/24373/ENC45. The complainant; who reported anonymously alleged two pubs in the area were being noisy.

As I approached the The Cow restaurant at 89 Westbourne Park Road London W2 5QH at 00:30 in my car with windows down, music was clearly audible from at least fifty meters away at street level. The noise was easily identified as coming from The Cow due to its volume and movement of revelling people on the forecourt. Seven people were drinking on the forecourt, four of which appeared to be passers-by who had stopped to drink there. I observed a large group within the premises who were playing extremely loud music and I could see a group of people dancing inside through the window.

I visited and spoke initially to Mr Wojciech Peresada (WP) who identified himself as the Assistant General Manager, after a short time making enquiries a Mr Gashi Hajjrucha (GH) and an unidentified staff member came out to the forecourt from inside.

I explained my concerns regarding noise escape, Covid safe measures and the regulations in force at the time regarding excessive music volume and dancing being prohibited.

GH left the conversation directly after identifying himself as the Designated Premises Supervisor (DPS) and started clearing glasses, WP and the unidentified male were left to speak to me about the conduct of the business. The unidentified staff member, a man of approximately 45 year of age, dark hair and of Mediterranean appearance, claimed to have been managing the venue for 20 years.

The unknown man was quite argumentative and clearly saw no issue with the points I raised above claiming the right to carry out these activities due to his staff and patrons needing to let off steam caused by the pandemic lock down. All attempts to explain the importance of the maintaining the pandemic measures were ignored or argued with by the man.

The group within was at least 14 people which WP claimed were all staff and their partners however through a conversation with some of the group as they left earlier before the management had come out of the bar, particularly one female patron made it clear she was a local musician who frequented the pub regularly leading me to believe the event was probably more of a lock-in event for patrons, she made no mention of being staff there and gave me the impression that The Cow was her 'local' pub of choice.

GH and WP could not provide the Part A of the current Premises licence however WP provided me with an old 2008 licence which did not have all the current MC's included on it or the correct contact details for the current DPS or licensee. I told WP to ensure this was corrected immediately.

In the absence of the DPS; I verbally warned WP regarding the Coronavirus act and that providing music in such a manner and volume was in my opinion...

probably an unauthorised music event; highlighting to WP that the above may also be a criminal offence and if so, did not adhere to the licencing act objectives of preventing public nuisance, promoting public safety and preventing crime.

I raised the additional point to WP that in my opinion if this complaint had been witnessed, for example, from inside the flats opposite it would be likely to be a Statutory Nuisance at the volume I had heard it, even though it was witnessed from street level. I informed WP that although the noise complaint had not been witnessed formally to assess nuisance on this occasion, WP and the business should consider themselves fortunate and take the issue of noise escape very seriously to ensure that the same does not occur again; I signposted WP to City of Westminster's website for relevant information regarding noise escape and potential consequences of an abatement notice being served.

The area was very heavily littered at the time of my visit with bottles and glasses and was only addressed after the group inside had left and certainly appeared not to have been monitored either on the forecourt or highway prior to my arrival including glass being present on neighbouring residences garden railings.

The unhelpful attitude of the unidentified individual and the lack of interest in my visit from the DPS led me to refer this matter for further monitoring as I was left with the impression that this matter would not be an isolated incident. End Of Statement.

I am a Senior City Inspector employed by Westminster City Council attached to the Public Protection and Licensing Department, 15th Floor, City Hall, 64 Victoria Street, SW1E 6QP.

I am authorised to enter and inspect premises, make enquires, and to exercise the functions and powers as contained under the provisions of the Licensing Act 2003. As well as the provisions under the Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) (England) Regulations 2020.

On Sunday 30th August 2020, I was on duty in the Westbourne Park Road area. At approximately 18:42 hours, I approached The Cow Public House 89 Westbourne Park Road, located in London, W2.

At the entrance, I observed a large crowd standing outside the premises drinking vertically, some of the customers from the premises were also seen obstructing the pavement and public highway there was no social distancing observed. This was in breach of the provisions specified for licensed premises during the emergency period within the Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) (England) Regulations 2020. I then took a picture, which I refer to RE/1.

Observing social distancing, I then introduced myself showing my Westminster City Council identification card and authorisation to the security staff standing outside. At this time, I saw more people entering the premises to buy drinks while some were leaving the premises with drinks in their hands to stand outside.

I asked to speak to the duty manager and a couple of minutes later, a gentleman came out of the premises and introduced himself as Yavor (General Manager).

I then asked, are you the Designated Premises Supervisor? He replied: "No, it's Petra".

I asked, is Petra around now? He replied: "yes, he's behind the bar serving".

At this point, I asked to speak to the DPS. Yavor then went back into the premises and returned with Petra. I reintroduced myself showing my Westminster City Council identification card and authorisation. I then informed Petra and Yavor of the concerns highlighted during my observation which was in contravention of the Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) (England) Regulations 2020.

Subsequently, Petra, Yavor and the security tried dispersing the crowd but were unsuccessful. I then advised they stop serving drinks until the crowd disperse. Which they agreed. I informed them I would conduct a follow up visit to inspect the outside area.

At 19:36 hours, I reattended the location and most of the crowd had dispersed. I then took another picture which I present as RE/2.

Extracts of E mail correspondence, between Westminster City Council and Officers representing The Cow PH

Message sent on the 23rd of July; as mentioned at paragraphs 8 and 9 in statement of Glyn Franks

For the attention of Hajrullah Gashi
the Designated Premises Supervisor of the above pub
I am investigating concerns regarding the management of the outside area of The Cow PH, since reopening on July 4th.
The complaints include the pavements being blocked by your customers; glasses, bottles and plastics being left outside, open air urination and general anti- social behaviour shown by your customers
I note also that a fight between your customers recently, resulted in injury and an arrest
It would be good to be able to meet you and discuss these issues, at some time convenient to both of us; however, in the meantime I would appreciate your comments to the above.
I note that your Premises Licence; condition number 13, restricts the numbers of customers drinking outside, to thirty (30) in total; how do you manage that number? Do you restrict? Do you have any security?
How are you managing the Social distance guidelines; inside, or outside your venue?
How do you manage the collection of empty vessels?
Condition number 17 requires you to sweep the outside area and store the debris safely; how is this dealt with operationally?
I would welcome your comments and hope to be able to work with you, to enforce the conditions and uphold the Licensing Objectives; which is your responsibility.

Kind regards

Glyn Franks
Senior City Inspector
South East Team 1
Public Protection & Licensing

Dear Glyn,

Thank you for your email.
The day of the opening on the 4th of July was an exceptionally difficult day from management point of view for couple of reasons. Easing of the lockdown rules and opening of pubs & restaurants on a Saturday made management of crowds very difficult, but we made sure we took all precautions needed to keep our staff and customers safe. All beverages were served in plastic containers, extra staff were working at the venue on that night, specifically tasked with cleaning the outside area of the pub, pavement, and making sure everyone complied with social distancing rules.
A fight between two men didn't take place at our premisses nor directly in front of our venue, but our staff helped authorities in controlling the situation and in treating the injured man.
It would be good and easier to discuss these issues in person. We (the management) are available for a meeting any day Monday to Friday between 10 am and 4pm. We would cherish an opportunity to meet you at your earliest convenience and explain in detail how we're dealing with issues mentioned in your email operationally.
I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Assistant General Manager

To whom it may concern

Dear Sir/Madam

I spent Saturday evening (5th) in the Bayswater area, visiting some friends. At around 10.30 pm we were heading to a venue and walking down Westbourne Park Road and Westbourne Park Villas.

During our trip, we past two late night establishments called the Cow , on Westbourne Park road, and the Westbourne at Westbourne park Villas. I was horrified at the scene around these two establishments. Not only were these bars packed to capacity, but the large crowd from each venue was spilled out onto the street, in such numbers are to block the entire pavement. I had to walk on the road to pass safely, with little evidence at either venue of capacity control or, indeed no sign of security. It is also highly unlikely that neither establishment had made the effort to record details of their patrons, due to the ridiculous numbers of people at each venue.

Im sorry to say, but it seems obvious that both venues have a complete lack of respect to either the current virus threat or to any other individuals who may become ill, whilst never having set foot in either . At a time when COVID-19 numbers are rising rapidly, it is hardly surprising when you see this kind of thoroughly reckless behaviour taking place. I have visited many well run venues recently, where they have taken the time and made the effort to ensure their patrons can enjoy an evening sensibly but also safely. Unfortunately, this sense seems severely lacking with the owners/management of these two venues.

Whilst it may be the case that THEY don't wish to enforce rules and guidelines designed to protect everyone's health and safety, you can, and , as with the police, have a duty to do so.

To say I am disgusted at this cavalier attitude, which with invariably result in the deaths of others as COVID again climbs, I am calling upon you to investigate and act to ensure that these venues are held to account , or at least made aware of their duties and obligations. I would also like to know when licensing officers last visited these premises and whether or not they checked or conducted any risk assessment on each venue , as it seems abundantly clear that whatever measures may have been in place ( or supposedly in place) have now been relaxed to such a degree that they are no longer in force.

I trust that you, as the licensing authority responsible for this disgraceful example of contempt for the public , shall take action to address this with the relevant proprietors.

I shall also be sending this communication to the borough commander .

Yours in disgust

Hello Wojtek,

I have already spoken to Yavor today with concern to the measures we have been taking to stay on top of COVID-19 regulations. It is vital for the safety of our customers, staff & business, as a whole, that we continue to do our utmost to stick closely to the current legislation. I have offered my considered suggestions & solutions in this regard & wish that the management & security team implement them precisely in order for us to trade correctly, as per the guidelines.

Thank you all for your continued support through these tricky times.

Kind regards,

Thomas Conran

Other members of staff to be in charge when Mr Harjullah Gashi is off duty is a question for yourselves; in fact this should have been completed already and reviewed by yourselves when necessary; it is known by the title of Section 57 notice

I have attached a link to explain the responsibility of the Premises Licence Holder; (the advice is from a private solicitor and not WCC but should be useful)

Having reviewed the evidence provided by the Metropolitan Police Service and the Westminster City Council officers, both providing their evidence independently, and the MPS have supporting video evidence on their bodycam, I am satisfied that there was a breach under Regulation 15 (1) namely, a person responsible for carrying on a restricted business, or providing a restricted service, must (a) close any premises, or part of the premises, in which food or drink are provided for consumption on those premises, and (b) cease providing food or drink for consumption on its premises.

  1. Alcohol had been provided at the premises and evidenced.
  2. Evidence that money had been paid.
  3. Not all persons present inside or outside the premises were staff members as you stated.

Therefore, having reviewed the mitigation you provided; I find there are no grounds for cancelling the above notice. There are no material defects in the notice, and I am satisfied that it was issued correctly.

The Fixed Penalty Notice must now be paid, and arrangements made for payment within 14 days of this letter to the amount of £1000, as this the specified amount under the Regulations for a first offence in respect of a business restriction offence. As stated in Part D of the served Fixed Penalty Notice this Notice remains in force even if you have raised a challenge.

Regulation contravened:

Restrictions on service of food and drink for consumption on the premises

Regulation 15 (1) A person responsible for carrying on a restricted business, or providing a restricted service, must (a) close any premises, or part of the premises, in which food or drink are provided for consumption on those premises, and (b) cease providing food or drink for consumption on its premises.

Particulars of the offence:

In relation to a breach of Regulation 15(1) (Business or service listed in Part 1 of the Schedule, or is carried on from, or provided at, premises of a kind specified in Part 1 of the Schedule):

- Failed, without reasonable excuse, to close the premises, or part(s) of the premises, in which food or drink are provided for consumption on the premises; and
- Failed, without reasonable excuse, to cease providing food or drink for consumption on the premises. Food or drink being for consumption on premises, includes an area adjacent to the premises of the restricted business or restricted service where seating is made available for its customers (whether or not by the business or the provider of the service) or which its customers habitually use for consumption of food or drink served by the business or service is to be treated as part of the premises of that business or service.

On Thursday 19 November 2020 Council Officers were on duty when they observed people standing and sitting directly outside The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London W2 5QH. When returning to the premises to discuss these observations with the manager of the premises and investigate compliance with the Coronavirus regulations, police also arrived as they had received a separate complaint that the premises was open for business and trading. Two police teams attended the premises at 1850 hours. There were at least 10-15 people sitting outside the front in the seating area drinking and socialising. These seats are built in and split into one section each side of the door. All the seats were occupied and everyone was drinking.

Police entered the premises via the door to the right of the seating area. It was obvious the pub were open and trading and there was consumption of food or drink inside the premises. Inside in the bar area there were at least 7-10 customers standing at the bar. They were standing there with drinks that had been served to them. The drinks were in open top glasses with various amounts and levels missing which was consistent with people having drunk from them. They had been served from behind the bar. Stood behind the bar were at least 6-7 staff members working behind the bar and 9 in the pub in general.

A male came up to a police officer who is now known to be Mr Thomas Conran, who council records confirm is the licence holder for the premises licence in force at the premises. Mr Conran tried to state that all the people inside initially were staff. He eventually informed police that they were not. He then told police that this was his first day of trading under his new business plan.

This incident has been recorded on body worn video.

This Notice remains in force even if you have raised a challenge.

I refer to the application for review of the Premises Licence.

The review is being taken by the Public Protection and Licensing Department on the “prevention of crime and disorder”; “public safety” and the “prevention of public nuisance” licensing objectives due to the premises not promoting the licencing objectives. The desired outcome is to impose additional conditions to help promote the licensing objectives.

I am a serving Police Officer with nearly 21 years of service. Throughout my service, I have spent many years as a front-line response officer and in the last few months I have transferred over to work within the Westminster Police Licensing Team.

This statement is intended to provide evidence to support the premises licence review which has been submitted by the Westminster City Council Licensing Inspectors for The Cow Public House, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London, W2 5QH.

As well as this statement, I am also submitting a list of fifteen (15) Computer Aided Despatch reports (CAD's) and three (3) screen shots of Officers Body Worn Video (BWV).

Regarding the CAD's, I have searched between the dates of 1st January 2020 to 1st January 2021 and I have only included the reports which directly relate to the premises itself. It should be mentioned that from the fifteen calls received by the police, they relate to a total of seven (7) separate incidents due the Police receiving multiple calls being for the same incidents. I exhibit this list as DJM/1.

Of these seven incidents, the Police dispatched uniformed officers to The Cow Public House four (4) times which placed unnecessary demands on Police resources and placed officers at risk to their health. As can be seen from the list, all the calls were generated by members of the public during the Covid-19 pandemic and a majority of the calls describe large crowds gathering outside the pub who were not adhering to social distancing and were causing excessive noise and disturbances.

Continuation of Statement of: David Morgan PC 4242AW

The six (6) calls received on the 4th July 2020, all relate to the large amount of people who were gathering outside of the pub who were not engaging in social distancing. This was the first day that pubs were allowed to open after lockdown and inevitably, the venue appears to have become overwhelmed with customers which resulted in large groups of people drinking on the street. During this time, Covid-19 restrictions still required people to be socially distanced and the 'rule of six' applied to people whilst outside. From the various callers, it appears that there was a lack of social distancing between the pubs customers who were drinking outside and not only did the pub appear to be unprepared for the amount of customers that attended, they also appear to have breached two of the conditions on their premises licence (16/06783/LIPDPS), namely;

Condition 12 – Consumption of alcohol outside the public house shall be restricted to the private forecourt to the front of the premises.

Condition 13 – The number of outside customers shall not exceed 30.

A few minutes after the calls relating the groups outside the pub, Police received two further calls regarding a large fight in the street which appeared to have involved two of the pub's customers. Whilst both customers were standing outside on the pavement, it was alleged that the suspect has spilt a drink onto a female bag and when challenged by the victim, the suspect has punched him in the face, knocking him back into the road, where he fell and hit his head. This resulted in the victim receiving hospital treatment for a head wound, and the suspect being arrested for Grievous Bodily Harm.

This incident is of concern to the Westminster Licensing Team as it took up a disproportionate amount of Police and NHS resources and may have been averted if the pubs management had adhered to both conditions 12 and 13 and controlled the crowd outside.

Signature Witnessed by Signature:.....

This incident was recorded by one of the attending officers, PC Ben Taylor on his Body Worn Camera and it shows a large number of people blocking the pavement and road outside the pub whilst drinking. I have taken a screen shot of this and I exhibit it as DJM/2.

The other calls of note are those from the 19th November 2020. On this date, the Police received three (3) calls from the same informant stating that there were people drinking inside the pub when it should have been takeaway's only. When police officers arrived, they found a number of customers inside the venue drinking at the bar.

At this time, Covid-19 restrictions only allowed the venue to be open for takeaway alcohol sales and therefore the management should not have permitted members of the public to drink alcohol inside the premises. By contravening the Covid-19 regulations, this incident, led to a Fixed Penalty Notice issued by Westminster Council. I have taken two screen shots from PC Peach's BWV as he was one of the first officers to attend the pub and I have exhibited these as follows; DJM/3 shows a group of customers inside the venue as the Police arrived and DJM/4 shows a number of alcoholic drinks that had been left at the bar after the Police had asked everyone to leave.

The various calls to Police involving the Cow Public House seem to indicate a failure of the venues management and it is disappointing to see that neither the Licensing Objectives nor the Covid-19 Restrictions were promoted or adhered to. This is of concern to the Police Licensing Team as we need to have confidence in the operators of all licensed premises, not only through this pandemic, but also in the future when the restrictions are lifted.

Due to this, the Metropolitan Police Service fully support the Westminster City Inspectors review of the premises licence.

16/02/2021 7:21 PM The Cow is very important to Bayswater, it is a local social hub that is principally used by residents as it is set away from main streets. That being said the Cow repeatedly broke lockdown rules, not only in those incidences listed in the report but in addition to that on most occasions that I walked past during the lockdown. I understand that lockdown was unbelievably hard for businesses and every business in Bayswater has my sympathy, but the Cow was the only local pub I was aware of consistently (and therefore intentionally) breaking lockdown.

Having been at the forefront, hearing from terrified elderly residents I find this despicable. I would hate to see the Cow go, but I can not endorse an application free from reprisals for a business that behaved so deplorably during such a dark hour.

Can I urge a creative solution, one that allows the Cow to still operate but with additional conditions (eg reduced opening hours or a delay before permitted opening) until the Cow can demonstrate it respects the health and safety of local residents.

Dear Sirs

I frequent The Cow on Westbourne Grove from time to time and whilst a small pub, contributes greatly to the character of the area. And one of the few pubs left in the area.

Are we to now destroy anything and everything with fun or character or history and personality?

Maybe we can delight in seeing it turned into a Starbucks or something... with sanitised walls and fake art.

Can you at least have the common decency to allow people to recover socially from this pandemic before you turn our old haunts into ghost buildings and all the people into automatons????

Thank you

To whom this may concern,

I am writing in regards to the review of a premises license for The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH.

I would like to make a representation relating to the Prevention of Public Nuisance.

In the letter that was sent to us it stated that the timings for late night refreshments were Monday- Saturday: 23:00 to 00:30 and Sunday: 23:00- 00:00 which are not in line with the Sale by Retail of Alcohol which is Monday- Saturday: 10:00 to 00:00 and Sunday: 12:00- 23:30. I would also like to mention that the pub does go over the time limit.

The music causes lots of disruption to children and working people as they are very loud and noisy and the music goes on until late which makes it difficult for people to sleep. This affects young people going to school due to the loud noise.

I also want to make a representation of Crime and disorder e.g. selling drugs just opposite the pub to pubs customers and our area's children. People gather around to sell drugs and are involved in fights. Our children and sick elderly people can't peacefully sleep and relax as a result of the noise.

I also would like to mention that I [REDACTED] and makes it very difficult to tolerate all this noise; it does not allow myself and other unwell tenants to live and sleep peacefully.

We would appreciate our concerns being heard and action being taken.

I look forward to hearing from you.

It simple MUST receive a renewal of its licence!

03/03/2021 1:50 PM Dear whomever this may concern,

There are many reasons to love London, but for me one of the main reasons is The Cow pub. [REDACTED] In those years we have spent countless times there together and i make sure to go AT LEAST once each time i am in London. My family go there (in normal circumstances) a few times a week to meet friends and to have family dinners. It is a down to earth, inspirational, home feeling, amazing place that is seriously hard to find nowadays. And it feels absolutely horrendous for anyone to ever take a place like this away. Lets please not get rid of things that has a soul and meaning. Seriously hope the countless people who love this place, manage to have their voices heard.

26/02/2021 7:30 PM HI - I have been going to this utterly amazing and deservedly much adored pub since I was 20. I grew up in the area and The Cow has always been a place to feel at home and be amongst other locals. It's an extraordinary place for the diversity of people - in terms of background, ethnicity and age - it attracts and how relaxed and friendly people are with each other. This is not normal for most pubs, where seldomly do you talk to the couple on the table next to you or to the group of friends outside. We go to The Cow at least once / twice a month - sometimes more and back in the day every week. I have never ever experienced any kind of social unrest or felt unsafe in anyway - quite the contrary. Not only is the pub extraordinary for the joy it brings out in people - it has also been a trailblazer in the food it serves. There is nowhere like The Cow anywhere in the world - and I have travelled extensively. It is a gift to London and emblematic of everything that makes this city great! Please please please - it's your duty - to make sure that me and mine can return to one of my favourite places on the planet once the lockdown rules change. It is unique, unsurpassed and so genuinely loved by all who congregate there. I know of at least 5 couples who met there and continue to be happily married. That's what The Cow does - pure love!

To whom it may concern,

I write to you in relation to The Cow Public House of 89 Westbourne Park Rd, London W2 5QH and the proposed premises licence review.

The Cow is quite simply a local institution and in a time where there seems to be little to look forward to it is places like this where we can go to meet friends, make new friends, and unwind that provides us with something to look forward to.

The Cow is not any other pub. It has been a local focal point for people of West London for 26+ years and I can honestly say I have never witnessed crime, disorder, public nuisance, or any safety issues in, on or around the premises.

Whatever issues you may have had with the pub in relation to its covid compliance (and, from reading the file on the planning portal, there seem to be valid answers to all your concerns), it should not be used as a backdoor route to close down The Cow. The thought of which is absolutely heartbreaking.

There will not be many pubs which survive the lockdown and Westminster have a moral, social and economic obligation to ensure that those that can manage to do so are not closed for other nonsensical reasons.

Kind Regards, [REDACTED]

09/03/2021 8:46 PM I have lived in the area for 20 years and have visited the Cow Public House on and off for most of that period both for a drink or food or both.

The staff are excellent and courteous and the regular customers polite and interesting.

I was very sorry to learn about the review application. Whilst I appreciate that steps should be taken - by employing security etc. - to seek to ensure customers do not cause a nuisance or spill out onto the road - I consider that the revocation of the Cow's licence would be disproportionate.

I have never witnessed any trouble at the Cow and have also been asked politely not to stand on the pavement at busy times and it appears to me that the staff take their licencing obligations seriously.

This is a very difficult time for many sections of the community and businesses including the hospitality sector. Increasing numbers of pubs are closing removing a very important local community asset and leading to greater unemployment.

Like many local people I was looking forward to returning to the Cow to meet the staff and local customers again.

The Cow is a great local community asset and I consider that a revocation of its licence would be detrimental to the local area. It would also mean that some valued staff at the Cow would no longer be employed at a time when we should be doing what we can to encourage employment and the return of some joy in these troubled times.

28/02/2021 9:17 PM To whom it may concern,

I strongly support that the Cow continues to be granted a license. I have read the comments in the case and [REDACTED] who would often walk passed The Cow during Lockdown did not see anything that I felt did not adhere to the laws at the time. While operating as a takeaway service, I purchased food on a few occasions and did not see anyone standing around outside. Further, as a [REDACTED] who until recently lived on his own, I have long found the Cow a hub of our community. There are few places as welcoming for locals to pop in for a quiet pint and perhaps a chat, and even fewer left in this part of London. The Cow closing is unthinkable and would tear out another part of our fading local community at a time when we should be doing all we can to support the hospitality industry.

Yours Sincerely,

Ref: Rejection to removing licensing at Cow Pub at 86 Westbourne Park Road (21/00981/LIREVP)

I am writing to show my support for the Cow Pub, its owners, staff and patrons. The Cow is a huge part of the Notting Hill community and an excellent, highly regarded part of our area and has been for many years. Moreover the Cow Pub has been an established part of Notting Hill for many years and adds tremendous value to our immediate community and wider tourism business. The Cow offers excellent food, a sense of community, providing employment for local and great staff.

I have been going to the Cow for over 20 years and i have never so much as experienced "nuisance, crime and disorder" in my entire time of frequenting one of the most loved pubs in Notting Hill.

I am strongly objecting to the the application to revoke The Cows licence. During this time we need to support the hospitality industry, protect jobs and stand together to nurture, protect and support the Cow Pub at 86 Westbourne Park Road.

Yours faithfully,

01/03/2021 4:45 PM Dear Sir/Madam,

This message is in support of The Cow and the continuing of its licence in order to trade. It is a fantastic pub with great food, great staff and great clientele. It's a popular institution of the Notting Hill/Westbourne Grove area and, particularly in this current climate, should be saved at all costs.

*I read the email complaint made against it and I think, given the current paranoia about Covid 19, had that person walked past the pub at any other time they would have viewed the scene as a wonderful, sociable and life affirming. It would be a very short sighted move on the part of the council to revoke this licence. I have been going to The Cow for many years, as I previously lived in the area. I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting there.
Best regards.*

Furthermore, I have never encountered anything other than a friendly, hospitable and considerate atmosphere at the pub.

02/03/2021 1:51 PM To who it may concern, I object to the review of the licence of The Cow.

I have known and frequented The Cow regularly since 2010. I have been visiting it on average three times every month despite [REDACTED]. After having to move out of my house after 11 years it was clear to me to move as closely as possible to The Cow, and I finally moved into [REDACTED]

The Cow has always connected people from all backgrounds, ages and types and has been a true asset to the community. It combines original pub culture that is getting increasingly rare in gentrified areas with top-notch food. Losing The Cow would be a huge disappointment to me personally and a severe loss to the entire Notting Hill/Bayswater area.

I have always experienced the staff at The Cow to be courteous and abide by all rules. Be that closing times or to keep any noise down when revellers sit outside.

During the special circumstances of COVID-19 and the restrictions I have been observing the staff going over and beyond enforcing the rules and making sure everyone is staying safe. In many dozens of visits throughout the last few years, I have not once encountered any disorder, violence, crime or public nuisance/noise. This includes the period during which pubs were opened alas with restrictions.

I urge you to not take this much-loved gem away from locals and visitors alike. I for one would lose my main reason which I moved into the Westminster parts of Notting Hill for and I would surely move out of Westminster back into RBKC during my next move which will involve buying a property.

The cow has been around my whole life and has been a jolly meeting place for my family and friends for as long as they remember. A place of nothing but cheer and great food with friendly staff and creative decoration. The Cow is one of the last remaining Gems of Notting Hill, and without it, Notting Hill would have fallen to gentrification. The Cow is like no other in the neighborhood, it is unique, 80% regulars ( something almost impossible to achieve in this day and age) and consistent. Consistent being always incredible dishes at the same 10/10 standard with inventive and exiting specials everyday created by the loving and invested chefs and owner at the Cow. It is this that attracted the assortment of regulars, hard working and creative, who come here for their after work drink and catch up with friends from the day the doors opened and even the bar men who have been there the whole 25 years. To a lot of people The Cow is a huge part of their life and gives them a sense of belonging in this ever changing community. It is deep rooted at everything great about Notting Hill and the community cannot be parted with it. The Cow has never ever been a place of crime and disorder but one of happiness and joy. Me and my family have never felt anything but safe in the doors of the cow. Please keep our community whole and save The Cow.

01/03/2021 11:47 AM Dear Sir or Madame

[REDACTED] for more than 20 years and have been a patron of the Cow over this time. For years [REDACTED]

The Cow is a well run pub offering fine dining upstairs and a more casual and friendly environment at the entrance level. The place is well run, staff are mindful of the safety of patrons and passers by, and the food is delicious.

The Cow is a part of the fabric of the neighbourhood. It would be a tragic loss if for any reason the business was encumbered by any new restrictions or if its license were constrained. It is a great place and it must stay as it is.

I read with interest the email complaint of [REDACTED]. I too have come upon areas that were too crowded to pass in the difficult months of the Pandemic. I have walked in the street, crossed the street, turned back. It is inconvenient, but it is what we must all do for our health in a dynamic city like London. I have walked in the street to avoid the overcrowded pavement to safely pass the Post Office, a baker, a florist and a pharmacy. Not once did I think it would help the situation to ask that these establishments be closed. While I am sympathetic to [REDACTED] having experienced this issue myself, [REDACTED] seems to me to be rather self centered and perhaps a bit self righteous. We are all doing our best, the burdens and challenges on the hospitality sector are as great as they have ever been, and it would be nice to return to our favourite pubs when it is safe again. I respectfully ask the licensing board allow the Cow to remain just as it is: one of London's great pubs for dining, gathering with old friends, and meeting new ones.

With kind regards,

[REDACTED] and have used the Cow pub and dining room regularly since it opened over 20 years ago, meeting friends and neighbours there. The pub is a true community asset and some of the main staff have worked there for over 20 years. It is a unique free-house which truly serves the community and should be preserved. I have never experienced any disturbance from the pub or the customers and [REDACTED]. 01/03/2021 9:30 AM Mrs Hicks,

I am hereby voicing my concern over the proposed review of the Premises Licence held by The Cow at 89 Westbourne Park Road.

[REDACTED] I have frequented the Cow for many years now. The Cow brings a significant amount of character to a part of London which is becoming increasingly gentrified, with its local roots being consistently eroded.

I am strongly in favour of the Cow being allowed to continue to operate with its current license. I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the Cow, which I have done more than once a week for the past ten years or so.

This COVID-19 period has been taxing on the hospitality industry, with little to no support from the government or local council. The constant changing of the rules, and lack of clear guidance are more to blame for issues than the venues who have been incredibly hard hit.

Sincerely,

07/03/2021 9:01 PM To Whom it may concern,

I'd like to express my support for The Cow to remain open based on the following reasonings:

[REDACTED] from The Cow for the past 6 years and therefore have visited many times with friends, family and neighbours.

In my experience The Cow is ultimately a warm, inviting and safe environment within the community in which to meet and socialise over dinner and /or drinks with family and friends. I can't remember an individual experience or time when I have been at The Cow and witnessed or experienced something untoward or unpleasant. And in saying that I feel it relevant to note that if other people have had such an experience, then as much as that isn't acceptable for them, it shouldn't be one or two occasions that override so many other positive ones. It is not a common occurrence from my experience; and I frequent The Cow often enough to believe that I therefore have a valid opinion to state that it is not a dangerous or negative establishment, I am here to state that I strongly believe it is in fact the opposite.

Yours Sincerely,

At no point over my 20 years of frequenting this pub have I ever felt threatened or have viewed the customers as being unruly or with criminal intent.*

The Cow should be celebrated, not vilified. The management and staff are all courteous, efficient and go out of their way to be helpful. I have lived in Somerset for the last five years now and one of the places I make sure to visit on my trips to London is The Cow for it's warm welcome and it is still one of the most relaxed places I can catch up with friends.

As a public house, it does nothing but serve the people who go there.

The most welcoming and warm atmosphere, no one is made to feel out of place. It is a true bastion of the community, which in todays commercial world is very rare...

The place and the people are full of life and character giving its own unique charisma every time you pass through the doors.

Since I have been going there I have built many relationships, some great friends, as well as a hub of creative people who have helped my own business flourish.

Let alone the quality of product and service that is on offer. The food and drink is ALWAYS from the best sources and cooked/served with love and attention. Something we should champion in this modern time of 'fast food' culture...

This place is nothing short of magical, a gem of our time, it has grown through its people. Something we should cherish not restrict at the difficult time!

As I said earlier, I have spent a lot of time at the Cow and also lived very close by for a couple of years and never once have I experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues. In fact, the opposite is true that it is a safe and welcoming place in the local community.

I am writing to you today to voice my opinion regarding the threat to The Cow pub's licence and to beg you to reconsider your position.

As a long-standing patron of The Cow, I can vouch for the fact that not only have I never witnessed any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues when in attendance, but rather the opposite. The Cow is a safe haven, one of the true last bastions of what can be said to remain of a local community. It is an establishment wherein locals of all ages and backgrounds can meet, everyone knowing each other's names, customers and bar staff alike. It is an integral part of the neighbourhood itself, without which the entire area would be drastically impoverished. The service it provides is far-reaching and vital, and I fear the true implications of its absence would only be visible in the after-effects of its closure, the many regulars who are elderly or who live alone and have relied on the existence of The Cow for regular companionship suddenly finding themselves lonely and bereft.

The closure of The Cow would not be a loss for Westminster alone, but for London as a whole, our pubs disappearing at an alarming and saddening rate, often replaced by soulless luxury apartments or estate agents that fail to offer the local community anything of what was previously there.

In the interest of the preservation of our beautiful London pubs, I beg you again to reconsider the creation of another black hole in the landscape of our home, and prevent the tragic consequences of such an action.

05/03/2021 8:31 AM Dear Sir/Madam

[REDACTED] and regular patron of The Cow for over 20-years I am astounded the licence of such a quality and longstanding asset to the area has been brought in to question. The local area has changed immeasurably but The Cow has remained a quality hospitality asset to the area and always attracted a diverse customer base underscoring its importance to the community. There are very limited examples across London of quality pubs/restaurants that have such a consistent track record and they should be applauded and supported by local authorities and customers. Every event Carnival, St Patricks etc is always given such effort. There is always 'life' there surely of critical importance to communities as we emerge out of the current crisis. Without such assets now affluent areas of London will further become vacuous with no diversity or amenity ie solely high value residential.

I have never experienced crime of disorder, public nuisance or safety issues at The Cow. To the contrary always knowing that there were people and staff in what is a dark area when walking home provides safety.

I trust the focus can be the benefits of such community assets as the world changes not the vilification of them.

a simple concept , brilliantly executed

a wonderful neighbourhood pub, with brilliant simple fresh food

a place where locals can go for a pint, mingle peacefully with celebrities and tourists can get the a piece of London they have always dreamed off

I have been going to the Cow since it opened, as has my father

we have had so many happy evenings there, whether just enjoying a pint or the wonderful fish soup

I have never had any trouble there, nor did it even cross my mind in which other city in the world do you think David Beckham can pop in and have a pint with his mother, without anyone bothering anyone

The Cow had that magic one the world's coolest pubs, where celebrities and the local dustman alike were made to film welcome that was the secret to its success. A genuine local with universal values

There was diligent monitoring of entry to the premises and staff were diligent in taking details for the purposes of test and trace.*

In addition to my experience above, I would like to make the following comments in support of The Cow and its contribution. I believe The Cow to be a unique venue. It is a venue that fosters a rare sense of community in a highly urbanised city. The Cow brings together individuals from various walks of life in a sociable and inclusive environment. Petro and the team are welcoming and do their utmost to maintain a safe and enjoyable environment. I have never experienced any anti-social behaviour across years of visiting The Cow. The well-run Cow is an important part of west london cultural infrastructure. Its a popular pub that presents music sometimes. Of course it makes noise! But it is profoundly social, not anti-social and neither does it neglect its duty to prevent public nuisance.

The nuisance lies in unreasonable complaint and antagonism from those who should have thought before they bought.

10/03/2021 6:57 PM First of all, to be clear, this comment is in strong support of the Cow maintaining its licence in all regards. I have also reviewed the various reports of isolated incidents and complaints and can categorically say that these do not point to some systemic mismanagement of the licence holder. Furthermore, some of these complaints (e.g. loud music and drinking until 1-2AM) are simply untrue. I have been a frequent customer at the Cow for more than 15 years and the staff has always handled closing hours, crowding and disturbances with great efficiency and professionalism. Surely, the unusual and extremely challenging circumstances around Covid restrictions are a reasonable explanation for some of the recent and isolated incidences at the Cow. Yes, there have been days with bigger than usual crowds but how is a business to manage these sudden influxes of customers as Covid restrictions are sometimes relaxed and sometimes tightened? I have observed a clever and ingenious adoption of all rules at the Cow during 2020 (e.g. reservation system, takeaway menu, drinks in plastic containers etc.) that should deserve praise from the Council rather than a licence review. For local residents the Cow is a valuable asset that showcases the diversity and character of the local community. The consistency in which the pub has been managed, and the quality of the food and beverage offering, is unparalleled not just in the neighbourhood but in London. It's a place where locals, visitors as well as their families can get together in a vibrant and safe environment. I would strongly encourage WCC to support the Cow in continuing to delight the community in these dark times. The Cow needs to stay.

It's a friendly, vibrant, and smart-casual establishment with a delicious food menu and an abundance of loyal customers. There's nothing negative whatsoever about this venue, and it's beyond me why the local authority wouldn't want to support this establishment in continuing its presence in the community. Dear Westminster City Council,

My writing represents the licensing review for reference number: 21/00981/LIREVP

[REDACTED] in the year 2019, with admiration for all things British and visiting pubs are one of many heritage cultural activities embraced when moving to this beautiful country. Living in England, seeking a pub you love is a requirement and everybody finds their place (and drink).

I met a wonderful gentleman who introduced me to The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Rooms, and the moment I walked through the doors and drew the red curtains, my eyes were sparkling, and I was transported to another world; a space radiating friendliness, warmth, history, culture, art and family. I fell in love with The Cow and found it difficult to comprehend how this charming gastro pub was non-existent in my former life and I was reminded that it's never too late to discover something, even if it's been around for 26 years.

Communication about The Cow's licence review was heart-breaking to hear, the prospect of an establishment I discovered in the last two years ceasing trade. Here I am, writing to you, for you to understand how important The Cow is to me, for others before me and for those after me. You must understand, The Cow has a presence in the history of British pub culture; it was the fourth gastropub formed in 1995 when pubs began evolving, developing a new breed of pubs, gastropubs. The Cow has successfully traded over the past 26 years. What can be dramatic enough to forbid a historical institution to end its time when this establishment provides more good than bad? We need to think about the bigger picture.

After a challenging year and news of business closures especially felt in the hospitality sector, it is time to question where our heart and soul lies in re-building society. It isn't threats of reviewing licences from old situations, instead it should be an open conversation to understand circumstances better, taking all matters into consideration and finding solutions in moving forward together, not abrupt endings from one side.

For all the times I've visited The Cow, I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues; these are words which do not affiliate with The Cow. There has only ever been laughter, safety, history, art, inspirational conversations, delicious food and most importantly Irish Whiskey.

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter in support of The Cow.

It seems that there is only one incident reported here and I would be very surprised if any pub in London did not noticed any flouting of licensing laws

*I am very sad that such an institution that has added colour and character to Notting Hills unique patina is

To Whom it May Concern,

[REDACTED]. I have lived in many areas of London and also abroad but have been going to The Cow since it first opened. It has come to my attention that Westminster Council is reviewing the license for The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

This establishment is considered by myself and a great many others as a haven of culture and civility. Warmly welcoming and egalitarian. Beloved by locals and visitors. Over the years I have mingled with stars of stage and screen, artists bankers, doctors, filmmakers, musicians, estate agents, poets, professional athletes and myriad others. Famous people feel as relaxed and at ease as the locals. This pub has an international reputation for its excellent food and atmosphere.

Wonderful long term staff, so professional and friendly.

The Cow is to me a safe space. I have never even felt a bad vibe in there let alone any sort of nuisance or danger or criminal activity. In fact once I felt that I was being followed on a dark winters night and hurried in there for safety. As a woman I feel safe and at ease to go and have a meal or a drink by myself and read my book and know I won't be bothered.

Please do not jeopardise this important part of our community.

To whom it may concern,

In light of some recent news that Westminster City Council have issued a review of The Cow's Premises Licence (The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London, W2 5QH), I write with unequivocal, emphatic support of this wonderful local establishment.

The Cow's our local, and many in our wide circumference have been going since the late 90s: we consider the pub to be an important asset to the community (and actually to London).

It's considered glowingly amongst the food critic cognoscenti in the UK. Allegra McEvedy, for example - broadcaster and one of the founders of the healthy fast-food restaurant group Leon - got an early start from (and was head chef at) the Cow, and many others have similarly gone on from there to triumph in much-admired, noteworthy establishments.

The Cow's actually quite unique amongst London pubs: nobody really likes the phrase "gastropub", but it was one of the first pre-eminent pubs of this kind. It's sustained this consistent quality with a first-rate formula of a seafood-based pub menu in the ground floor area with a more gourmet, culinary approach in the first floor formal dining area.

...With an elegantly eclectic, vintage Irish aesthetic, the pub also serves what many consider to be one the best pints of Guinness in London.

There's a reason that this cozy pub is highly popular with locals, some (discreet & discerning) celebrities from the area and food lovers from across London: it's an unpretentious, old-fashioned establishment where nobody will bother you, with a cheerful, creative, occasionally intellectual, fun and thoughtful clientele.

There's few pubs in West London that some might think twice before entering: The Cow isn't one of them. It's an open-handed, well-beloved Notting Hill / Westminster institution, and an integral part of the local culture.

I would highly recommend this establishment; furthermore I can unreservedly guarantee that I've never encountered any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting: on the contrary, with the warm local community that uses the pub, customers invariably feel safe there.

Locals (and visiting friends from the shires) will invariably meet up at The Cow and instantly feel at home. It's a unique and exemplary establishment that stands for community, good food and drink and originality; moreover this authenticity is actually brought into sharp relief compared to other more formulaic chains or arguably less-interesting pubs in West London.

It's a gem of a pub, and it deserves to shine.

Your faithfully,

Re ; The Cow Public House , 89 Westbourne Park Road , London W2 5QH.

[REDACTED]

I have also been a patron of the The Cow for nearly 25 years (not long after it opened in its' current guise). I believe there is currently a review being undertaken on the Cow's liquor license on the grounds of Nuisance and Public disorder.
I would to take this opportunity to voice my support of The Cow and it's Managers , Petra Gashi and Luti Skerja , who have been running the Bar for most of the 25 years that I have been going there and who have been exemplary in maintaining the good reputation and governance that the Pub enjoys within the neighborhood. The neighborhood has changed dramatically in the past 20 years and for those of us who have lived in the area during this time , not all of these changes have been good or even helpful.
The recent gentrification of Notting Hill has driven a lot of people out of the area , priced out normal folk coming into it and has, in their place , brought a combination of absentee residents and uber wealthy people who in general , stick to themselves and whom would not be , it's fair to say , part of the community.
Whilst all of this transformation was going on , The Cow remained true to it's local clientele.
It didn't sell out like other local hostiliarys had done , it continued to be a hub for the community , celebrating all of the relevant 'National' days for it's diaspora of locals when their time of the year came around.
The average age in that bar is 50 I would say (I am late 50's myself ) and most people know each other at least on a nodding acquaintance level.

I have never once seen a fight develop in the bar in all my time frequenting the bar. On times that I saw matters potentially going in that direction , the swift actions of the pre-mentioned management team , always abated the situation and that is a skill and one that is most appreciated by the bars patrons.

Having managed large Night clubs in 3 countries over the past 30 years would enable me to recognize such a skill.

I am also aware of an incident that occurred outside the bar over the summer where there was an altercation on the street.

I came upon the end of that matter while I was driving to work in Camden.

I observed the crowd of people who were involved, they were all in their 20's from what I could see. I had never ever seen any one of them before, not even in the area , certainly not in the Cow , although I was not in the bar on that day myself.

They also appeared to be drinking their own liquor and I had observed plastic bags with spirits and mixers drinks in them from what I could see , near to where they were standing.

I feel it is necessary to point this out , perhaps I should have said this before to someone.

I am not being over dramatic here , but what with the 'gentrification' point I made earlier , and despite the fact that I do love where I live , if there was no Cow , the last bastion of normality in the area for like minded people to meet , I would sell up and move elsewhere.

Please feel free to contact me if there is any clarification you require on any of the above.

Sincerely yours, [REDACTED]

I'm writing in regards to the recent review of the license of the Cow pub imploring you not to take away a central part of mine and so many people lives . I have no doubt their have been over sites, rules and boundaries pushed but this cannot reflect the hugely

Postive impact it has on the Nottinghill community as meeting point, celebration, but most of all a side of home . It was the first person I went to when my son was not. A year ago to meet my friends. Where I have raked through death, life, hard facts and tough decisions .

It is rare to have a group of staff that have worked for such a long time at one place - surly this shows you the strength of character of the place . Pubs don't have barman for 20 years - the cow has two . More over it is a draw it is a world famous bit of originality for Notting hill . Sensational food with real people abs character .

Please don't take away the last bit of home we have left in an increasingly segregated London .

Dear sirs,

[REDACTED]. I have been going to the Cow since 2017 and it is always the pub I take visitors to (family & friends) when they're down as it's got such a fantastic menu and character about the place. The upstairs dining room is really special and the whole place is quite a rarity.

The excellent food (really is superb) in such an unpretentious setting is quite a marvel. I've personally not encountered any nuisance or rowdy behaviour when I've been there. It's got a buzz about it, but I've always seen it as a bit of an old man's type pub, which is why it's quite safe to take people like family to as nothing really wild is going to happen, it's not going to be loud or too drunken and if any thing the upstairs dining room is pretty classy.

The reason I'm writing to you is because it's such a unique venue, with such fantastic history, aura and character it would be a genuine loss to the area to lose a pub like that. There's so many bland pubs these days, to find a gem like this is worth keeping hold of. And the food really is something else!! I can't bear the thought of not eating there again.

I am aware the licence is up for review, and I hope this statement is considered in your decision.

I have lived in Notting Hill for 12 years now, and I was deeply saddened by the news that the council was reviewing The Cow's Premise licence. [REDACTED], and have never witnessed public nuisance/crime/disorder related to the Cow.

I have been taking my family there for Sunday roasts for many years, and been a patron for even more. Why? Because the food is the best of any pub in Notting Hill, and it's one of the few pubs not overrun by drunken tourists; a true "locals" pub if you will.

The Cow is an institution - to close it down would be to destroy some of the very fabric of what makes Notting Hill so desirable.

On a personal note, I find the fact this review is even taking place, after such a hard year, is actually quite distasteful. Now is a time for the community to come together and unite, not destroy livelihoods.

I implore you to keep The Cow open. Its the first pub I will be going to when this lockdown ends.

I was surprised and saddened to learn of a complaint against The Cow.

The Cow simply a great community pub. Beautiful food, a homely feel and good friends.

I've never observed any bad behaviour. It is a place we regularly go with our friends and their young children. An indication of the trust we have in this institution of London.

It would be a truly shameful act to close The Cow.

Dear Sirs,

I understand that you have issued a review of The Cow's premises licence. I am writing, as a patron of The Cow and member of the local community, to let you know of the great import The Cow has in the local area - as a place of convivial conversation, great food and drink, enjoyed by local residents. The Cow was one of the first bars I visited when I moved to the area many years ago and has remained a true favourite among my friends. It is one of the few places left in London that has a genuine group of 'locals' for which it caters and as a result is much loved by us all. One of the things at the top of many of our lists when we return from lockdown, is the hope that we can enjoy a meal together at this establishment.

I would kindly request that you bear this in mind when conducting your review. I would also state, for the avoidance of doubt, that I have never in any of my visits to The Cow, been witness to any threat to public safety, any sign of nuisance or crime.

Kind regards,

• [REDACTED]

OBJECTION

The above referenced issue has been brought to my notice recently, and I would like to file my objection to these wholly outrageous reasons behind this review.

My name is [REDACTED]. I know The Cow very well, I frequent this pub at least 3 times a week, for either lunch or dinner. Sometimes, both. I also visit The Cow to simply meet up with friends and enjoy some refreshing drinks and civilised conversation in an amazingly well run establishment. It is a local pub, serving the needs of the local people. Some of whom, like myself have been visiting this pub for decades. They serve some incredibly well prepared, delicious foods and drinks. During my many years of frequenting this establishment, I have NEVER ever seen or heard any rowdy, abusive, violent, aggressive or any anti social behaviour from any of the clientele. The people who frequent this establishment do so, for meeting friends or simply to relax in some peace and quiet surroundings. They go there for a quiet drink, good food and to be in good company. That's it.

The Cow does not let in, or serve persons who are drunk or disorderly. The management of The Cow has a simple policy which has been the reason behind their success: DO NOT TOLERATE any antisocial behaviour or, and let in/serve people of dubious character. The Cow serves good food and good refreshing beverages in a nice, clean civilised environment, conducive for good conversations touching on all subjects, ranging from the arts to sport and beyond. It is a place where we all feel safe and free to enjoy some light entertainment, and good laughter. Never offensive to anyone.

It is a very well managed family bar and restaurant. It is run daily by a team of very experienced and highly professional people, very polite and courteous members of staff who have been running this pub for at least the last 20 years!! I repeat; I HAVE NEVER EVER SEEN OR HEARD ANYONE BEHAVING IN A ROWDY, AGGRESSIVE, DISORDERLY AND VIOLENT BEHAVIOUR AT THE COW. I DO NOT RECOGNISE ANY OF THESE POINTS OR REASONS OF THE OBJECTORS. Leaves one wondering, who and what is really behind this, and why would anyone want to object to the Renewal of the Premises Licence. What is the true reason behind this? Makes no sense to me, and probably to every regular of the Cow.

I understand this review has been brought about by some people, either in the neighbourhood or from afar. They have complained that the regulars at The Cow are rowdy, violent and a public nuisance. This is wholly UNTRUE and FALSE. They have other reasons to make these unfounded, groundless accusations of bad behaviour from the regulars of The COW. I can only conclude that whoever these people are, they have never ever been to The Cow...or perhaps, they were denied service and barred from the pub. I can't think of any reason behind these outrageous claims of bad behaviour and violence. All rubbish, imagined and fabricated. Not a grain of truth in them.

Hope I have given you a true picture here of this exceptionally wonderful gem of a world famous establishment, and what it stands for; Family friendly, serving most delicious food, good beverages in nice clean surroundings and served by very polite helpful staff. What's there to not like? I see nothing wrong with it. All good.

I hope my testimonial here will help you in coming to the right decision. To grant the Licence.

Thank you, [REDACTED]

The Cow pub had been at the heart of this community for years. When my dad ([REDACTED]), [REDACTED], had a stroke which affected his speech and communication, the people at The Cow were so kind to him. It became a place he could go and feel comfortable going despite finding it very difficult to speak. It became a base for him to rebuild his confidence and has been key to his recovery.

It has survived many changes to the local community, where sky high rents have pushed out other businesses. It's important to treasure these local entities - otherwise the area will be hollowed out, devoid of any history and culture.

I have never seen anything illegal, unsafe or disorderly when I have been at The Cow. I urge you to reconsider.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to express my concern that you are considering withdrawing or suspending the licence at The Cow PH on Westbourne Park Rd.

There has been some publicity surrounding this and I am sure that despite the occasional comment you will receive complaining about this pub, the vast majority will be sent to express support of the staff, managers and owner, who together provide an irreplaceable service to the community.

I have been a customer for many, many years (although sadly much less in the past twelve months as a result of restrictions on us as patrons and of course on licences premises in general.) I have never witnessed criminal disorder, public nuisance or safety issues and have nothing but admiration for the amazing job they do for us as customers.

There are so few places of real character left these days. So few places that care as much about the quality of the offering they provide, and so few places that make their customers' needs the prime motive for their work. Any suspension or withdrawal of their licence would be a terrible thing, and I hope it will not happen.

Sincerely yours, [REDACTED]

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to object to the withdrawal of the license at the Cow Pub & Dining Rooms...

I worked for the landlord, Tom Conran for a number of years and oversaw the management of the establishment which is run to the highest of standards. Please reconsider this London landmark's license as I do hope it can trade for the next 25 years. It provides employment to many, most of whom have been loyal to Tom for many many years. The customers are law abiding citizens enjoying good food and wine.

To whom it may concern,

I have frequented The Cow since it opened and enjoyed socialising with a varied mix of patrons. Having spent more time than most at The Cow over the past 25 years, I can say that I have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety hazard whatsoever. Which is probably quite rare for some London pubs... this point alone makes The Cow a unique and special place, clearly loved and respected by its patrons, that collectively ensure a convivial atmosphere.

The staff are professional, animated, friendly and welcoming, its a home-from-home for many.

The pub serves very high standard food & beverage, which to some extent defines what a good pub is, which is certainly a credit to the Portobello, Westbourne, Paddington area.

The Cow is a valuable social resource for the area, in every sense. I've had meetings, done work and used the Wi-fi, met clients, made friends and celebrated birthdays there. It is a place where people meet from all walks of life, which is particularly important for a community as culturally diverse as West London. It also serves all London residents, visitors and tourists as an authentic destination British pub.

It's rapidly becoming an institution if it isn't already, probably eligible for a preservation order or grant of some sort, amid mass pub closures across Britain. Please don't let it become another Tesco Metro, as have so many.

It would be an absolute travesty if you were to revoke their license.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I'm alarmed to hear that there is currently a review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

Good god, why would you do such a thing? What cretinous arse has complained? Someone unaccustomed to The Cow's perfectly poured Guinness, clearly.

I gather the licence review has been sought on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder. I have never witnessed, nor heard about anecdotally, of any issues of this nature inside or outside of these premises.

Pubs and restaurants like The Cow across the nation are facing an unprecedented battle for survival right now, and it's extremely important that the good ones - of which The Cow must surely be counted - make it out of the pandemic unscathed. When the virus is no longer a threat, we need places where communities (and visitors) can return. The Cow had an incredible buzz before, one of the friendliest and most characterful inns in the capital, and the hope of that continuing is what's getting us through the day. That and The Cow's ambrosial pairing of stout and oysters. So please don't take it away.

Oh, and do stop knocking down lovely terraces and historic mansion blocks to make way for yet more shallow-spirited yuppie flats.

Yours faithfully, [REDACTED]

Having been there dozens of times I can confirm I've never experienced crime, disorder or safety issues.

I was nearby last year when there was an incident with someone entering the Cow last year threatening violence but would strongly call out the general responsiveness of the staff and the importance of working with entities like the Cow instead of ending their license if there have been any complaints around noise from the public.

Its loss would have a devastating impact on the local community and candidly diminish interest in people like me choosing to continue [REDACTED] where there are relatively few places nearby.

I'm available should you have any questions or I can clarify any further.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I wanted to answer a few questions in relation to The Cow pub and ref # 21/00981/LIREVP.

My name is [REDACTED]. I have moved to London knowing no-one and the Cow has given me a home, support network and many friends within the community. I am a New York Qualified Attorney. I now work in Software Sales and [REDACTED]

Why do you believe The Cow is an asset?

My name is [REDACTED]. I moved to London and did not know a single person. The Cow is the glue that holds the neighborhood in W2 together. It is a melting pot of the community. Petro Gashi, Luti and his team make everyone incredibly welcome when you walk in the bar. They have become family and the Cow makes me feel like I am still in [REDACTED], rather than London. It does not matter if I stop by for a coffee, lunch, dinner or some drinks you are greeted with a warm smile and a big hug by staff and fellow patrons. The Cow has created a community within the City of London and Westminster and Notting Hill needs more places like the Cow. One of the many acts of kindness that have occurred from the Cow, was when I moved here Petro actively got me engaged with the other locals. I'm Irish from Belfast and previously lived in NY and LA. Petro also introduced me to my current landlord and is part of the glue that holds the community together. Petro and his team also make a huge effort any time my parents come, visitors come into the bar/restaurant or a local stops by. I was really disappointed by the standard of hospitality in London until I started visiting the Cow and had experienced a meal in the company of Petro and his team. The atmosphere at the Cow is truly uniquely people act as neighbors and support each other. It is a family and local community atmosphere in a huge City.

Therefore, the COW IS THE GLUE THAT HOLDS OUR COMMUNITY TOGETHER. I've never seen any trouble or bad behaviour in the Cow and I live right behind the pub and walk past the pub frequently. Therefore, I am mystified why they are having any issues with the license.

What does The Cow mean to you?

As explained above, the cow is the glue that holds our local community together. I've met friends that I call my family here. It is my local support network and a place where people new to the neighborhood or that have lived in the neighborhood all their lives come to support each other, look after each other and enjoy each other's company. I have also experienced the greatest welcome and support here when I moved to London, needed to find a place to live and I was welcomed with open arms into the community. The Cow means everything to me and I am mystified why they are experiencing any difficulties with their licensing.

What are all the great things about The Cow does Westminster Council need to hear from you?

As explained above, The Cow is the vocal point of the community. It brings people together, fosters friendships, community spirit and everything that is good in Westminster. We are lucky to have a place that acts as the glue of our society and that fosters community spirit, belonging and love and respect for neighbors. We need more places like the Cow in the City of London.

During Covid, I was really impressed with the safety standards in place. The staff are always clean, attentive and caring for all patrons. People remained seated and there was greater respect for patrons here than in other restaurants in London because you know other patrons and you feel like you have a duty to behave responsibly and protect your neighbor.

Importantly, can you confirm that you have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow?

To whom it may concern,

The Cow is a fabulous restaurant, with great staff, food, wine & a long standing community of loyal customers. I have dined there many times over the years, with much love for the ethos behind what the place stands for - good, British, quality food, drink alongside a great atmosphere. It is always a pleasant experience, day or night & I have never experienced any signs of crime, noise problems or disruption to the local neighbours. In fact, for some years, I lived on the adjacent road, Talbot Road, myself and the neighbours loved being able to walk to The Cow. It was never felt to be a hindrance or disturbance to us - a place of sanctuary and joy!

I request that Westminster council review their current decision to refuse a licence to this establishment. It has such history and a place in the hearts of its customers, that it would be a great loss to us. In an already struggling industry, I would expect local councils & government to support local businesses, rather than shut them down.

Good morning,

I write with respect to the review issued by Westminster City Council regarding The Cow's Premise Licence (reference: 21/00981/LIREVP).

The Cow is an asset to the community: it manages to combine good service & quality food, whilst also not being pretentious. It's important that spaces feel open and accessible to people from all walks of life - [REDACTED]; we both feel equally welcome in the establishment and enjoy the offering. The prospect of The Cow being shut down, and inevitably being replaced by more flats and/or some form of chain, is a bleak one and I do think would damage the neighbourhood. Perhaps the key question is whether Westminster City Council wants to create neighbourhoods devoid of all character and community spirit, or not. I would hope that it's the latter.

I can confirm that I have not experience crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the premises.

Do not hesitate to contact me should you have any queries.

Kind regards,

I am writing in support of The Cow's campaign to have the application of revocation of its licence rejected.

In my opinion this application smacks of opportunism on the part of neighbours or developers. My experience is of another favourite pub where the surrounding neighbours had bought their houses cheap, because near a pub, and then tried to get it closed down - they failed. This is a ploy similar to outsiders buying a village house and then trying to get the ringing of church bells banned. Until the pandemic property prices in the area had hugely increased, but a clear pattern emerged of properties being bought for investment and either left empty or bought by persons with no experience of or interest in the amenities of their surrounding area. Many restaurants have had to close. Don't let it be The Cow!

The Cow is one of those places where a woman can go on her own, enjoy a great meal quietly and without any expectation of noise, riot or being bothered. I've been there several times with my goddaughter and her mother, and with other friends. The food has been superb, the beer good. Some drinkers appeared to be regulars, but there was no drunkenness or shouting. We had a very pleasant time.

This area of Westbourne Park Road can be a bit of a desert in the evening and I would hate to see that yet another food and drink venue had had to close. Such an application takes no consideration of the place of a pub in the wider community and communities are what Councils such as Westminster are supposed to be defending. And, when the pandemic is over, we will all need places where we can at last meet friends.

Yours,

[REDACTED]

Good morning,

I was both surprised and sad to hear the news that Westminster council is reviewing the Cow's premises licence.

Firstly, it is important to highlight that as a regular customer and someone who lives [REDACTED], I have never witnessed any crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues.

Second, the Cow plays a very important role in the local community and in the local hospitality scene. Ensuring a diverse mix of venues should be a high priority for Westminster council if it wants its borough to continue to be a desirable place to live. What's more, the Cow is unique in its ability to bring diverse types of people together in a friendly setting.

I very much hope the council does not take this matter any further [REDACTED] it is a go-to venue for me, both with friends and business contacts whom I often insist on bringing 'out west' from the City and West End for informal meetings. Colleagues from other countries whom I have brought there have always remarked on the atmosphere, how welcoming and 'local' it is.

It is a fabulous place and not just for catching up with friends: I have met many new people in The Cow as it is the sort of place that allows for that free exchange and interaction with others. Something that is becoming more rare these days (even prior to CV19). While meeting some eccentrics and a lot of diversity, I, nor any of my male or female friends have ever felt ill at ease there; the pub is a welcome and friendly melting pot, unlike some other establishments in the area that cater for the same 'type' of person.

It is a genuine community hub; residents and non-residents alike are grateful to have it.

Many thanks for taking my opinion into account.

Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing in connection with the review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

I have been a regular visitor to The Cow since it opened which I believe is more than 25 years ago and it is my favourite pub in London. The customers are always interesting and friendly, a mixture of local people from the community and devotees from further afield.

In all those years I have never witnessed a single incident of rude or aggressive behaviour. On the contrary, I have often gone there for a quick drink on my own and enjoyed a friendly chat with a total stranger.

The staff they have recruited are equally friendly. They serve excellent food and I use The Cow as a place to eat as well as a place to drink. I particularly recommend the Cow Fish Stew.

It is therefore completely baffling to me that anyone would seriously be reviewing their licence on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder. It is a haven of civility.

Please dismiss this review and allow The Cow to continue to play a valuable, positive part in the social fabric of the local community.

At a time when local pubs are disappearing and being replaced by anonymous large chains where customers are treated as faceless consumers we need to preserve pubs which have a true identity and local clientele.

I humbly ask you to preserve the licence of The Cow.

Kind regards

I work in the fashion industry and there are also many industry people and you will always see people you know from the neighbourhood and those that have moved out often still meet there. I have never seen the clientele behaving badly, it is just like all of the pubs in Notting Hill where occasionally you may have one night were someone over drinks but this happens anywhere in the world. I have not seen drunk or disorderly people there and know people who frequent The Cow are respectful and leave quietly. Also I know it is also on the tourist map an authentic pub in Notting Hill for those who seek out real places and want to avoid tourist traps.

Please can you not shut them down it will be a HUGE loss to the area and so many of the good places will probably have to shut due to long covid closures. We should cherish and keep the pubs that are popular and probably can survive this lockdown going. You should be supporting and not threatening to shut them down. They are also an amazing restaurant with gold standard food.

I look forward to hearing back and everyone I speak to about this is upset but not everyone has time to write to you.

When our 100 person wedding looked uncertain due to the pandemic, I booked the private dining room at The Cow instead.*

*Even now that I live in East London, The Cow is still where I want to go to commiserate sad news, to celebrate good news, and to mark everything in between. In a neighbourhood that has its fair share of community and crime issues, the Cow has always served as a haven of peace and tranquillity, welcoming people from all walks of life to mix freely and happily over a beer. It has been there in its current form pretty much since I first arrived in the neighbourhood, and I would feel a gaping hole if it was no longer there. The pub has managed to remain extremely popular both with a loyal group of local patrons and a stream of visitors from further afield, and it has managed this in an area where such success stories are few and far between. There is always an excellent atmosphere, both inside and on the intimate benches outside, and over a great number of visits over twenty years or more I have never witnessed any crime, disorder or other unpleasantness.

and for many years have used the The Cow Pub and dining rooms.

The establishment is totally an institution which is very good for the area, it is well run it is always kept in pristine condition exceptionally clean with efficient and friendly staff.

It has an established following over the years from the older generation to the younger more professional type who are always polite and friendly, I have myself taken clients and friends to The Cow know for its wonderful food and selection of craft beers.

I have never ever experienced any violence or disorder and I do certainly not connect this business with any crime what so ever.

It would be a crime to take away this 'family' business away from the community many of which use this pub in a family way. The Cow provides a service to the local people and a friendly place where people can eat have a drink and enjoy the comfort of a friendly safe environment.

Please do think carefully it would be very sad for the local community to close The Cow, it would leave a big hole that just would not be replaced.

So many property's are being turned into offices taking away the character of the area so less and less business's like The Cow exist which are really important for the people, this is for the community!!

I'm writing to express my support for the Cow. I've always lived in that part of London - for a long time when it was literally my local. We've recently purchased a new house and as residents it's long been a concern of ours that we're losing the pubs that make the community come together. I understand that The Cow's licence is being reviewed.

The Cow is absolutely one of the best pubs in the area - very friendly, safe for everyone and with great food and lots of regulars. The community absolutely needs to have these places in order for the area to retain its individuality and character. The Cow is so popular precisely because of the commitment and sense of fun of the people who run it - it represents the best of the area in terms of its welcoming, family-friendly cosy vibe along with the excellent food. It would be a huge and damaging loss for the area and it's residents were The Cow to close. I would respectfully ask that you take this into account when undertaking your review.

Many thanks for your time.

I am writing to express my support for The Cow. I live in Notting Hill and The Cow has been one of my most frequently visited pubs. I have never experienced anything unpleasant there. On the contrary, as a young woman, it is one of rare pubs that I actually feel safe. It is a great local pub that we would like to continue visiting after the lockdown.

I am writing a representation in support of The Cow pub. For many years it has been my local and I frequent it with my friends and family often. It has the most wonderful atmosphere and the staff there are absolutely incredible.

The Cow is the heart of the community and it would be an absolute travesty to see it shut down.

Finally, the hospitality industry has seen the most challenging of times recently. Please do not add to the sadness and hardship by closing one of the most wonderful institutions that my friends, family and the community have ever set foot in. We need these places more than ever.

Received: 8 Mar 2021 by
OBJECTION

Firstly, may I start by saying that I'm not one for sending letters about things seemingly as trivial (in the grand scheme of humanity and the planet's plight) as a pub closing but on this occasion I feel compelled.

Not because I'll benefit in any way, but because I have done [REDACTED] and am more likely to see an actual cow over the garden fence than visit W2 anytime soon.

The Cow isn't just any old pub, trust me, I've tried and tested what must be a decent percentage of London's watering holes and frankly, nothing comes close. Sure, the Guinness is good and the food tasty but they're somewhat of a supporting role. The Cow for me has been a place of escape from loneliness, a refuge from the ever changing face and trends of the hospitality industry and somewhere that's offered some sense of stability during life's turbulent times.

If I walked in tomorrow nobody would recognise me, but I would them, and I'd be greeted and served as if I was one of the more gregarious regulars. I've never known a pub, bar or restaurant to have bar tending stalwarts who work as if it was an actual family staffed business. Rather than try and climb some corporate ladder many of them have chosen their careers and have stuck at it. Which I can only image means that the management are sound leaders because we all know, hospitality doesn't pay well.

If I walked in tomorrow the huge photograph collage on the wall by the toilets would remind me that I'd been visiting The Cow for decades, not years and that perhaps if I'd made different life choices I'd have my photo alongside those of people enjoying life and building something great together.

If I walked in tomorrow I'd feel 100% safe. I've never heard so much as a cross word, let alone a shoulder barge. Which seem par for the course at most drinking establishments. And because I'd most likely be turning up on my own and the venue being on the small side of cosy, I'd have to ask a stranger to share a corner of their table. Sure, this is all the rage these days but The Cow has always felt like a communal space. Nobody owns an area for an allotted time, they all seem to appreciate that it's a privilege to be able to enjoy a relic of the past - a public house.

If I walked out tomorrow I would expect to feel safe also. In the immediate vicinity at least, as someone would look out for other patrons. And one of the reasons I would choose The Cow over watering holes much closer to where I was living at the time was because I'd never seen any trouble, so I find it a little odd that there seem to have been enough complaints to warrant investigation into reissuing a licence. Sure, who wants to live near a pub? I know I don't. But the flat's opposite were built decades after The Cow had been trading. And those new to the area might have an expectation for silent serenity by virtue of paying absence property prices but it's a city. But a city needs community boltholes like a pub or corner shop. Fancy cafés and here-one-minute-gone-the-next eateries are no substitute. When The Cow opened the area was rough. Up and coming in estate agent speak. Yellow 'serious incident' boards were a frequent sight on the pavements and tall tales of gangsters, yards and crime were part of daily conversation for locals. The Cow was and still is a safe haven from urban misdemeanour.

I can't walk into The Cow tomorrow but having written just a few of my thoughts down it's occurred to me quite how much I miss London. Not 99% of it that's for sure. The Cow would be near the top of my list of places to visit when I return for a weekend and makes up a good portion of that vital 1%. The pub in my village closed down and was turned into a home for a just one family and as a result there's no community here and I've no idea who my new neighbours are or what's going on outside of the monthly parish newsletter. Truth is, for many reasons, here doesn't feel like home and I'd consider driving four hours to blow the froth off a couple in the corner of The Cow for a reminder of what familiarity and a welcoming environment can do for the soul.

So please consider the individuals and wider community when making your decision, not just a few negative voices. And please think about those who have toiled to give this place such a unique feel.

I do hope that on May 16th I can at least think about walking into The Cow tomorrow.

I am writing to protest most strongly about the suggestion that THE COW should not have its licence renewed. What evidence is there that this pub creates a disturbance? The Westbourne opposite is just as successful and has a large terrace outside which in good weather often spills out onto the pavement. Isn't this what pubs are known for - lively, PEACEFUL social gathering?

I have not experienced any sense of threat or criminal activity when in or around the Cow. There are some high end shops around the corner and they are not disturbed. The suggestion that there is a threat to public safety or there has been a nuisance to the public in any way is complete news to many friends in the area.

Where exactly does this complaint emanate from?

At any rate, we are all looking forward to the re-opening of this establishment along with other amenities at this end of Chepstow Road and Westbourne Park Road. The retail and restaurants in this location need all the help they can get from Westminster Council...

I am writing this letter to express how much the cow means to me, especially now that it has been taken away from our neighborhood because of the pandemic. I can't even imagine how much they must have suffered, and if anyone deserves to reopen after this lockdown, it is the cow. The reasons being first of all is that they are an institution. Ludi the bartender and owner wears his heart on his sleeve and it shows. His warmth and care shines throughout the pub. He is so friendly that I became friends with him over the years, as I am a regular. One of the main reasons I go is because of the food. It is simple, fresh, and delicious. It is the only pub I know with a menu based around whelks and shellfish. I am a chef and nutritionist myself and I appreciate good clean healthy food which most pubs never offer. And I love how there is a dish for everyone. It is also the best place in west london for burns supper with delicious haggis... I have so many happy memories in my local pub, and I only pray I can make some more. I have never had anything bad happen to me here, have always felt safe, and have made many new friends over the years just chatting out front to all the friendly locals. It will be the first place I go after this lockdown ends, god willing!

To the Westminster City Council,

I understand that the license for The Cow is under review. As a local resident, I strongly support maintaining licensing at The Cow. This excellent pub and restaurant is a real and positive contributor to the welfare, character and well-being of the neighbourhood.

For it to lose its license would be a tragedy, particularly when we are facing the loss of many of our local pubs, restaurants and independent high street shops due to Covid.

The Cow has long served the area with high quality fare, delivered with a pleasingly distinctive personality. I have gone many times, often with out of town guests, and never been disappointed.

Additionally, I have always found The Cow to be well run, with no tolerance of misbehaviour, unlike some of the other pubs between Notting Hill and Paddington.

While I understand that you may need to respond to a specific complaint, I see no justification in suspending the license of this outstanding institution that contributes so much to our neighbourhood.

Please feel free to contact me if any further input would be helpful.

Your sincerely,

Dear Westminster Council

I was alarmed to hear that the license was under review for The Cow pub in Westbourne Park. I have recently moved out of London but this is still my go to place that I crave, it is full of old charm the with a great variety of customers from all different backgrounds, age groups and always friendly, I have been going regularly ( weekly) for over 12 years and have never seen any bad behaviour either inside or out.. I take my family (and they love it ) and have introduced friends and work associates from Uk and abroad there because of its amazing food and vibrant but chilled atmosphere. I am passionate about this place it is one of the few places left in London that you are guaranteed good food at a great price and I even feel comfortable to eat there on my own .. if you have never been go so that you can love this place too.

Hi there,

I am writing to you in regards to the review of the licensing of The Cow.

Ref 21/00981/LIREVP

The Cow is a great community asset to the area, it is my favourite pub in the whole of London and is a way to connect local people to each other.
The Cow is a vital support network, going there feels like going to visit family. This is especially important in these times of disconnect and technology. I have looked forward to visiting The Cow all through this lockdown, to feel happy and relaxed again after an extremely hard year. This pub gives me life.
I have never witnessed any disorder, crime or nuisance when visiting The Cow, and I have visited a lot! I feel extremely safe there, and very well taken care of in every way. The staff respect every patron and its surrounding neighbours.
The pub staff are amazing, and the place is safely and well run. It is the best. Please do not take their license away!
The Cow is valued, loved and respected, and it is important for peoples mental health to have a safe social place to visit when we all are able to again, which The Cow is. Safe, comforting, and valued, The Cow is loved.

Thank you,

, local resident.

To Whom it may concern, (more specifically: to whoever may be making a rash decision about the future of The Cow public house in Westbourne Grove),

I have spent may a soul-affirming afternoon/evening in this wonderful establishment, feeling like I could sink into the furniture and be scooped into the fabric of it's welcome. An Irish girl who arrived in the UK with no connections almost twenty years ago, I've felt like an outsider in many parts of this city - never here.

I have met Londoners from all walks of life at The Cow, shared stories and bonded over the delicious food and excellent pints of Guinness on offer, (the latter being a rarity in London).

The Cow is a local with heart, class and true grit. A place where I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisances or safety issues.

I implore you to Save The Cow.

Dear Sir or Madam

I write to you with regards to The Cow Pub in Notting Hill. 21/00981/LIREVP

I understand that it may be faced with closure. I feel this is a huge shame as it's a massive asset to Notting Hill and to London.

The Cow is special, its unique charm and atmosphere, great food and welcoming staff make it a landmark for locals and visitors. It is an increasingly rare venue in our modern world of chain pubs.

On the many occasions that I have visited the pub, there has never been any violence and disturbance. It is a safe place.

Please reconsider any proposals to close it. It is one of my favourite venues and I hope it can survive and continue for many more years to come.

Britain and London need pubs like this one. It's our DNA and culture - let's not remove them.

To whom it may concern,

I write in reference to the recent decision to review the the premises license for The Cow of Westbourne Park Road, London with the intention of preventing public nuisance, crime and disorder and increasing public safety.

The intention of my letter is to refute claims The Cow causes any negative affect on the local area and instead, quite the contrary, contributes to a sense of community and brings joy to all those who frequent this establishment.

A long standing institution, The Cow is a part of the local history and in turn has helped shape the culture of the surrounding area, which notably includes another drinking venue whose license I notice you are not calling into question.

During the many times I have visited The Cow I have not once encountered any behaviour which would, or even could, be categorised as crime and/or disorder, nor indeed causing a nuisance to the public or endangering their safety.

In fact during the pandemic, and the fortuitous times in which we were able to visit, the safety standards for both staff and patrons demonstrated and upheld by The Cow and its employees were exemplary and, in direct contradiction to the notion public safety is endangered by this business being open, created a profound sense of security.

I implore you to consider the points I have raised whilst conducting your review, if not for me as a devoted customer, but for the small business owners who, I think you might agree, have been through quite enough throughout the past twelve months. Please do not add to their plight.

Best wishes, [REDACTED]

Over the 20+ years I have known The Cow I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or any safety issues, which I understand are the reasons given for the review.

I feel strongly that the premises is a positive force for the neighbourhood and find it strange and sad that Westminster Council is considering taking away its licence. To do that would result in a big loss for the community.

If the Council forces the closure of a pub that offers some of the very best hospitality in London it would be a tragedy.

Dear Sir / Madam

I am writing to express my shock and concern about the possible suggested closure of the Cow pub and I would like to register my very deep felt support for it to retain its license and remain open .
I have been frequenting the pub since it opened when I was still young and I have continued to go there ever since , for food and fun , to be with friends and to make new friends too . It is a wonderful pub and a truly cross generational community, my daughter is now also a devoted customer and has been ever since she was allowed out on her own , because I always felt that it was a safe place for a teenager to be and also because she was familiar with it from many weekend family lunches there .
I have never witnessed any trouble of any kind there and even at its busiest times it has managed to retain the feeling and atmosphere of a party where everyone is having a good time together .
It is a rare thing these days to find such warmth and good fellowship , and in the light of so many of our precious pubs closing , I feel it is so very important to protect this lovely place .
It is a huge asset to the community serving many single regulars for whom I'm sure it is a very important link to others and where young and old can enjoy good affordable food ( with a range of snacks for the young or less well off ) and good times together . Please , please allow it to continue doing so .

Many thanks

Dear Westminster City Council,

I just wanted to write a short note as I heard the news that The Cow pub license is under review. This was incredibly worrying news to hear and I hope that the support for the Cow will show how it is an establishment which should stay in the area. As someone who has spent many years in the Westbourne Grove area and seen the area change- losing some favourite establishments along the way, it feels like for The Cow to potentially go, we will lose a true icon of the area. The Cow is the embodiment of Westbourne Grove's character, it is a always friendly pub, with quirkiness and charm. It is a place for meeting friends, and having delicious food and drinks. Not a place of crime, disorder and public nuisance. The area it sits will lose a big asset and have a big gaping hole so I really hope you will allow the premises to keep running and serving happy customers.

I was made aware today that The Cow is having its licence reviewed. This is an outrage. Has the hospitality industry not suffered enough in the last 12 months. That you would put up for review a genuine institution of Notting Hill social life. One of the thing getting a large number of people through these endless lockdowns is the thought of visiting our favourite community pub in the summer. As anyone who has ever been to The Cow you shouldn't understand that like all the best hospitality venues it is far more than just an pub and dining room. It has a strong community surrounding it. It is a rare gem of genuine hosting in a world overfilled with knock-off franchises. It also serves throughout the community as a place for people from all backgrounds to mix. The idea of it disappearing quite literally enraged me - how dare you. I'm very sure I'm not the only one as this has dominated ever social channel that I use. I've never in a decade of frequenting The Cow ever had a bad experience there or seen anything that would cause you to review their licence. Certainly no "crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety" issues. The loss of the The Cow will irreparably damage the soul of Notting Hill. It would be an unjustified removal of a treasured asset to hundred of people. None of this even touches on the absurdity of removing the licence of a business that has managed to struggle through this pandemic just before we reach the end of this nightmare. What possible justification is there to destroy a thriving business that the local community LOVE

During Football or Rugby matches I would very happily join in. It is the pub I had my first date with the person who would become my wife. It is the pub where we had many family get-together and catch up time with friends. I could list many other events that meant a lot to me. But at the moment Its Fish Stew is my go to comfort food and during lockdown thanks to its takeaway menu it is yet again. I do however look forward to the pub to reopen fully when it is safe to do so. Over the Twenty years I have never experienced any issues with respect to crime safety or disorder. And regardless of time of day or week I wouldn't raise any questions or concern on that matter of that venue.*

To whom it may concern,

To begin to name reasons as to why The Cow is an asset to not only the neighborhood, but to London itself is like asking a Brit why they enjoy heading to the pub. A space of community, joy and laughter, the Cow is an institution unlike no other. I've brought my family, boyfriends, friends, dog and anyone who willing over to the Cow. Each happier than the last to have discovered such as a space. As we begin to anticipate our summer post-covid, I, and like many others, are excited to find comfort and happiness in social spaces. It would be a great loss to West London if the Cow would not re-open its doors to accommodate the many that are so ready to head back.

From afternoon oysters to dinners in their dining room, the Cow is so much more than just a pub or a restaurant. Open minded creatives, old and young enjoying a pint, Sunday 80's disco parties, the memories and anecdotes that have come from my time spent at the Cow are heartwarming moments. In all my trips to the Cow, not once have I felt unsafe, worried or cautious. Something that, as a woman, is hard to find in a city such as London. In a neighborhood that has already seen so many spaces shut down in the last 5 years, it would be a devastating loss for the community. While the Cow is a hustling and bustling space (as a good pub should be), it has never, not once, caused a nuisance or acted out of law. Having lived in the area for over 6 years, walking past the Cow and the surrounding areas, whether to head home or to take the bus, I have always felt safe.

It is very disheartening that such a place should fall victim to prohibitional stances such as this one, when it has gone above and beyond for its community.

With our city struggling, this should be the last of your concerns. The Cow is a space filled love, happiness oozing from its every corners.

I still remember my first experience at the Cow vividly: I had just moved into the neighborhood, it was the last remaining days of warmth in London and I was in search of a cool beer. I left my flat, walked not even 500 meters before stumbling across a crowd of people, laughing. I made my way in and in the crowd I spot a family friend I had not seen in over ten years. What a place, I thought to myself, chucking away at oysters and catching up with my friend. I've been going back consistently since, each time amazed at the friendliness of the staff, the above average food for the below average price.

As I said, London has just gone through an unparallel year, and with everyone eager and ready to return to normality, it would be devastating to find that a wrongful action such as this one was taken.

To whom it may concern,

Firstly I would like to say The Cow is, in my view, the best public house in London. I have been coming to The Cow for most of my adult years, and feel it to be like family.

Over the years and still to this day, it attracts interesting, educated and creative people alike and gives all people a place to feel at home and safe - surrounded by familiar, friendly faces and characters.

It is an asset to the community because it gives people a place to be together, it creates community. I can't imagine, and wouldn't want to, West London without it. I travel a lot and it is one place I think about and look forward to coming back to, seeing everyone and for a pint of guinness and delicious food - especially the famous fish stew.

I have never in all my years of spending many hours at a time at The Cow, seen or experienced any crime or disorder. Only unity and laughter- essential to a community's well being right?

Please do not close The Cow. It is the heart and soul of west London.

Good afternoon,

I hereby submit my stern opposition to the review of The Cow's license. Having frequented this public house for the last 20 years, I can attest to its importance, both as a social hub for the Notting Hill area but also as a true institution of West London. This independent bar and dining room is indeed a true asset to the community; acting as an oasis of calm amongst the series of corporate chains and ever depleting establishments that once peppered the Portobello Road area.

The Cow has to be held up as perfect example of the quintessential, British gathering place. Its true value lies in its consistency and the wonderful people that work in and run the pub. I raise this important point as I can say, hand on heart, that over the two decades which I have had the pleasure to spend time at 89 Westbourne Park Road, I have not once experienced any crime, safety related issue or incident that might be construed as a public nuisance. In fact, quite the opposite. This is a bar where an individual may quite happily spend many happy hours sat alone or, as tends to be the case, join a fellow group of patrons and soon call them friends. The employees- be it front or back of house, are most welcoming and convivial. They are respectful of their neighbours and know when to ask a guest to lessen their exuberance, following an evening's frivolity.

There are seldom places left that offer up the unique spirit that one can experience at The Cow. We cannot put a price on the ability of a destination that allows complete strangers to mingle with such ease. You can witness a melting pot of cultural integration that spans age, culture, religion and creed. There are no pretensions at The Cow, only inclusion and happy times for all. This is a place that even the most introvert can enjoy social interaction - an essential quality as our country moves past the COVID crisis.

To me, The Cow means great service and diverse locals that bring colour and vibrancy to any visit. Throughout the year Tom and his team create special events that bring people together to engage, share and converse. The Cow has a host of friends that visit regularly and feel more socially engaged and content; this leads to greater trust in other members of their community. Without this local pub the area will have significantly smaller social networks and feel less engaged with, and trusting of, the local community.

The Cow is all about quality- that extends to their produce and standards. Be it Valentines Day, St. David's Day, St. Patrick's day, Carnival or Christmas- the Cow is the centre of the Westbourne Park Road community. To consider revoking their premises license would be both criminal and morally wrong with far reaching consequences for the area.

Best regards, [REDACTED]

For me, it is a flagship for the great british pub. Serving british classics such as chicken kiev, seafood stew, british oysters, Guinness and British Ales. It is a magnet for lovers of good food, drink and conversation. I see no sense in accusing it of drawing crime to a neighbourhood. In fact, on one occasion I left my mobile phone on a chair on a busy day. I went to the bar an hour later and not only had someone handed in the phone to the bar - the friendly bar staff was charging the phone. This is a stark reminder of the quality of the employees and of the visitors of this establishment. You are far safer inside the Cow than you are outside its doors.

If you would label a place such as this as anything other than a jewel of the neighbourhood, then you would be mistaken.

For the love of our community, please do not wrongly wield your power to remove their license. This beloved institution has been around for many years, and deserves to remain for many more years to come.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I was deeply disturbed to learn that Westminster City Council has issued a review of The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Rooms (the "Cow") Premises Licence. I am led to believe that the review has been sought on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety, the prevention of crime and disorder.

The Cow is a fine food destination. It is a leading star in the development of the Gastro Pub trend in the UK. I have been a loyal patron of the Cow since I first moved to Westminster in October 1999. I have had the joy of many birthday parties in the Cow; both mine and those of my loved ones. Through these many years of have met and grown important relationships with friends and family, all patrons of the Cow.

A loss of the Cow's license will be a loss to Notting Hill. This establishment has been honored with the great and the good - footballers, movie stars, authors, directors, and other creative types. People flock to the Cow for its unique take on British culture. It has been full for 25 years. Don't destroy 25 years of fine British Food and Drink.

It is the light that quietly spills out on to the street side that has taken an otherwise downtrodden segment of Notting Hill and turned it in to a meeting spot for many walks of life. By creating a quiet well lit corner of the street the Cow prevents crime and public nuisance. Buildings on both sides of the Cow are empty at nighttime.

My cohort of people, people in their 50's, have been enjoying the Cow for almost half our lives. We are respectful of the neighbors, many of who are my close friends. With those neighbors I have watched their children grow in the neighborhood. Some of those children, when they come of age are then hired as staff at the Cow. This is a wholesome family atmosphere that MUST be maintained.

Please do not challenge the continued existence of the Cow. It is a central pillar to the lives of many in my community.

Hi Westminster Council,

I am writing to support the licence application for the Cow Pub. The Cow isn't just a pub; it is a place where people make lifelong friendships and support one another. It is one of the main things that we love about this area. We have made so many of our friends here and going there to meet them there is one of the best things about living in London. The food is also probably the best in the area! Not a lot of pubs can say that... We can also confirm that we have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues. In fact, we would say the absolute opposite; just a lot of friendly, kind people! Please realise how important this place is for us in the local area and allow the Cow Pub to keep their licence. Thank you in advance for considering our email too.

Dear Westminster City Council,

[REDACTED] and thoroughly enjoy the multi faceted community, which is a rich tapestry of all walks of life.

It is my firm view that The Cow has been a major contributor to this communal identity over its successful 26 year history.

It brings an energy and personality to our little corner of Notting Hill like no other and I speak on behalf of our community when I say that removing it from the scene would leave a gaping hole.

The poor Cow has, like the rest of the hospitality sector, experienced a rough twelve months. The owners and staff have proven to be innovative and resilient in overcoming the numerous challenges presented by the pandemic and I think it is very unreasonable to now thrust upon them the worrying prospect that their Premises Licence is under review. I think it is unfair and unjustified. At this tough time we should be coming together, to reward dynamism and resilience for our small businesses. Not battering them with red tape and reviews.

Perhaps there are a few disgruntled neighbours, and everyone is entitled to voice their opinion. But I am sure that they would be the minority and that the vast majority of the community enjoys having The Cow around.

The cow is a tremendous asset for the community because it provides a cultural centre that caters to all types and sizes. It throws its arms wide open to everyone in London.

I frequently find myself engrossed in a warm and interesting conversation with a stranger whilst I am enjoying a fish stew or a chicken Kiev. The people that it attracts are interesting, warm and loving. They are not rough criminals or violent vigilantes. They are progressive individuals. It means a great deal to me, to have the option to visit the cow and strike up a conversation with a stranger and just want to meet some new people.

By removing this from our community, we would be removing a safe house for organic socialising and fun.

Please consider your actions carefully. If we remove these small businesses from our lives, they may never return and could be replaced with another chain that benefits far flung shareholders.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to you about The Cow, on Westbourne Park road, in light of the recent announcement that you are to review The Cow's premises Licence.

This is one of London's truly special and unique pubs, with its Irish connections and unusual menu of fresh seafood to go along with the Guinness. I love the decoration and ambience, it's always very relaxed but upbeat and jovial. The Cow is the sort of place you could go to alone and not feel lonely, you could be 23 and or 83, it's just a friendly un-threatening space, these places are important in a community and have a valuable place.

In the 10 or so years I have been visiting The Cow, I have never once seen someone so drunk they are being kicked out, or falling all over the place, or getting into a fight. There no smashed glass outside, or staggering hordes at closing time, it just isn't that sort of place.

It goes without saying that I wholeheartedly believe that this place is very special, and should be allowed to continue to operate and act as a haven for members of the community to relax.

Dear Sir/Madam,

The idea that this iconic and wonderfully popular pub is cause of nuisance and should have its license withdrawn is an utter nonsense.

I defy your offices to find a friendlier, less troublesome, more socially and age mixed and better-dressed crowd anywhere in London.

Notting Hill has changed greatly over the 30 years I've lived in and around it. This pub is one of the few spots that still offers a warm and lively (without being boisterous) atmosphere and that still plays host all walks of residential life.

Upon any visit you light be ordering at the bar alongside young and old from the estate, we'll known musicians or premier league footballers. The food is excellent and reasonably priced, the staff warm but characterful.

Where else can you drink Guinness sitting next to David Beckham or Tom cruise, have a chat with a plasterer from the estate while a Rasta chef prepares you oysters while playing incredible roots reggae?

I rarely get involved in these 'save' campaigns - in many cases when pubs get sold off or developed it tends to be from lack of local support/patronage. Nothing could be further from the truth with The Cow. I've never seen any trouble at The Cow over the 25 years I've been a regular there and I'll gladly stand up and be counted as an avid supporter and petition whomever I need to.

London needs more spots like The Cow not less.

It is a neighbourhood institution that we have many fond memories of and in the nearly 20 years that we have lived in the area we have not once experienced any issues with antisocial behaviour etc at or around The Cow's premises.*

In fact, we believe the council's time would be better spent tackling the increase in brutal muggings, burglaries and drug abuse around St Stephens church, Westbourne Gardens and Kildare Gardens rather than going after a pub that has contributed to the colourful and joyful vibe of the neighbourhood.

The prevention of noise and nuisance excuse is getting ridiculous, Powis Square and the surrounding streets are so silent at night that is is scary.

It is much more dangerous a solitary place than one where there are people.

All pubs and centres of aggregation are gone. There is no one in the streets. And no, that is not since Covid begun.

People don't socialise anymore and this is the worse thing for a community.

This is when things start to go wrong.

We used to say goodmorning to everyone and leave the doors unlocked at night. Now people come and go for the high rent. Shops open and close for the same reason. Things change so often, the identity of Notting Hill is getting lost. We know that all is an excuse for developers to build flats. But who is going to go into these flats? Bankers who will be able to afford rent, but don't contribute to the community? Rich investors who will keep the flats empty? People buying their second home in London just to have a place while living elsewhere? We need the artists to stay. The teachers, the youth workers, people who work at the market, people who do things here!

Pubs are one of the main places where people get to know their neighbours

We need pubs. we need young people making some noise.

To Westminster Council

I am sending this email re. The Cow at 89 Westbourne Park Road.

As one of the earliest gastropubs in London, it has become a West London institution and for good reason - The Cow serves great local food and drinks in a charming and friendly atmosphere, no wonder it has such a loyal fan base. It is a place I take non-UK friends to show them real London at its best, as well as the obvious place to meet up with friends nearby.

I am a fairly local resident, and The Cow is one of the few pubs/restaurants that I would be very happy to visit on my own, as the staff are lovely and very welcoming, so I always feel completely safe, relaxed and at home there. Not something I would say about many places in the area.

The Cow is now such an integral part of the Notting Hill community; it really is an iconic gastropub. With best wishes

Dear Councillors,

I am writing from Sydney Australia as I am briefly here from my usual abode ██████████.

I have spent over 20 years frequenting the wonderful pub and restaurant, The Cow.

I came to London as a young Australian without any community or safety net. I was introduced to one or two people who subsequently took me to The Cow. It was here I can honestly say without doubt that I have met the most impressive, creative, inspiring people of my time. To say nothing of David Beckham of course!

This place gave me a community. I could go there alone and sip a wine and enjoy the extraordinary food and know I was in a safe place. I've met most of my best friends now 22 years on at The Cow.

I have never felt or experienced or even witnessed any kind of disorder or crime during my countless visits.

I am utterly devastated at the thought that the cow may have its license reviewed.

I know I can also speak for the large Australian community who make Notting Hill and surrounds our home. This place is our home away from home. It is an institution and what's more a beautiful, fantastic and safe pub.

Please do not hesitate to contact me for more information.

To Licensing at Westminster,

The Cow on Westbourne Park Road is a hugely important place to ██████████ I enjoy it with. It is a rare institution where we feel comfortable, happy and at home. Its effortlessly original, perfectly professional and extremely high quality. The staff go to great efforts to preserving The Cow- the meticulous attention to detail for the drinks including the best Guinness in London which unknown to many, does require a lot of work. The food is exceptional. It is not just pub grub, it is some of the best, most consistent cooking in West London.

I understand that perhaps something may have happened which has brought The Cows premises license into question and up for review. I don't know what that thing is, but I do know that if the Cow were to close down it would be a huge loss for so many who call it home and use it as a place to be happy and enjoy life, which is something everyone needs at the moment. It may not officially be anything more than a pub, but take my word for it when I say its a town hall, a community centre, an arts centre, an independent business, a cultural hub, a museum and a perfect example of passion for hospitality. If you could bottle what they do there and sell it, it would be the most valuable investment for any hospitality business.

I kindly ask you to take the above into consideration when reviewing their license. As I said I don't know whats happened, but I do know the end of The Cow would be devastating for the local community. If I could pick one place in the world to meet anyone I love for a pint, a few oysters and the best chicken Kiev in town, The Cow would be it.

I'd like to confirm that I have absolutely no affiliation with the Cow business. I've never met a single person who owns it, works there etc. I am simply a customer who has seen whats happening and I'm sharing my opinion.

Great pub, very disappointed to hear its closing. I live in the neighbourhood and have often frequented the cow to enjoy its excellent shellfish at a good price, not to mention the charming place itself. I can't understand how it could be closing due to public nuisance and disorder as I haven't witnessed anything of the like. Would be great to hear it remaining open and continuing to add to the diversity and good atmosphere in Notting hill

The Cow, Westbourne Park Road To Who It May Concern,

I am writing to express my deep concern that Westminster Council could revoke the licence of The Cow, leading to the pub closing its doors.

Frankly, this would be a disaster. I've been a patron of the The Cow ever since it opened and having grown up in the neighbourhood, I have visited it many, many times.

Not only is it a wonderful place to meet friends, kick back and enjoy excellent food and drink (if you haven't had the fish stew you're missing out!) it has always had a wonderful, warm and friendly atmosphere. Never in my 100+ visits have I witnessed any crime, disorder or any moments where I felt unsafe or in danger.

Having moved back into the area after a decade away, I personally am longing for The Cow to reopen so I can once again enjoy its hospitality, delicious seafood and refreshing drinks.

Given the dearth of good, atmospheric pubs in Notting Hill and indeed, London, The Cow should, in my humble opinion, very much remain open as one of the best.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I was deeply saddened to hear that The Cow Pub's licence is up for review. It is without question that it is a true asset to the community and is loved by hundreds of people young and old.

[REDACTED] and so have always been aware of The Cow and its popularity but it wasn't until 2015 that I really understood it's importance when I began working in the bar and dining rooms.

I cannot stress enough the amount of people that come in on a daily basis that speak of how they are a 'regular' and how they've been coming to The Cow since 1995 and just have sheer love for the place. You see so many people from different walks of life who I can absolutely guarantee that their lives are enriched by everything that The Cow represents. I have never worked anywhere where I have felt so respected by the customers and built such relationships with them and the other staff. It is an experience that has enriched my life.

I started working in bars in 2009, the first being Ground Floor Bar on Portobello Road where I worked for six years and I occasionally worked in The Gold also on Portobello Road. As these two other bars are very near by and were also privately owned I feel I am in a good position to compare them to my experiences of The Cow. In both of these other pubs different acts of crime happened on a weekly basis. I had countless things stolen from there and the police were called constantly to manage unruly people.

I have seen no such acts of crime and disorder ever at The Cow which makes it such a pleasure to work there and to be there as a customer. I have worked countless shifts where customers have left all sorts of valuable items behind that they can come and collect the next day, I've never seen this happen anywhere else. I have never seen The Cow be a public nuisance in any way whatsoever.

On a more personal note The Cow means so much to me because of the generosity they have shown me in always welcoming me back with open arms whenever I have asked if they needed staff, particularly when I worked in a primary school. I felt really valued by the owner, the managers and the customers.

I think it would be a catastrophic blow for so many people if the licence was not renewed. It really is a buzzing hub of community spirit and it definitely enriches people's lives. The reason it is so popular is because it is one of a kind, particularly in the Westbourne Park area.

Thank you

Dear Sir/Madam,

I writing with regards to the possible revoking of the license of The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

At a time when so many independently owned and run pubs have fallen or are likely to fall, to close such an establishment as The Cow would be a huge loss.

Pubs are so much part of the heritage of this country and already we face a landscape of anonymity - brewery-owned chains such as Wetherspoons and high streets further dominated by big brands such as Tescos and the like - the only businesses that have been able to keep afloat. We are losing the soul and the heart of our country. Places such as the Cow are so precious and so essential and we cannot afford to lose another.

The Cow has been in existence for 26 years. There are members of its staff who have worked there for coming up to two decades. There are customers who have been going since its inception. It is a village pub, in a city. It is a true place of locals - some of whom come from all over London and from outside - but still call it 'their local'. Its customers are older. They are made up of friends, friendly & much loved faces and of families. It is a family. Those that go there, come from all and every walk of life. From surgeons to scientists, filmmakers, artists, designers, builders, writers, adventurers, poets, painters & decorators, musicians, models, sportsmen, dreamers and their much-loved dogs. It is unique place which sits at the heart of Notting Hill and its West London surrounds. It is internationally renowned. It is a place of joy, kindness and love and not only have I never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or the like in all the years that I have been going there, it is one of the few places in London I feel truly safe as a woman - for all the reasons given above.

After a year, and counting, of lockdown, isolation and fear amidst a time of living through a global pandemic, there are few lights at the end of the tunnel. The Cow is one. Please do not take this from us. It is irreplaceable and the loss of it would be felt by many including Westminster and London. I, and so many, ask, that you may allow it to continue.

Yours sincerely,

Hello, I would like to object to the closure of the public house named The Cow 89 Westbourne Park Rd, London W2 5QH

I've been visiting to the The Cow regularly for the last seven years or so, and have always experienced a friendly atmosphere and welcoming staff, despite people of all different backgrounds mixing, something I think is rare.

The borough has its fair share of pub chain pubs (as most do), so venues like The Cow are important to the local community, there's murals on the walls of the locals, everyone knows each other, it really does feel like home, and safe. The owners also put great effort into their food, so not all about alcohol.

I really was shocked to learn that there was a campaign to close the venue, it really doesn't seem right, The Cow is always the 'go to' meeting place when visiting my friends who live nearby

It would genuinely be heart breaking to see The Cow shut down so I hope you'll consider my comments, and others.

Thanks

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to voice my support in allowing the Cow to retain its Premises Licence.

The Cow is an Institution in the area and for me that goes back 20 years. I took my daughters there when little for Sunday lunches and they met other youngsters of the area who now are regular patrons. It's a mix generational pub . It is a community pub . The best of what a British pub should be and what is the envy of the world . When overseas friends come to London I take them to The Cow to experience the food - fish stew cannot be beat - the atmosphere , the Guinness . They inevitably end up becoming friends with strangers and enjoying the Bonhomie. When they return to London the first place they want to return to is The Cow .

We are losing so much due to The Pandemic and to lose The Cow not through Pandemic but through social vandalism would be a tragedy .

Never have I seen any crime or disorder or any threat to public safety . I would say it's the safest pub to be sitting in in London . For all genders and LGBT community. For families . We should be celebrating that a place like The Cow exists not closing it down

Please grant The Cow it's license. Its Community . It's a little jewel in the heart of Nottinghill. .

Yours Sincerely,

I have been a regular patron of The Cow for a number of years.

Not only is The Cow a shining light in the area, it is a shining light for the hospitality industry both in London and also nationally. It is looked upon as the blueprint of how a proper bar should be. How a bar should be run. How to cook and serve a great dish. How to look after your locals and new customers. How to create a great spirit and wonderful sense of place in an establishment.

The Cow losing its licence would be a devastating blow for the local area and for the hospitality industry as a whole.

Have I ever seen any crime or disorder whilst in The Cow? Never.

Have I ever seen any instances of public nuisance? Never.

Have I ever felt unsafe whilst in The Cow? Never - in fact completely the opposite. The Cow is an oasis of safety and security within its surroundings.

Hello,

I am writing this email in regards to the licensing review of The Cow, Westbourne Park Rd W2.

Since relocating to the UK I have thoroughly enjoyed the 'pub culture' which is built on independent establishments like The Cow. Shortly after moving to Bayswater/Notting Hill I was fortunate enough to visit The Cow which, for the years after, has provided me with a sense of community within the chaos of a big city like London. It is such a special and quirky venue - a real melting pot where people of all ages, ethnicities, sexuality, drinkers, diners (etc) come together in the quest of a good time.

Despite the basis for this review, I have never witnessed violence, crime or disorder and to lose such a unique venue (and with it their Fish Stew recipe) would be a crying shame.

I hope I can describe how special the moments were at the cow coming back from work and just before going home having a small pint of lager. To wind down. A much needed time. The cow staff were always with no exception pleasant and thoughtful.

I have never once in 10 years encountered any disturbance. In fact it was a place to relax and meet like minded people.

It comes as a shock to hear the possibility of closure. Why? It would be removing a perfectly living tree! For what? What is the purpose of cutting this tree that is still full of life.

I would very much appreciate on behalf of also my family to consider keeping this very cool relaxed compassionate and kind pub open. A place for connectedness and sharing.

The cow is my local pub, where I can meet friends and enjoy the community vibe. There aren't many places like it and there are no other places like it in Notting hill. It's where all generations come together as one and integrate. It really has a special spirit and makes everyone feel welcome. I was looking forward to lockdown being over and going back there, not only with friends, but to see friendly faces, and also new ones. I think it would be a tragic loss to the community if the cow was to close. Every time I've been to the cow, I have never seen anything untoward, but in fact the opposite they run a tight ship of good service and delicious food. It's been a really hard year on everyone, especially hospitality, don't make it harder.

To Whom it may concern,

I have recently heard about The Cow's licence being reviewed, and am shocked to hear it is "on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder". This is totally contradictory to anything I have ever experienced or observed in numerous occasions I have spent there.

The Cow has one of the most diverse clientele I have experienced in any food and beverage establishment, let alone one which is so appreciated by the local community, but also sees scores of regulars and less-regulars travel from further a field. What is most notable is the different industries and areas of knowledge you can come across when socialising at The Cow. Surely somewhere which brings together artists and musicians, as well as journalists, bankers, and many other backgrounds is an asset to the community as a whole? The mural on the wall is arguably greater testament to how great an impact The Cow has had on so many over the course of it's existence. A picture in it's own right, but with so many stories of guests who's support has been cherished by those working there, as well as those present at the time. Every trip reveals a different story which will exist on the wall, and I cannot think of any other such establishment where regulars and locals alike can all relate so directly to something tangible in the premises.

Beyond the positives and benefits above however, it is the idea that the licence is up for review due to negatives which surprises me most. Never have I felt or witnessed any behaviour which could be perceived as 'public nuisance' or 'crime and disorder', not any behaviour which could put 'public safety' at risk. If anything, quite the opposite, the staff at The Cow do a fantastic job of looking after their guests, and this extends to keeping decorum both inside the pub, but also outside on the tables and seating at the front.

Following one of the toughest 12 months the hospitality industry has ever seen, I think it is inconceivable that The Cow could be at any risk other than that due to Covid-19 and the challenges it has thrown. I hope that Westminster Council sees what value The Cow brings to the area, the importance it holds to the local community and those who frequent it, regularly or not.

A fabulous establishment, and one that should be supported, not reviewed.

Yours sincerely,

Westminster City Council,

I believe The Cow is an asset to the people, the neighborhood, and London and should retain its license. I can only attest to this because each time I visit, I've had nothing but comforting meals, great service, and made memories with friends old and new. [REDACTED], I didn't know anyone. A co-worker suggest The Cow. My first visit was on a typically British night in November with my visiting sister after our first Premier League match. We strolled in, found a table in back on the first floor, and it was the quintessential end to our evening. We sat in back, ordered a few pints, had the best fish stew around, and settled in. The mood was light hearted, food and service exceptional, and I felt at home.

*From this first visit, I've been back many times. When friends visit from out of town, I make a booking. It is a place that retains that special something despite all the changes around it and I think that combination makes it a revered place for all of us. I have never experienced crime or disorder, public nuisance, or safety issues while visiting. I understand that you seek to prevent public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder in our neighbourhood for which we are most grateful.

It is dispiriting for us all therefore to read about the increase in muggings and drug dealing so close to our homes with apparently little attempt to challenge such behaviour.

However I do not believe that the long established neighbourhood pub The Cow is contributing to this disorder, crime and danger on our streets.

[REDACTED] It is an asset to the community providing a safe place for people to meet, eat and socialise. Businesses such as this are the life blood of a neighbourhood, a necessity to the vibrancy of a city, especially going forward from this past year of lockdowns and restrictions. We await the lifting of restrictions in June with anticipation and fingers crossed, in the hope that our local enterprises have survived the awful economics of the pandemic. They need help.

I hope you will consider all of this when you review The Cow's Premises Licence.

Dear Sirs,

I would like to register my honestly-held belief that The Cow restaurant is an asset of important use for the community of north west London and Westbourne Park / portobello area and ought to be allowed to continue functioning as such.

As a hostelry it has a history as rich in character as the people of the special neighbourhood in which it has stood for generations.

It is integral and complementary to that character, which more in this pandemic era than ever, deserves to remain as a cornerstone of the locality where people might seek to reestablish the important social hub we all have so missed, along with so many other freedoms.

Notwithstanding this obvious and timely additional reason to allow The Cow to continue, I would like to add that my experience is that The Cow is a safe and very well-run establishment that enhances the community.

Please may my views be taken into account in the process of your decision making.

Dear Westminster City Council,

We are writing to you regarding your Review of The Cow's Premises Licence, "sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder."

Firstly, we do believe it is a real asset for any Council to have such an institution like The Cow in its streets; it must be one of the very few pubs which has 25 years under its belt.

Second, we would like to inform you that, [REDACTED] we have never experienced any nuisance, crime, disorder or threat to safety inside or outside of The Cow.

The Cow has always been a very safe place and is an inclusive family pub stitched with family values of protection, security, and respect, for its clients, staff, and neighbours.

The pub employ lots of people who rely on The Cow trading as it does for their income and livelihood, the latter of which I would guess has already been completely rocked by the lockdown in the U.K. and catastrophic effect on the hospitality industry.

For The Cow to have its licence reviewed, my thoughts are with these essential employees and staff running it - pushed further into confusion and uncertainty about where they will take their next pay packet from, and when they will next see their pub busy again, with their friends and neighbours.

Ultimately, it is a pub which serves the community.

Yours,

Dear Madam / Sir,

I write this email in regards to Westminster City Council's issue of a review of the Cow's premises licence, sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder. Reference Number: 21/00981/LIREVP and frequently have visited the Cow on many happy occasions, at times including my children and my parents. The implication that the Cow would in any way qualify as a source of public nuisance, safety, crime or disorder is utterly unfair and is frankly groundless. Quite the opposite, it has always been in my experience a peaceful and respectable venue to meet and dine with friends and family.

Whenever people visit me from out of town, the Cow is always the first pub I bring them to for a drink and a meal; a place to experience the real London. The Cow is a cultural institution in the Notting Hill area. There is simply no place like it. It is synonymous with Notting Hill and the neighborhood is culturally and socially poorer without its doors wide open. I am sure that I am one of many people who has written to express similar sentiments.

At a time when this loved and renowned neighborhood is experiencing rapid change as an older generation of local businesses can no longer afford the increasing rents, now exacerbated by the recent covid lockdowns, it is disheartening to hear that an establishment such as the Cow, famous among the local residents from shopworkers to celebrities, could now potentially be forced to close due to such unwarranted circumstances. I might enquire if there were any specific incidents or complaints that triggered this review of premises licence? Please share with me the specific details upon which the above mentioned review of premises licence is based.

I thank you for your consideration of this matter and urge you to please allow the Cow to continue to operate as it has for the last 26 years. I am happy for you to contact me if you require any further feedback.

Thank you and kind regards

Dear Licensing Officer

I am very upset to hear that The Cow's licence is being reviewed.

I have used The Cow for many years and consider it an asset of community value. It's prices are accessible, the atmosphere is smart yet very gentle and it has done a lot to revitalise a previously rather tatty area of West London - I used to live . It attracts a cross section of the local community and is one of the few places left that people can eat or have a drink alone undisturbed.

I've always felt completely safe there and have not witnessed or experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

The interior is unique and I know people who have travelled far and wide to visit The Cow.

Please renew its licence. Hospitality is losing too many businesses as it is.

To whom it may concern,

Westminster Licensing have issued a review of the Cow's Premise license on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I would like to place on record the following;

[REDACTED]

Over the past 25 years or so I have witnessed The Cow not only establish itself as the beating heart of the local community, but also a sought-after tourist destination. This is an almost unique achievement. The quality of its food and beverage offer is unsurpassed. The efficiency of its Operations team in exemplary, and the care that they take of their patrons is unparalleled.

As a licensee, I always pay attention to these details when visiting hospitality venues. From a personal but nevertheless well-informed perspective, I believe that the security measures in place at The Cow ensure that the venue is secure and crime free and indeed serve as a deterrent to crime. For that reason I have often cited it as the gold standard.

Whilst I understand that License reviews take place from time to time, for a multitude of reasons, I feel that any, even minor, "negative" alteration to The Cow's Licence, would be unwarranted, detrimental to the community and inevitably have negative social and economic consequences, for individuals, the local community and the City of Westminster in general.

I would urge you to uphold the Cow's Premise License and indeed, commend the Cow for its quarter century contribution to the local community.

Sincerely,

I believe The Cow is a huge asset to the local area and the city of London. It's a beautiful, soulful and interesting melting pot of different great minds and humane individuals who are trying to have fun and share their life's with one another.

The Cow is a place where I go to meet old friends and create new. It's a space for relaxation, great food, beautiful social interaction and interesting conversations with like minded people.

Dear Westminster Council,

[REDACTED] - I can assure you that the Cow is a fantastic institution - and one of the favorite pubs in the neighborhood.

I have never in my time visiting the Cow - or walking past, or heard of anyone visiting the cow - experienced crime, public disorder, nuisance or safety issues - of any kind.

The Cow needs to be supported during times like this - I would suggest you start using council funds to better support the fantastic businesses within the community.

Dear Westminster Council

I'm writing in regards to The Cow Pub, on Westbourne Park Road, London W2. I've been going to the pub for nearly 15 years, and I've never seen any evidence of 'public nuisance,' 'disorder,' let alone 'crime.'

I live a few doors down on westbourne park villas amd have never experienced anything like what has been described above - i would say the pub opposite (the westbourne) is far louder than the cow

It is an integral part of the community and would be a travesty if it was shut down for ANY of those reasons

In times such as the ones we currently find ourselves the cow is source of great comfort for many in the community.

Please do the right thing amd keep them open!

To Whom It May Concern

I am writing to give you my personal thoughts regarding The Cow in Notting Hill as I believe the license is under review by Westminster Council.

The Cow is, in my opinion, a huge part of the Notting Hill community and has been for many years. It is a local, friendly, inclusive place, with excellent food and wonderful staff. I always feel at home, cosy and safe when sitting in The Cow enjoying a great meal and a drink. I have personally never witnessed any kind of crime or disorder or any safety issues while spending time at The Cow.

I think it would be a real shame to see such a Notting Hill institution close its doors. With London pubs disappearing in droves, particularly during these difficult times, we need to save places such as this, The Cow is an all too rare gem!

Dear Westminster City Council,

I was deeply disturbed to learn that Westminster City Council has issued a review of The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Rooms (the "Cow") Premises Licence. I am led to believe that the review has been sought on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety, the prevention of crime and disorder (??).

The Cow is a fine food destination. It is a leading star in the development of the Gastro Pub trend in the UK. I have been a loyal customer of the Cow since I first moved to NOTTING HILL in May 1997. I have spent some of my best hours in the Cow with friends, colleagues and neighbours.

It's one of those few places where you feel AT HOME and you feel belonging to a COMMUNITY. And I NEVER EVER felt there was any threat of public safety, crime or disorder. On the contrary, having a pub in that location HELPS the community to go out, meet, and be vigilant. It is the light that quietly spills out onto the street side that has taken an otherwise downtrodden segment of Notting Hill and turned it into a meeting spot for many walks of life.

A loss of the Cow's license will be A LOSS to Notting Hill. This establishment has been honored with the great and the good – footballers, movie stars, authors, directors, and other creative types. People flock to the Cow for its unique take on BRITISH CULTURE. It has been full for 25 years. Don't destroy 25 years of fine British Food and Drink!

Don't destroy communities!

My cohort of people have been enjoying the Cow for almost half our lives. We are respectful of the neighbors, many of whom are my close friends. With those neighbors I have watched their children grow in the neighborhood. Some of those children, when they come of age are then hired as staff at the Cow. This is a wholesome family atmosphere that MUST be maintained.

Please do not challenge the continued existence of the Cow. It is a central pillar to the lives of many in MY community.

Yours sincerely, [REDACTED]

To whom it may concern,

I am emailing to share my sentiments about The Cow pub having recently heard it's licence is being reviewed.

[REDACTED] I felt instantly welcomed by staff and locals alike. It is a vital cornerstone of the local community for so many people. The atmosphere is always welcoming, warm and above all safe. I have never witnessed any sign of crime or disorder, public nuisance or ever felt unsafe.

The values it holds for its patrons, its staff and its heritage, as an old London Pub, should be revered. Not many Pubs exist quite like The Cow. The Cow is a hub for so many wonderful people, you can see how vital a point of contact it is for the locals and tourists alike. And not least an imperative income for the staff who have remained there for so long. It isn't a pub that constantly changes employment or management. It values and respects it's staff. I have since gone back as a customer's many many times, and always felt welcomed.

I was surprised to hear that it was in any way up for review. I have always recommended it to most people as the best pub in London.

I wanted to share my sentiments about this gem of place, I really hope you can see the value it holds for so many people in the area. And how disappointing it would be to see that change.

Many thanks,

Hi,

I am very saddened to hear the Cow might close.

and gives it a lot of character and cheer.

I've met so many locals in this pub and it is always a happy place and serves great food.

I live around the corner and it is never a nuisance. It is always shut by a decent hour - well before midnight and the crowd is never too crazy.

I hope you can keep it open. London is becoming a sad place if places that have provided people with happiness like this close after many years.

Thank you

To whom it may concern,

, it was always a place of excitement and joy. My family would frequent the restaurant on happy occasions - such as when I got engaged or my sister and my birthday. Along with it being a place I love going with my family, it is also one of the most delightful pubs to go to with friends.

, we would share a pint of prawns and have a couple of Guinness', now that I am older my friends and I treat ourselves to a seafood platter and a couple of bottles of wine. It has aged so beautifully. Unlike so many of the pubs in Notting Hill, it has kept the same clientele throughout my life, there are still regulars and not just yuppies (I sadly am now a yuppie).

It is, I believe, a jewel in the crown of Notting Hill, although I live a little further away now it is still one of my top destinations to go to when we can. I think you can tell I adore the place and have never had any bad experiences there, on the contrary, I have had some of the funniest and interesting meetings of my life there. It is a magnet to weird and wonderful people - long may that continue.

Thank you so much,

Dear Westminster City Council,

The Cow is not only the epicentre for the Nottinghill community and the wider plains of London, but rather it is the hub for which individuals like my self seek refuge. The Cow is a creative, supportive, community that upholds true British values of virtue, goodwill and jolly good ale. For The Cow is an institution, an inclusive space that welcomes all. For me, The Cow is where I had my first Guinness within a safe and supportive environment.

For whatever reasons this inquiry into the premises license is taking place, for good reason I am sure, I must honestly share with you that The Cow is a place in which people come together in communion. Something that is so necessary in this challenging time of divide that the pandemic has created. We must, no, we need to come together in great British tradition do so over a cold ale and a hearty meal. Westminster, we need The Cow. Please, from the bottom of my heart, go kindly on this review and take into consideration that The Cow is our heartbeat.

To whom it may concern,

I am deeply sadden to find out that my favourite establishment in Notting Hill and my spiritual home the cow is under threat from Westminster Council, I believe this must be some kind of mistake or a joke.

The Cow pub and dining rooms, is the beating heart of the community, where patrons of all ages and backgrounds mix together with no system or class divide. The food is extremely good and an establishment I would frequent 2/3 times week, when Covid allows. For me it is a social meeting place close to my home friends and family, a meeting point to go for a Sunday Roast. I believe my mental health would suffer without this community hang out spot!

Never have I witnessed crime or disorder at the Cow. The staff are always in control and many of them have been working there longer then I have been visiting 10 years!

Please keep me informed!

Dear sir/Madam,

I write in support of the Cow Pub, 89 Westbourne Park Rd.
I am compelled to do so because I consider The Cow to be the finest pub in London.

The Cow is a very friendly local pub - welcoming staff who have been there as long as I can remember, and very friendly customers.
Sometimes I go there on my own, safe in the knowledge that I might make a new friend or just have a chat with the barman.
I have never seen any trouble there, only happy faces and the sound of good conversation and laughter.

The Cow has retained traditional British pub values, not just in the atmosphere it creates inside, but also in the food and beverage it serves.
This is the pub I always take foreign visitors to, in order to give them the best experience of quality British pub food and properly presented ale.

We are losing too many good, traditional pubs in London and I would be devastated to see this one go.

God Save the Cow.

Any semblance of nightlife and vibrancy has shrunk already so much in the city and it would really be a huge loss to the neighbourhood to lose this well-loved institution.

I am sure that the people purchasing homes around The Cow are aware they are buying next to two pubs and do it for that exact reason.

Don't inflict unnecessary pain to a place that brings so much cohesion to its community.

Dear Sir/Madam,

Over the past 26 years, THE COW has been the heart of the local community, being the most wonderful traditional pub that serves good food and drink.

I gather that Westminster City Council have issued a review of THE COW'S premises licence and that this has been sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

Never in all the years that I have been to THE COW have I witnessed any misconduct or felt threatened in any way. It is not known for gathering loud and disorderly people either, so I am rather astounded that their licence is under review.

Traditional pubs like THE COW are an important asset to our community and to lose them would be so tragic as so many are being turned into awful bijou wine bars throughout the country.

If there is one thing we have learnt and have missed over this last year during the lockdown, is that we need places like THE COW, where people can pop in and meet friends and family. The hospitality world has been hit incredibly badly by the pandemic by having to close their doors, so this will be a mighty blow to the local community if the council is considering withdrawing their licence.

The one thing that so many people are looking forward to once this pandemic is over, is to be able to have access to wonderful places like THE COW, the traditional British pub. It has always been a favourite with my family and friends.

It is so important that we as a community and the council support businesses like THE COW to survive after the lockdown as they bring so much to the local community in a positive way.

With kind regards,

Hello,

This is regarding the possibility that The Cow pub might be closed down. I live opposite The Cow (next to the Westbourne) and have lived there for just over 10 years now. The Cow is really the life and soul of the neighbourhood and without it the area would entirely lose any sign of life. Not only is the food delicious both downstairs and in the upstairs dining room, the staff are all incredibly welcoming and the people who go to the Cow are friendly.

Of all the time I've lived opposite The Cow I have never once seen or heard anything out of the ordinary, nothing that is different from the standard London pub. With the Buddhist Centre being converted into a house recently, Lucky 7 closing down, and more and more signs of life closing it would be the greatest shame for The Cow to go. On top of this, with lockdown coming to an end, the idea of The Cow not being there is truly upsetting.

I hope that Westminster will carefully consider how important places like The Cow are to the community of Westbourne Park, particularly in this time of isolation.

Thank you,

I'm writing to express my shock and anger at the licence review of The Cow, ref: 21/00981/LIREVP.

Any suggestion that it is a public nuisance, a threat to public safety or has anything to do with crime and disorder are totally ridiculous. To the contrary, it is a fundamental part of the community and loved by 1000s of residence of your borough (and world wide).

You'll find that this review is incredibly poorly received and will face immense opposition. It shows a total lack of understanding of the residence of the area and the immensely important role establishments like The Cow play.

All the best,

To whom it may concern

I am emailing you concerning the license review of The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Room on Westbourne Park Road.

It is challenging to articulate the warmth held for this pearl of the community without using the cliché "heartbeat". However it's true. Despite the food being of high end quality and the drinks varied and affordability accommodated, the tasting notes I depart with override both those facts. Similarly although it is a place that provides employment and a prosperity that is re-invested over and over again down the supply lines, the resonating fragrance is one of welcome, warmth and personal touch.

There are those that know of it's reputation for quality and visit as a well deserved destination experience but the core of the clientele are local. Friendships are forged, lives shared, problems solved and triumphs/life stages celebrated. It is a filter of all life that has multiple benefits as a community nucleus. Most people feel comfortable enough to visit alone knowing that they will encounter someone familiar they can say hello to and also know the serving staff by their first names. This is a precious home from home within the neighbourhood.

As mental health is so topical I can't help but highlight how the Cow is an arena where people feel safe, welcome and at ease to process their days and connect with others. This couldn't be more vital right now. Once restrictions are lifted the nation is going to start the healing process. The Cow will, without question, be a life line for people.

I have only ever experienced outstanding service, quality F&B, warmth and a welcoming ambience. I have never heard so much as an argument let alone disruption or disturbance. Never.

The importance of the Cow's presence within the neighbourhood can't be underestimated. The community would be categorically devastated should any decision to close it's doors was made. I can't be more emphatic about this.

It isn't just a place to eat and drink - it would be foolish to perceive it as such. It is a best friend, a wise uncle, a warm mother a generous grand father, it is an energy that is extended to all who walk through it's doors who then unbeknowningly become part of it's essence.

Hi there,

I'm writing in response to the review of The Cow's Premises License.

The Cow is a wonderful place, full of happiness and soul. It's many peoples favourite place in London, including mine and my whole family's.

There's hardly any places or pubs like this anymore, it feels like your family is greeting you every time you go in with a hearty home cooked meal and there's a real sense of community and coming together, which we all really need - particularly after the year we've had.

I feel that if The Cow were to cease to exist it would be at the detriment of people's happiness and mental health. Local residents know that they can always rely on The Cow when they need somewhere to go and just be with people, old or young. Anyone is welcome at The Cow and everyone is always friendly.

Please let us keep our favourite pub in Notting Hill.

Dear Westminster City Council,

It has been brought to my attention through social media that the Council is reviewing the premise license for The Cow pub at 89 Westbourne Park Road W2 5QH - I believe the reference number for this particular review is 21/00981/LIREVP.

The Cow is a Notting Hill institution that encapsulates the best of British pub culture. I moved to the UK from Australia going on 11 years ago now and immediately found a home away from home - the environment at The Cow has always been welcoming, friendly, and unassuming; I have nursed a drink alone, brought many friends there and met many new friends there over a quiet pint. I have not just celebrated and commiserated significant life events there but have simply passed the time enjoyably in the evening or on the weekend at The Cow for no reason in particular.

It goes without saying that I have never experienced disorderly behaviour or felt like my safety was at risk while frequenting this venue. When the premise was able to open last summer they were vigilant about compliance with covid restrictions and this put my mind at ease.

After a long, difficult year of lockdown, I look forward to enjoying a Guinness with my friends and neighbours at The Cow in June.

Sincerely,

As such, pub life should be encouraged rather than hindered. Once the pandemic is over and restrictions are lifted pubs, such as The Cow, will play a vital part in helping communities get back on their feet both socially and economically.*

To whom it may concern,
I have been made aware that there has been a review issued by yourselves for the Cow Pub & Dining Rooms. The review, I understand, has been sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I understand this is a process that needs to be followed now that it has been initiated. As such I would like to express my shock and dismay firstly that this concerns have even been raised regarding this much loved venue.

I have been eating and drinking at the Cow for at least two decades. In this time I have never experienced any issues that, as a woman would concern me. Never have I felt threatened by the potential for, or in fact experienced any crimes. In fact one of my main reasons for attending this venue is its lack of the type clientele that would make me feel that this would be an issue.

The Cow has been a place were creative types like to mingle and share time together. I have never experienced them to be rowdy or have they caused any nuisance to the wider community.

I do hope this process is brought to a swift conclusion and that you will find in the process of your investigation that this venue is a much loved asset to the community that serves excellent food, with a safe and creative atmosphere that would be sorely missed should their licence be revoked.

Hello,

I would like to reach out to you to make sure you know how important it is to me that The Cow continues to be able to operate.

It's an absolute GEM. It's one of the key institutions in the neighbourhood that makes Notting Hill itself so special. It's featured prominently in many of my most important memories in London, including my first early dates with my now fiancé, and it has provided the space for so many of us to reinforce existing friendships, meet new friends, and to just relax and enjoy a great meal and great vibes. The staff of The Cow get it so right, as it has a unique atmosphere, feels like home, and is unique in a sea of increasingly corporate/chain restaurants/coffee shops, etc. It's one of the first places I take people who visit London. It's in a word, perfect.

I can't tell you how many times my friends have daydreamed-out-loud about with each other about how joyous it will be to spend time with each other in the future, at The Cow, as soon as we can, after the pandemic is over. It's legitimately one of the key things we're looking forward to, to get us through this otherwise bleak time.

It's so important that this spot stays open.

I can also confirm that I have never experienced any crime, disorder, or public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. I have also never heard any complaints of such from the dozens of people I know who have been and regularly frequent the pub.

Please let me know if I may be of any other assistance here.

All the best,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you concerning the licensing over The Cow restaurant and pub on Westbourne Park road. [REDACTED] have been a regular at The Cow.

The Cow is full of love and joy. It is one of the last remaining places in Notting hill that is authentic. In the ever increasing gentrification of W11 and W10, it would be a total disgrace to further push out the people who live here. The Cow is arguably one of the best assets to me, and to our locals.

It is the duty of the council to prevent further gentrification of the area, and in doing so, keeping housing prices low, social behaviour in order, and people in jobs. Especially in light of COVID 19 with vast financial hardship, through shutting down The Cow, you, our council, will be once again responsible for the mistreatment of our residents. It would be a total disgrace to take away the licensing, especially over mistruths. Never have I experienced any of the allegations made against The Cow concerning public nuisance and safety, rather, quite the opposite.

Please, keep the spirit of Notting Hill alive and do not take away The Cow's licensing.

Kind regards,

Dear Westminster Council,

I am extremely disappointed to hear you have issued a review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

[REDACTED] I have been a regular at The Cow for the past 25 years and not ever have I questioned my safety nor have I witnessed or experienced any crime or public nuisance.

The Cow is a precious hub in our Notting Hill community, a melting pot of wonderful people from all walks of life who value connection, conversation, enjoyment of watching sports in a small collective, laughter and music from a juke box... it also is a really great place to meet people from all over the world it has a global community with real heart.

I am yet to find a Premises that rivals, or even comes close, to attracting such a diverse community across age, gender, ethnicity and socioeconomic backgrounds. The collision of which are the foundation for safe, respectful, inclusive and thriving communities.

We have all spent the last 12 months isolated, the knock on effect of removing a cultured community haven like this is bleak and frankly suggests you are misinformed about your constituents, rate and tax payers, visitors alike.

I note the council has ambitious plans in the borough to "reinforce its status as a world class, global exemplar and cultural, leisure and economic powerhouse", perhaps standing behind this local business, The Cow - an institution of the area, will reinforce that position and stop residents fleeing in the hoards to the countryside having lost the last good pub in London!

Sincerely,

Hi there,

I am writing to express my support for The Cow pub in Westbourne Grove. I've spent many a wonderful evening there, it is a well loved institution and an important central hub and landmark for Notting Hill. To shut it down would be an enormous tragedy. The food is always impeccable and the atmosphere friendly and convivial. There's nowhere like it. I've never experienced any sort of disorder or safety concerns in the many years I've been going.

Protect our traditional pubs!

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing in connection with the Licensing Sub-Committee's review of the premises license for The Cow, the pub on Westbourne Park Road. I am a resident of Westminster.

The pub is a long-standing Notting Hill institution and is one of the few remaining historic pubs in this part of Westminster, many having been converted to residential or other uses. In my view it is important that The Cow is protected not least because it is one of those rare examples of a pub that still caters for the local community as well as visitors to the area. It has retained its old fashioned charm and has not succumbed to the bland interiors and catering formal of the gastro pubs in the area. For this it should be lauded not pilloried.

I do not know the background as to why the Council is planning on reviewing the premises license. I can only presume that a complaint has been brought by the police, or perhaps new residents to the area, about the way the premises are managed. These complaints can be overcome relatively easily with conditions on the license which I am sure the pub would not hesitate to comply with.

For my part I have never experienced crime and disorder at The Cow or indeed any anti-social behaviour. In my experience The Cow's customers are always well-behaved and friendly and the staff welcoming and responsible.

Yours sincerely

To whom it may concern,

I understand that The Cow's licence is under review. As someone who grew up in the area and has been a regular at the establishment since it opened, I am horrified by the idea that it should be closed. It is the most community spirited pub I've ever been to. I have never witnessed any disorder. The staff are conscientious and thorough in every respect. It is the most brilliantly run place, and it engenders a spirit of politeness, warmth and respect between all that go there. It's a great shame there aren't more places like it. The Cow is unique and it would be an enormous loss to the area and to London, if it were to close.

Hi folks,

I write in support of my favourite local pub, The Cow on Westbourne Park Road. It's come to my attention that the Council has issued a review of the pub's Premises Licence. I write on behalf of myself and my [REDACTED] [REDACTED] to confirm our full support for renewal of this licence. The Cow is a local institution. It is a social hub for the community and a place for folks (in happier times) to congregate and socialise. I've made lifelong friendships within its walls. It looks after the local people in the community and provides a warm welcome to visitors too. I've been a regular since [REDACTED] and can genuinely say that I have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the pub or whilst passing by (wishing I was stopping in). At a time when so many hospitality businesses are on their knees, places like The Cow need our support. I'm certain that, when we're allowed to visit again, The Cow will be a place where people come to reconnect with a little bit of 'life before Covid'. The world will be all the poorer if it isn't there when we need it most.

Best wishes,

I live locally to The Cow (about a 15 min walk away) and have loved having it as an option as a local pub that serves amazing food and has a great environment. My husband and I always take our out-of-town friends there and they always rave about how lucky we are to have such an amazing place so close to us. Closing The Cow would be a huge loss to the community as having somewhere really special to go for a drink and/or a nice meal. Especially with our hospitality sector finally being able to reopen, we were looking forward to soon being able to visit The Cow again.

I can also confirm that I have never felt unsafe at The Cow nor experienced any anti-social behaviour while at The Cow or in the neighbourhood.

To whom it may concern,

We have been made aware that the Westminster City Council have issued a Review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

We do believe that The Cow is an institution and a great asset in Notting Hill. This pub is run by a great management and a friendly staff. We actually do need more places like this one. Furthermore we have never experienced any disturbance or anything related to public nuisance or disorder and we are regular clients for the last 10 years.

The Cow is part of the culture and an amazing focal point for the local community and a closure would be disastrous for the area, as it is this type of pub that gave Notting Hill the amazing reputation it has gained over the years.

With hopes that The Cow will remain open for the years to come,

Sincerely,

Dear Sir / Madam,

I'm writing with regard to the pending review of the license of The Cow public house on Westbourne Park Road.

I have drunk or eaten at The Cow on average half a dozen times a year for nearly three decades. I have never, in all of those visits, witnessed any public disorder or anti-social behaviour. In no way could this rather refined gastropub be described as the sort of premises conducive to disorder or crime.

With regard to the question of 'public nuisance', The Cow's status as an asset to the valuable 'brand' of Notting Hill can hardly be underestimated. As an arts-sector professional, I have found it tremendously helpful to be able to host meetings at The Cow - there is literally no other venue in the district which leaves such a good impression of West London's vibrancy on visitors both from the UK and outside of it. The openly tourist-oriented Portobello Road brings many visitors to the area, but the status of Notting Hill as a destination both for Londoners and international visitors is dependent upon places like The Cow - not a tourist trap, but a defining example of the area's reputation for liveliness and colour. These are the qualities that can always be redefined as 'public nuisance' by short-term interests: I urge the Council to consider the longer-term interests of Notting Hill in supporting this great asset to the community.

Yours faithfully,

Dear sir madam

I have visited the Cow from time to time over the last 20 years. It is one of the places in notting hill that makes the area feel like a community. Friends and strangers gather there and make friends and talk. People go away for a long time and then when they go back to the Cow, the staff or customers recognise and welcome them and all is well again.

We should have more places like the Cow that make communities strong. We should not be endangering their ability to operate

I don't know why you have been asked to review the licence and I am certain the complaints have no validity.

To whom it may concern

We are writing to voice my concern that Westminster Council is reviewing the premises licence for The Cow public house.

The Cow is a world famous destination bar and restaurant and is a local institution in the area. We have been customers of The Cow since we first moved to London in 1998 and we have enjoyed many sociable evenings there. The atmosphere is always friendly and jovial and the food and drinks are always excellent. The staff are courteous and professional and the premises is always well maintained. Neither we, nor any of our friends or neighbours, have ever witnessed a single incident of public nuisance in the 20 years of being customers.

It is imperative that Westminster Council acts to preserve the local independent operators in this area. The Cow is an anchor tenant for the area at the corner of Westbourne Park Road and Westbourne Villas. This stretch of small independent retailers is one of the few areas that has managed to maintain its identity in the face of an onslaught anonymous chain stores and restaurants and The Cow is an essential part of that identity.

It is extremely disappointing that Westminster Council is even reviewing this licence and we sincerely hope that the Council takes into account the feedback of the people who live in the community who are very upset that one of true assets of the neighbourhood is under threat.

To Whom It May Concern: (REF: 21/00981/LIREVP)

I wish to express my support towards The Cow which I understand has been issued with a review of their premises licence.

The Cow is the beating heart of Notting Hill. It represents the tapestry of our community by welcoming people from ALL walks of life and I have been a customer for many years prior. I would go as far as to say its existence contributed to my decision to move to the area.

It is the definition of 'going to your local'. It is one of the few establishments that exists in our neighbourhood which I can honestly say this about. I have met some wonderful individuals there. I have had girlfriends meet boyfriends and then we've gone back to cry over them when it didn't work out!! But either way the central theme is we always go back because the Cow makes you feel like you're at home and welcomes you with the same regular friendly faces from both staff and the locals you meet along the way.

As a non-meat eater it is also the only place that can get me to eat a Chicken Kiev because it is just that good that I can't say no!!!

Writing this has also reminded me of a time when an elderly gentleman was riding his mobility scooter on the pavement opposite the pub. He somehow managed to topple his buggy and fell into the road, with the buggy on top of him. Staff and customers of the Cow rushed to his assistance, comforting him and arranging medical help. He was so disorientated but reassured by this little community rushing to his aid.

Pubs are a part of our country's make up. We should be trying to keep them thriving and alive. The hospitality industry has been on its knees over the last year and for the Cow to now be facing this review can only be adding to the already unbearable stress this industry has had to cope with.

I want to finally add that at no time have I experienced crime and disorder or been witness to any public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the Cow. If anything, it has been quite the opposite.

I hope that the Cow is saved and our community gets to keep its heart.

With many thanks,

I'm writing with regard to the Premises License review of The Cow pub. I was shocked to hear that this beloved local institution was under threat of closure. I live very locally and consider myself an "irregular" customer. It is one of those rare places which welcomes people of all ages, types and stripes and its offer of Guinness, oysters and a roaring fire is far removed from the other cookie cutter pubs in the area. Indeed it seems to be the other pubs which attract large groups of noisy young people from outside the area. None of which I actually mind as it all adds to the character and life of the area. I have never felt threatened or inconvenienced by the clientele of The Cow even on the few nights a year when the crowds inevitably spill on the street. The traffic calming on that corner works very well anyway. If there is any crime I have never seen it and suspect that if it does happen it is far more petty than this complaint. If some people here want to live in the suburbs they should go there. This is central London and we live in a mixed and colourful community. The Cow is a valued local amenity and a neighbourhood institution. It would be a travesty if it lost its license.

Yours faithfully

Good afternoon,

Today I have heard the news that Westminster Council have issued a review of The Cow's premises licence on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I was very surprised to hear this as this goes against everything I have ever experienced at The Cow. I feel compelled to write to you to question why this review is being undertaken and to provide you with some insight into my experience of the Cow having been a patron for over 10 years.

The Cow is considered by many to be one of, if not the finest pub in London. Renowned for its perfect pints and honest mouth-watering grub. The food and booze however only contribute in part to its charm. It's the atmosphere that is created with our eyes and ears more so than our tastebuds that make The Cow, The Cow.

From the moment you walk through the curtains, The Cow treats us all equally. Where the Lawyer, the postman and the artist can all bat the breeze over a few pints. The Cow acts as a focal point and integral part of the community and somewhere that anyone can feel a sense of belonging.

For me The Cow is a place I can walk into on my own and walk out having made a new friend. A place of first dates, celebrations, farewells, a meeting point or just to forget about life for while...

I have never felt anything but safe at The Cow and never witness any crime or disorder. Quite the antithesis in fact. I only ever get a positive vibe from the place and often meet interesting, social and kind people there.

William Blake once said a good local pub has much in common with a Church, except that a pub is warmer, and there's more conversation. A Church also requires a man of the cloth to shepherd his congregation. At the Cow you have Petro, a gentleman and without question the most capable Landlord I have met who operates in an exemplary manner.

I am not aware of the rationale for the review at this time. However, I feel I can be confident in my assumption that the social and economic benefits, happiness and sense of community that this institution brings far outweigh the motives for this review. I request that you please be reasonable and mindful of what The Cow means to its staff, patrons, community and the fabric of London. This is more than just a pub.

Thank you

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to you after hearing from Tom Conran that The Cow's Premises Licence is up for review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and prevention of crime and disorder.

It is hard to believe that these could be words associated with The Cow in fact what it represents in my experience is quite the opposite. I find this whole thing so odd that I wouldn't be at all surprised if there was some malevolence at work here cooked up by someone who wants to get hold of the site The Cow sits on.

The Cow is now one of the very few local pubs still in existence in the area, it is an independently owned business with a wonderful atmosphere, really good food and an authentic local and regular clientele. These things make it a place to be treasured.

Please take a moment to remember The Cow has been a cornerstone of this neighbourhood for the past 26 years. I have been going to it since it opened. Some of the bar tenders are still the same. The menu is still the same. Many of the patrons are still the same although many are also another generation now, even two. It is a wonderful establishment that represents all the most wholesome qualities of a well loved local pub and dining room and really none of the ones cited in your review.

When we are emerging from a year of unimaginable financial horror for the hospitality industry - and more to the point here - independent owners like Tom Conran, I can't imagine why just as he is about to re-open and take his staff off furlough you are looking at closing him down and making them redundant.

It would be such a great shame to take the license from an establishment like The Cow and for it to be replaced....by what? Cote? Aubaine? Some indistinguishable chain restaurant owned by venture capitalists that will be gone in three years to be replaced by another? A shop selling pasta and expensive olive oil?

I always look to see if there is anyone I know sitting outside as I drive past - there usually is - this is becoming more and more unusual in Notting Hill. The Cow offers a sense of community, a place where friends meet and bump into each other, it has history, authenticity and presence.

The Cow is the genuine embodiment of what those frightful hoardings on the 'luxury apartment' developments in the area are trying to convey with their photographs of 'attractive, happy locals'. They actually fake up what The Cow actually delivers. The Cow is not something cooked up by a branding consultant WFH somewhere a long way from Westbourne Park Road for a building that is most likely going to sit empty.

Please seek to preserve this very special corner of the borough and our much loved, local pub.

With my very best wishes, [REDACTED]

To whom it may concern

[REDACTED] I was fortunate enough to have The Cow as my local pub. It is, quite simply, a remarkable establishment; a true community pub where with other locals I watched two world cups, several Wimbledon tournaments, and joined in the good cheer of St Patrick's Day, St David's Day and Burns' Night, as well as the conviviality of Notting Hill Carnival. I have celebrated birthdays, graduations and wedding anniversaries there, made life-long friends in its four walls - all, moreover, drawn from every walk of life but united by being good people.

I've missed the place so much since I moved to Newcastle. There are few places in the world quite like it. I've introduced friends from all corners of the planet to The Cow; none of whom have ever been disappointed after the extent of my hype on its behalf. If, to bend the lyrics of the hit song, 'a good pub these days is hard to find', The Cow more than fulfils what one might be seeking when they desire an exemplary example of the form: the elusive, but much-touted, great pub.

The Cow is not only warm and welcoming, over the years it has 'policed itself' in that bad behaviour and anti-social activity is not tolerated. The only times door staff are required are on occasions, such as Carnival, where there are more strangers than usual. The owner, Tom Conran, has worked tirelessly to create such a convivial, friendly space that serves incredible fresh and honest home-cooked food at very good prices (and the best pint of Guinness this side of the Irish Sea). As a symptom of this, at one point, I worked it out that it was less expensive to have my evening meal in The Cow than to purchase food and cook it at home. This is an important aspect of the place (and a sign of the genius of its creator): in feeding people at such reasonable prices, it has been a vital place in the local community.

When I read about the licence review, and the insinuation of anti-social activity, accusations of 'public nuisance', crime and 'safety issues', I had to - literally - do a double take. It is genuinely confusing. This is not, and never has been, a fitting description of my local pub. In fact, it is quite the reverse. It is a highly ethical, safe and open environment. If only the world outside of its walls was as just and as safe.

A small example, I was mugged and left for dead on North Pole Road in the summer of 2014. I had to have the right side of my face reconstructed in Northwick Park Hospital. The Cow, its staff and its regulars were my support network in the aftermath. The pub's staff and clientele were outraged at what happened and offered me a safe haven to recover from the trauma, both physical and mental. This is, obviously, beyond the remit of an establishment's whose primary purpose is to make money. But The Cow, and as is becoming apparent, is no ordinary institution. It cares about what happens to members of its community.

A word on the staff: the head barman - Petro - has won 'cellar man of the year' many times. This, in itself, is a sign of the esteem in which the pub is held by the wider industry. I could talk about the rest of the staff in similar terms.

In a world where pubs, let alone first-class examples, are facing closure The Cow needs support. It is a remarkable little institution. My plan, after lockdown is lifted - and it is safe to venture out - is to get on a train to London and take to my partner to a place that holds so, so many happy memories. West London would be greatly impoverished if there was no Cow (as would the rest of the city). People travel far and wide to experience its good cheer and its highly unique atmosphere. It is not just 'another pub'. One would do well to heed the sentiments of the Joni Mitchell song, Big Yellow Taxi: 'doesn't it always seem to go, you don't what you've got when it's gone'.

Hello,

I am writing in support of The Cow pub and to say how disappointed I am to hear their license is under review.

I am a local of the area and have lived in this part of London, on and off, since 1998.

will go into mourning as if they have lost a close loved one if it closes. I have nothing but praise for the team who have created, and run, such a wonderful establishment. And running a pub - even a world-class one - is a gargantuan task in today's climate. But Tom Conran and Co are doing something right if they can, with seeming ease, get many people in the area to depart their luxury dwellings for a few good hours within its walls, and to do with such regularly. No doubt, you will be hearing from many of them.

If I can be of any further help in this matter, please do not hesitate to contact me, either by phone or email.

Dear Westminster City Council,

It is with deep sadness that I become aware of The Cow's license review.

Years ago I was lucky enough to come across the most amazing pub. Its location, staff, ambiance and food marked my UK experience.

Being there made me realize what community means. Both tourists and regulars can for sure feel at home, even if it is for just one night, one meal or a pint.

The place exceeded by far any sort of expectation I may have had regarding London, the pub marked me much more than any landmark ever did. Thus me recommending at least one "evening at The Cow" when in town, to anyone I knew would visit the city. Trust me, my friends and family still thank me to this day.

I cannot stress this enough, The Cow gives British food a good name. And last but not least, it is a safe spot, not to mention super fun.

So please Westminster City Council, save The Cow.

To Whom It May Concern,

The Cow is a Westbourne Park, Notting Hill and London institution. Our neighbourhood has systematically been stripped of its unique personality over years and years, in a world of homogenous 'gastro' pubs, The Cow has remained consistent and original, a true London pub the likes of which you councils seem desperate to be rid of. How many pubs are we losing every week and Covid will exacerbate the issue. Why are London councils destroying such an asset to our culture and community.

In The Cow, you meet all sorts of people, locals mix readily with tourists and I have never known a pub where you end up talking to strangers every time you go in, it is a wonderful place and a credit to London. Luca has worked there for as long as I can remember as have other staff members, there is something special about that, they are part of our community.

I walk around our neighbourhood, the refuse bin areas are disgraceful, the pavements are full of dog mess, the streets are littered, nothing is ever done to improve these issues but the licensing team are very quick to reprimand licensees.

If The Cow were to be forced to close the area and the community would be the losers. Reprimand if appropriate but to close would be heavy handed and hurt those who have already had a couple of tough years. If you asked me about what I looked forward to about coming out of lockdown, it would be a pint of Guinness and the fish soup in The Cow.

I implore the council to think again.

I write in reference to the issued review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

With my many fellow patrons of The Cow, I speak up in defence of the unparalleled positive position The Cow holds within our community.

My understanding is that the review is brought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder. Over the past 20 years of living in Notting Hill, at one point mere doors from The Cow, I have never once witnessed public nuisance, anything pertaining to safety issues, or anything which could lead to crime or disorder (let alone crime or disorder itself); quite the contrary. The Cow has always been a safe haven for me: a place in which I could sit and read, write or plan lessons (I am a teacher); a place to meet friends and bring visiting loved ones; a place to come alone, in which I was sure to be met with a friendly welcome. It has been a home away from home.

Over the past 20 years, we as a community have felt the wrench of losing many personable, independent businesses and congregation points. It seems to me that, each time one is lost, the resulting bubbling frustration, loss of relaxed expression of kinship, and lack of shared hearth within the community are far more likely to be generators of public nuisance, public safety and potential crime and disorder, emanating from mental unhappiness and lack of commonality, community, spiritual warmth and good cheer. But of all these, the loss of The Cow would be the most heart-wrenching and shocking.

The Cow is a comparatively small space, but its outreach is vast, encompassing and stretching far beyond the community it serves. It is a glowing gem in the heart of England.

Very many thanks for your kind consideration of my support.

Please will you renew this license. We need individual places like "The Cow" with traditional values.

i have called at the Cow for 25 years and have never witnessed or experienced criminal, unsafe, disorderly or inconsiderate behaviour. It has never been my nearest public house but i consider it the best in the area and one of the best i know in London, certainly from my experience of years working in Westminster and living in the area. The Cow has won awards and maintained the highest standards throughout the years and has the same excellent management and front of house staff in charge throughout the 25 years.

A further few brief points that make the Cow unique in the rushed and somewhat impersonal life of the city are...

it is safe, relaxed and friendly...it doesn't cater for a clique, subgroup or narrow age range. at any time of day or evening i would be just as comfortable calling there with my elderly parents (80+) as with my late teenage children or a foreign visitor. i see many other local people who do the same. that cannot be said of a lot of pubs in the area.

i have made life long friendships through a chance meeting or introduction at the Cow with local people from diverse backgrounds and professions that i would not have met elsewhere.

i have not called at the Cow in 12 months of covid restrictions but i understand they have been thoroughly compliant and even voluntarily pre-empted the closure instructions. i am very much looking forward to calling there again confident that i will be able to, as i emphasise, without any fear of experiencing or witnessing nuisance, disorder or crime.

Best wishes,

Dear Sir/Madam,

As a long term customer of The Cow pub I wanted to bring to your attention the importance of this establishment.

Often referred to as 'the best pub in London' The Cow is for many people a place of community and friendship. An example of what a pub should be.

It is recognised as a place where the staff are unwaveringly polite. The food is exceptional and there is a great sense of community. If there is one particular purpose for pubs it is this, enabling people who might lack community in their personal lives to find it in such an establishment.

I have never experienced any bad behaviour, in or around the premises, and it is renowned for the politeness and civility of both the clients and staff.

It is in fact an establishment that Westminster Council should be very proud of. It's reputation goes beyond the shores of Britain and I have met people in many countries who speak highly of The Cow.

My only regret it that this is such a rare example and it is a shame that there are not more pubs of this quality in London.

With best regards

Dear Westminster County Council,

The Cow is an iconic pub of our time. I was there at the inception and have continued to frequent this classic, I have grown up with it, its' been the place of many birthdays and get togethers over the last 25 years or so. It is loved by everyone, locals and not so locals. It's an essential outpost, a thing of solidity amidst this perilous & chronically uncertain time.

It represents much that is good in a community, I have never experienced any safety issues or know of any crime or public nuisance or any disorder while at The Cow.

You can turn up place an order for the best Chicken Kiev and Greens, which always sets the world to rights.

Can't wait for it to re-open.

To whom it may concern,

It has come to my attention that Westminster Council has decided to put the licence of the Cow Pub under review on the basis of 'prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder'. I would like to know what exactly is the reason for this.

The Cow is a complete gem in the area and represents a real focal point for all the different communities in the area to come together and share the same place. The Cow is real, unlike many of the sterilised establishments strictly the refuge of the wealthy.

I have never experienced anything close to public safety issues or crime, nor have I ever heard of any such incidents occurring at the Cow.

To rescind the license of the Cow would be a tragedy and represent another step away from authenticity.

I urge you to reconsider.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sirs,

I am contacting you to show my support for The Cow Pub & Dining Rooms.

I have been going to The Cow for over 25 years since I was first taken there for dinner by . It has remained a firm favourite all these years and never in all that time have I ever felt a threat to myself or witnessed any disturbances at all!

The atmosphere is always friendly due to the great staff - some who have been there from the beginning. The wonderful thing about The Cow is the incredible mix of people - a true representation of the amazingness of the area.

I really do think it is one of the few places in London where you would have Victoria Beckham or Stella McCartney or Sting casually eating a pint of prawns next to a pubs variety of regulars and it being just fine, just marvellous, just cool.

The Cow is so important to the area, it's part of its history - you cannot close it down.

Not only that, it attracts swathes of people from further afield, enriching the area and making it an exciting and attractive place to visit.*

Hello,

I'm writing in response to the news that license of The Cow Pub, 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH is under review.

[REDACTED] have frequented many London pubs. There are very few of these that have had quite the impact on me like The Cow.

As a single woman there aren't many bars or pubs I'd feel comfortable going alone. The Cow is one of them. I have never felt so at home and welcome. It is not only the staff, who always seem to know all patrons by name, but the customers who frequent it who have made it such a hub for the local community.

You can walk in and get talking to anyone, feel welcome and included and a part of something. That is extremely rare in this big city.

Once I sat outside with a friend as people I didn't know gathered around us to share our table. On that table was a local plumber, a model, an old guy from the local estate, a musician, a waitress and an entrepreneur. Of varying ages, races and demographics. They ALL knew each other. They laughed, they shared jokes, they asked about each other's lives and they included me and my friend in the conversations.

That is the perfect example of what a pub should be - the heart of the community, a safe place, where people can laugh, commiserate, share stories and enjoy each other's company. No matter who you are and where you come from, you are not only seen, but welcomed by an entire community at The Cow.

It would be a tragedy for London to lose a place so filled with history, stories and people, some who I know find this place a sanctuary and life blood to the area.

This is all before you get to the incredible food that is served up out of the smallest kitchen in London by some of the happiest chefs I've ever seen.

At this time in the world, more than ever, (I don't think anyone would argue) that what we need and what London needs - is community.

The Cow is community, the best community.

Westminster City Council:

Thank you in advance for your time. I sincerely appreciate attention towards this letter.

My name is

I have been visiting the UK since my first visit as a child at the age of 15 and have been a regular visitor since. It is a true privilege to have my current status as a UK resident.

I love The Cow. Simply love The Cow. And I'm not alone.

I've been a patron of The Cow for many years now. As an American, British pub culture is a huge attraction as we simply don't have pubs like yours in our country. At least not how they have been established here in the UK. The Cow is a beacon with everything that's RIGHT about pub culture. It's friendly, cozy and communal. I've made many friends over the years by visiting that establishment. It has such a positive personality and the experience is a beacon for the neighborhood around it. The staff it employs and customers (both local and visiting) all understand that the uniqueness of The Cow is not just about the business - it's about the experience and the community center it has become. The Cow is an iconic institution.

I sincerely hope that it is given the chance to continue doing business in that location. That location IS so much of The Cow experience. In a time when every pub is at risk because of Covid-19 it is sad to see that The Cow is targeted for closure for reasons beyond the pandemic. The neighborhood, community and customers all benefit from The Cow. Please don't take away such a precious cultural experience.

Dear Westminster Council,

ref 21/00981/LIREVP

I've just hear that you're reviewing the license of The Cow pub in Westbourne Grove, so I'm writing to show my wholehearted support for keeping this pub open.

The Cow is one of my favourite places in London to go for food and drink and I have been a customer of theirs for over 20 years. The atmosphere is wonderful, the Guinness is perfect, and the food - cooked fresh every day - is wonderful. Not to mention that it's always filled with friendly faces, welcoming one and all who go there.

I've read that you're worried about "public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder" - how on earth can any of these apply to The Cow? In my experience over the many years I've been going there, their clientele is and has always been warm, friendly and welcoming, as has their staff. In over 20 years, not once have I seen any crime or disorder, nor any public nuisance or safety issues, and to be honest, I actually find it incomprehensible that you're worried about these issues, as The Cow is a completely safe, crime-and-nuisance-free establishment.

Like any great pub, The Cow does get busy sometimes - though never so busy as to be unsafe. However it is by no means the busiest pub in the neighbourhood, Also, as you will be aware, it attracts a rather gentle and educated type of patron, with many (including myself) working professionally in arts and culture, unlike - without naming any names - certain other local licensed premises which you must know attract a much rougher crowd.

The Cow is one of the City of Westminster's true local gems - it must be preserved and its license must be renewed.

All the best,

Dear Westminster Licensing Team

This mail is formally providing my support for Westminster City Council to re-issue Licence for the Cow PH which is currently under review .(NOT REVOKE)

My support is based on the following key points:

1. The Cow PH provides a key and important social heart in the local community and an asset to the neighbourhood
2. As the Proprietor of a brewery I know only too well that the hospitality industry is already struggling to keep operating through the COVID pandemic without additionally City councils revoking licenses
3. As a regular tourist visitor I have never encountered or seen any crime or disorder / public order incidents on my visits.
4. If claims of public disorder have been alleged then they should be addressed independently.
5. Can WCC provide factual evidence that shows the number of police arrests that have involved THE COW PH clietel and any public disorder warning provided to the COW PH ?
6. Responses to point 5 would be tacit in the process of invoking the licence.
7. As part of the WCC review it is important that the review takes on board the other 4 very local licence establishments, along with takeaways & food shops - and does not single out the Cow PH as the single cause to any alleged public disorder incidents.

I look forward in hearing from you with confirmation that my mail has been received and processed

To whom this may concern,

I was made aware of the (/my) council's intentions of reviewing the premise licence for The Cow, my local pub, a few weeks ago.

It came as quite a shock, seeing as The Cow is simply one of a kind, and such an incredible asset to our community- and the idea of it closing down due to the council putting it under threat is a terrific shame.

I have never in my fifteen years of (frequently) frequenting the Cow, known of it causing any harm or worry to the area. It is a pub, which of course inevitably will sometimes have to deal with the repercussions and consequences of its customers having had a few too many drinks, but alongside the other public houses in the area, it is a place of joy, cheer, outstanding food and positive vibes.

I have never felt vulnerable or unsafe at the cow- quite the contrary, it seems to bring out the charm in all of its customers- perhaps due to its quaint and delightful atmosphere, its heroic staff- including the lovely Petro who has worked there for 25 years and knows pretty much all the customers by name- it is by no means a place of crime or hostility.

I very much hope that the council come to understand how special this pub is, and that encouraging it to close would be hugely upsetting for all of West London.

My thanks in advance,

Hello,

I am writing today on behalf of our beloved pub The Cow, in Westbourne Park Road. We have been [REDACTED] of The Cow for nearly 22 of their 25 years, never more than a stone's throw away, and have relied on it as our only true local. This charming, old school, loyal place has been a fixture in our lives from our single days through the birth and growth of our three children (two of whom are now devoted fans as well). The food and the drink are excellent, and more importantly, the sense of neighbourhood and loyal camaraderie - I can always find a familiar face, and, more often than not, bump into a great friend. I am not a big drinker - and I still feel very strongly about this.

Notting Hill has always been a charming place but the truly special custodians of the vibe are getting fewer and farther in between. Please, please, please do not take this one away from us. In all of the past two decades we have never had a bad experience at the pub or outside of it (we walk by it often several times per day) and love that it has a sense of life even on a quiet day. The staff have been around forever and the clientele is steadfast in their sense of community.

I have never, I repeat, NEVER experienced any sense of a nuisance or being unsafe because of The Cow and would argue, quite adamantly, that it creates a safer space along Westbourne Park Road than would exist without it. We have, further down the road on either side, had experiences that were less than ideal and feel that the community at The Cow provide a sense of neighbourhood watch that would be sorely missed. While other London pubs (particularly on a hot sunny day) can get terribly messy and the crowds can get belligerent I have always found The Cow crowd to be overall quite chill - cool, calm and collected.

Dear Sir/Madam;

I am writing to strongly advocate for the Cow restaurant and pub as I understand their premises license is under review.

I moved to London 21yrs ago and was lucky enough reside in Westminster nearby the Cow. From my first visit to the Cow I felt welcome in the neighbourhood and feelings of alienation grew towards attachment. The staff and regulars are warm and the pub retains a "neighbourhood" feeling that is so easily lost in an era of corporate excess and generic patina. Our community draws tourists and migrants from across the world through its unique blend of cultures and traditions. That welcoming "vibe" relies on both the authenticity and variety of the local establishments of which the Cow is a stand-out contributor. There is no better place to randomly meet neighbours from all walks of life and no more welcoming place to happen upon as a wandering tourist.

I do not know what transgressions have led to this review, but present circumstances are unprecedented, and have impaired all of our decision making. We live in very trying times and will be ever more reliant on friends and loved ones as we (hopefully) emerge from this COVID crisis. Establishments such as the Cow are central to the very fabric of our community and we will lean heavily on such venues so that we can bond with friends and neighbours in finding our feet and maintaining a positive outlook. I simply cannot imagine the coming years without the Cow.

If more direct interaction is required I would be more than happy to make myself available in person or over the phone.
best regards,

Westminster City Council Licencing review of The Cow's Premises Licence

I trust that the review of the Licencing provision for The Cow at Westbourne Park Road is favourable and that the pub can continue providing a service like no other in London.

The quality of the food is exceptional at the pub, the drink is well priced and the staff are brilliant in providing a fabulous environment to meet one's friends in this unique pub. I have eaten at the pub many times and never have I been ill from the food. The oysters and shell fish are exceptional and those that are served are of the highest quality.

Never have I seen or heard of any public nuisance or disorder in or around the locality of The Cow. It is a haven of peacefulness within the fast pace of the surrounding London area. I have always felt safe in The Cow and I have no worries about leaving the pub in the evening to walk back to the tube station or to catch a taxi or bus. In this time of pubs closing down the authorities should be looking at ways for the existing pubs to be encouraged to remain open and not to put hurdles in the way of a very old and popular pub like The Cow.

To Whomever It May Concern,

As a local resident of 30 years standing, both in RBK&C and latterly Westminster Council, I am writing in support of The Cow pub retaining its premises license.

The Cow is a successful and much loved local amenity and is a unique and important asset which reflects the unusual area it serves. It is situated in an area which has one of the most diverse population in terms of communities, wealth and nationalities, possibly, in the world. I cannot think of any other institution locally or beyond that brings so many diverse sections of society together in a convivial and communal environment. The clientele is literally from all walks of society, and I have spent many hours socialising with people, many that I am unlikely to meet in any other setting. It would be more than a shame should it be forced to close, especially it being a part of a fast-dying breed of successful local pubs, and as an important part of London and English heritage. It is an important part of local life beyond its function as a pub. It is a place where news, both happy and sad, can be shared. The aftermath of the Grenfell tragedy comes to mind where I spent the afternoon at the Cow trying to make sense of it with others - and trying to give support to some who had personal ties to the fire.

I have spent probably too many hours enjoying the hospitality, and making genuine friends, both amongst patrons and staff. The staff deserve a special mention, as many have become much loved local characters. It is true that proceedings can occasionally get a little exuberant because it is a popular and successful venue, but I have never seen it spill over into the unreasonable or anti-social - I have seen a lot worse locally, and would stop coming should it go this way.

In conclusion, I think it would be a huge mistake should Westminster Council decide to withhold the Cow's license, especially in today's climate where we need successful and viable business from home truly appreciate.

The Cow embodies what a great Pub should be: A place where the public can congregate to celebrate and create moments that simply cannot be made elsewhere. But what is more, The Cow draws a crowd that is truly unique. On a night you might meet old friends and share a glass of the best Guinness in all of London (to me, it even rivals those served in Dublin). Or you might meet a chance encounter - a new friendly someone with a shared spirited passion for social interaction and tall tales. Someone who, like I, look forward to meeting those who we have yet to meet. Those who will inspire us, who will make us laugh and those who we will wish meet again. No other place but The Cow draws on and creates this spirit.

And that is why I have spent more time at The Cow than any other public building. More than any library, gallery, museum, restaurant, cinema, place of worship and even carparks. And certainly more time than at any other Pub in Notting Hill and London.

To me The Cow is a sanctuary for great conversations, for inclusivity, for great Guinness and wonderful food. I would hate to see its welcoming doors shut, and I truly hope you will consider the importance The Cow plays not only in my life, but in the lives of everyone in the area - and for the people who travel from afar to enjoy its spirit.

To whom it may concern,

I still remember the day my father took me for my first pint. We ambled down Westbourne Park Road on one of those typical London afternoons without a cloud in sight. We were greeted inside by the approving nods of our neighbours and friendly staff. As Pedro pulled my first pint of Guinness, the ritual wait allowed me to take in my surroundings, the artwork (in which to this day I still find something new I hadn't noticed before), neighbours quietly reading their books enjoying a cold pint, and couples sharing plates of fresh oysters preparing for the evening to come. Not even in Dublin's brewery itself have I had as good a pint of Guinness as the ones I have always enjoyed since then at The Cow.

The cow has played host to many pleasant memories, several of my birthdays including my 30th, interesting conversations with neighbours with whom I would have otherwise not had a forum to meet, and first dates with their occasional subsequent periods of mourning. I was shocked to learn recently that this all may be under threat, the thought that I may not one day be able to enjoy a pint there with my own son and his grandfather is a deeply saddening one.

It's also worth bearing in mind that the gastronomic industry has been one of the hardest hit during the pandemic, twice the amount of Pubs closed during 2020 than in previous years, let us not ruthlessly add to this number especially not with one of London's best pubs.

Although I am now living over 6000 miles away in Peru I truly dread to think that the next time I reach Heathrow I won't be able to order a taxi straight to The Cow, put my bags in a corner and enjoy a fish stew and a pint. The closure of The Cow would not only be a great personal loss but a tragedy for the community, I urge you to reconsider and do not allow this to happen.

I disagree with The Cow (21/00981/LIREVP) having its license revoked. It is a neighbourhood institution and a pocket of old-artistic notting hill which has been increasingly mainstreamed and painted over due to the gentrification of the area.

We need restaurants, pubs, and bars in our area; Notting Hill is rather lacking in good quality establishments where everyone is welcome, and The Cow is one of them. They are the hub of our community's culture and a place where traditions, values and spirit is forged.

To whom it may concern,

I live in the area and also have a retail shop [REDACTED] from The Cow, and am very concerned to hear that there may be a problem renewing their license?

I have never had any problem with the customers from The Cow, as they always seem well behaved and respectful of the surrounding residential neighbourhood.
The staff are a friendly bunch and have been of great help to me over the years.

To lose The Cow would severely damage the character of the area, as the staff and the customers are a big part of our community there.

The Cow is a well known and established bar with a restaurant serving fine food, and they draw people to the area.

I implore you to support them in these difficult times as we need establishments like this to bring back some life into our street when lockdown is finally lifted and we attempt to recover after these challenging times.

To whom it may concern,

Westminster Licensing have issued a review of the Cow's Premise license on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I would like to place on record the following; that I have lived in many areas of London and I have regularly gone to the Cow since its inception. It is a neighbourly, friendly, warm Pub that looks after its locals and many first comers. I have regularly met people from South Africa, LA, NYC, Europeans and Iceland who have been told to go to the Cow because of its perfect food, atmosphere and it is the perfect London pub.

To consider taking the licence away is a shocking indictment, in my view, of an increasingly poorly run council. In 20 years of dropping by the Cow I have never seen any violence, any raised voices and no disagreement and you should be championing this pub not condoning it. It is considered a gem. One of the really special places in London and you want to close it down.

I would kindly urge you to reconsider this.

Good Morning,

I am writing to you to let you know how important The Cow is. These days it's hard to find a traditional pub in London with the same traditional atmosphere. The Cow has some of the best pub food in London and owners that genuinely care about the industry.

If you lose The Cow you have lost the best. Go for yourself and see.

There are much worse establishments in London that you should be worrying about. Like Infernos in Clapham or illegal raves.

I have been a regular at the Cow for over 20 years. As well as great food and drink it has always been a place to meet friends, either intended or unintended, and while away the hours watching Notting Hill life going by. I have never experienced anything other than great positivity and ambience, with no public order issues, safety or other worries. It is very much a part of the fabric of the area and loved by all who go there.

Please consider this communication as in support of The Cow public house and restaurant in any forthcoming review of its premises licence.

[REDACTED] (as I have been for most of my life) and have known The Cow as a customer since its opening. In my opinion it remains a rare and valuable asset to the area and to the local community, with many happy memories for me personally. I have always found it to be a most welcoming and convivial place to meet friends and family, young and old. I have made new friends there, some of whom have traveled from abroad to visit The Cow.

Such places are rare in the area now and should be cherished. Any move that might result in its loss to the locale would be ill-advised and soon regretted. I simply cannot think of another area that would not welcome such a noted and highly regarded establishment.

I have never experienced any 'trouble' or disorder at The Cow, public nuisance nor any safety issues. (I have at other local establishments). I have always found it to be a most professionally run, friendly and civil venue - a credit to the neighbourhood and to all concerned.

Dear Sir / Madam,

Ref: 21/00981/LIREV. - THE COW

I am writing to you with regards to the current license review of The Cow Pub. I have been a customer of the pub for nearly 20 years and it is a truly a great pub which brings together so many different people in the West London community and has the most beautiful natural charm with original features as well as the most incredible team that have been running it for so many years. I feel it is such an asset to the area and I have so many fond memories spent at The Cow, the food is amazing and I eat here often as it is so close to where I live as well as socialising here regularly too.

I have only ever experienced The Cow to be a great environment to be in and around have not seen or aware of crime and disorder and or nuisance as a local resident.

I have spent most of my lockdown talking about how excited I am to be able to go back to The Cow post lockdown for my favourite meal and a glass of Red and get back to the normality of life and enjoying this incredible local pub so I really do hope that the License will be renewed as it really is a great asset to the local area.

Please consider the licence review for the Cow, a pub in Notting Hill Gate that is part of the fabric and culture of the area.

Local residents who are complaining should have considered living next to a pub in the first place and for a small number of residents who object to the limited noise from the Cow who would like it closed down will deprive the huge following the Cow has for good authentic food served in traditional surroundings.

I do hope the Cow will be able to reopen and hope you take the comments from the 100s of people who support the Cow into consideration

Thank you, [REDACTED]

Dear Sirs,

I have just been made aware that the licence for The Cow is to come under review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I have lived in this area for over 25 years and am familiar with both The Westbourne and The Cow as being well frequented establishments. That particular corner of Westbourne Park Road has always attracted many customers particularly during summer months so I can understand that the noise emanating from that area could at times be deemed as a public nuisance.

However, I am unaware of any incidents that could be said to raise concerns over public safety or crime and disorder. I have always used it as a quiet, cosy, welcoming place to meet friends for a lunch or an early evening drink. It is very much a pub frequented by local residents and has a sense of community which has been built up over the years.

After a year of very difficult times for us all, it has made us appreciate what establishments like The Cow offer and I would hope to see it continue to serve us.

Dear Sirs,

I write to you regarding the renewal of the license for the Cow dining room and Bar in Westbourne Park.

I am a professional female and have lived and worked in the local area for most of my life (50 years). During this time, I have had the opportunity to enjoy many visits to The Cow. I have always considered The Cow to be a 'safe pair of hands' where one can eat and drink in a mature and friendly atmosphere. I say this both from personal experience that is also reinforced out by its wider reputation amongst many in the community that I have spoken with.

The Cow is my go-to place for an evening out when I have friends and visitors who come to London.

I have never witnessed any disturbances at the Cow, and I would respectfully urge you to grant any application for the license renewal as it would be a great shame to lose this important and vital local pub.

Hello, good day.

I hope this finds you well!

I am writing to speak about The Cow Pub...

[REDACTED]
Before moving here I lived in New Zealand and I remember visiting my brother in London and he would take me to The Cow to eat the best steak he had ever eaten and the fish soup with croutons!

Once I moved to London, Notting Hill, the cow quickly became my favorite place where I started having my first friends because I didn't know anyone yet.

Luti and Pedro, always kind, welcomed me immediately and made me feel at home. I met my best friend Sophie and found many other English friends, as it was popular with locals.

Every time I arrived there was a place for me to sit with my friends and have a great time chatting.

I found a lot of work to improve my business and good knowledge that helped me in my career.

I could not imagine London without the cow, it has already been a terrible and tiring year, we should try to help with love and respect for everyone.

I wish you a wonderful day

Warm regards

Proposed closure of The Cow Pub

I wish to add to the many voices who oppose the proposed closure of the Cow Pub.

Pubs form a vital part of our community and the Cow has always been a vibrant and positive part of this fabric for us locals. It would be a travesty to add the loss of the Cow to the long list of pubs we have lost over the past years. Many will now close due to the further hardships of Covid and we should be supporting those who are strong and able to make it through this hard time, not threatening to close them.

The Cow has offered a safe and welcoming place to visit where even as a single woman I have always been happy to visit without threat. The many people who have patronised the pub have grown a large community of diverse and interesting people who come together to strengthen the area.

I urge you to reconsider this closure.

Best, [REDACTED]

Hello,

I am writing as a resident in support of the Cow. [REDACTED], The Cow has been one of my favorite local gathering places. It is a truly unique location, that has been a beautiful reflection of the diversity and vibrancy of the Notting Hill community, which my family has been honored to call home. It is so much more than a place for drinks and food, I can't think of a time I didn't have a wonderfully interesting or intelligent conversation with a patron. As both a curator/writer as well as a mother, I have deeply appreciated the almost creative family quality this institution has propagated. I have never had an incident of feeling unsafe, if anything I think its closure would lead more to the area feeling desolate, making me feel more vulnerable as a woman walking around.

While I had lived [REDACTED] the last 4 years (we would choose to walk to the Cow, skipping over the many other options at our disposal just to enjoy the special atmosphere I described above) and in August we decided to move to [REDACTED] for more space for our family, which includes two primary school age children, because candidly, having the Cow in short walking distance was part of what made the area more appealing.

I am happy to answer any other questions you may have, but think it would be a deterioration of the area to lose amenities that contribute to the character of the neighborhood and would be a loss as a site of community connection.

Best, [REDACTED]

Dear Sir/Madam

I was both shocked appalled and saddened to hear that there was some question over the renewal of the license of the Cow pub.

I cannot believe there is even a question over its renewal. The Cow is an integral part of the local community and I have enjoyed many enjoyable evenings there, over many years- its part of the local landscape.

What I particularly like is the atmosphere, relaxed, not loud, just friendly and welcoming.

I particularly like the fact that I always feel very safe and secure there, and have never experienced any type of disorder, public nuisance or safety issues when visiting the cow- only fine ales, good foods, great Crustacea, and friendly people- they also make a particularly fine desperate dan pie- which I can wholeheartedly recommend.

Please don't take away one of the best things about London, it would be a truly sad day if the Cow was not to open its doors for many many more years to come. I know you will make the right decision.

Yours Sincerely

I write in support of the Cow Pub, asking you not to revoke their license.

Because.....

- 1. A good pub like the Cow runs a vital support system for the local community 2. The Cow is a place where both the single local elderly and young feel safe and supported by the landlord and his staff should they need help.*
- 3. We have lost far too many pubs over recent years. If this pub is well supported by a faithful local clientele, then it should be allowed to stay 4. The Cow pub is not just for drinking. It provides good food, in a close local area where there are not so many other places to eat.*
- 5. It is an important social hub for the neighbourhood.*

Dear Licensing Team,

I am writing to ask you please to assist in ensuring that The Cow pub and restaurant is kept open and licensed. The Cow is a small pub which plays a pivotal part in the community of Notting Hill.

I myself have been going there regularly since 1990's with my flatmates when I was a young woman and I have continued to enjoy it through the years and as an old married woman now I still regularly go there (pre covid) with my husband and family to treat ourselves to their fantastic fish stew. I look forward to a time when all pubs are reopened and I can return there to meet with the friendly bar staff and clientele. I have never in all these years, ever been worried about my personal safety or any criminal activity. In my experience, the atmosphere has always been one of conviviality and security.

The Cow is one of the diminishing number of historic pubs in the area and it should be assisted and protected rather than be in danger of closing down. The food, ambience and decor are one of a kind in the area. Their fish stew is an institution in itself. The clientele is wide ranging and diverse and reflects the unique quality of the local neighbourhood and its much lauded and rare mix of class and cultures. It's also internationally known. People from all walks of life can commune here in a safe and enjoyable situation.

Please support the local community in this and understand that you need to do everything you need to preserve the Cow pub rather than seek to close it.

Thank you for your consideration,

dear Westminster,

i would like to register my strong support for The Cow as an important part of the social fabric of the area. it is the best pub [with the best food !] in its neighbourhood and it has become a hub for the wider community. it is not part of a bland pub chain and has character and authenticity. it is run by people who are known and loved by its clientele and not by a faceless corporate group. it is one of the last 'real' places left.

also, in this time of Covid when many pubs and restaurants are going out of business, it seems very harsh to try to shut down a pub that would survive because of the determination [and personal financial support] of the owners.

not only is the pub an important social landmark, it is also an employer and the kitchen trains young people and has produced many skilled chefs over the decades. the food has always been a cut above average and so have the trained personnel The Cow has produced.

finally, in the many years that i have been visiting the pub i have never once seen any unruliness, nuisance or criminal activity.

in fact, i remember a time before The Cow was there and the immediate area around it was dangerous to walk down. that corner was it is less dangerous now, with The Cow bringing life to that part of Westbourne Park Road.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I would be very grateful if you could please take into consideration my comments and those of others who have written to you regarding your recently issued review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

For my family (friends,mum, dad, aunts) and I, The Cow has and will always be where magic happens, a place of smiles , where we gather for intoxicating laughter, good company, fantastic cheer , story telling (a few tears shared here and there of course!) where we make new friends and rekindle old friendships and if you have not tried it I would advise you do - amazing seafood, specially the fish stew which is to die for!

It is a place where you feel you belong , it has a sense of community with the locals and the regulars, it is our favourite place to meet, to make connections, to make things happen. During this pandemic when it opened last year - it was a sanctuary, a refuge for the lonely where you feel a sense of 'normality' - mentally it helps to know it is there , it gives us something to look forward to , a warmth awaits. The staff are wonderful and friendly, they make you feel part of the herd!

Not quite like a second home but very , very close to it if you know what I mean.

There is a sense of purpose, optimism about your favourite place opening up again during these times. In my area there is no other place like it. It means a lot to us , for the community it is a place to gather , chat and bond, be in the company of lovely people, to feel connected., real connections. Even in the company of strangers there can be a sense of belonging , a sense of togetherness . Projects, partnerships, friendships, charity ideas , creative ideas, business plans, community projects have started here. It has been there through the good times and the bad. This is what The Cow means to the community and I.

For those living alone during the pandemic, when the lockdown lifted - it has been a place to meet a friend or two , to feel part of something. It is our pub, our local, our community hub , where coffee and teas are served!*

I think you should be aware of the great things it brings as stated above, now more than ever it is a wonderful place to meet or go with your dearest and nearest. And I can t wait until we can go back again! Regarding the safety during the pandemic times I felt safe there with the measures taken re social distancing ,sanitisation - amount of people allowed inside etc.

I have never felt unsafe at The Cow on the contrary and I am a petite but strong 50 yr old woman. I have never seen or experienced any crime or disorder , public nuisance or safety issues and I have been a regular for years. So Iam shocked to hear the news about the review, in complete utter shock. You have to be there to get a real sense of The Cow and how much it means to all of us. I have tried to describe it in words but it is difficult to describe the excitement , tingling and optimism it brings to know we will be able to visit again.. It has great spirit , one that gives us security, opportunity and lots of fun.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I write to you with great concern for the future of my favourite and local pub The Cow. I have been going to The Cow since I was 10 years old, accompanying my parents at first and later on in life with friends. [REDACTED] and I have been saddened to hear that next time I go to London (twice a year) it may no longer be there. The Cow is the first place I go to when I arrive and the last place before I leave with my father whom I visit, it is home to what I consider to be the best pub food in London. I have very fond memories of this establishment, birthdays, school reunions and family gatherings. I have always been amazed by the high quality food and service which it offers which is why I am proud to call it "my local". The Cow is much more than a pub and restaurant, it is a focal point for locals, a place to unwind at the end of the day and hopefully a place to gather and relax after this terrible pandemic is over.

Closing the The Cow will severely damage the value of all the properties in the area, having such a fantastic and welcoming place in the neighbourhood is an absolute luxury. Pubs are an iconic part of British life and losing such an iconic one will be truly sad.

Please don't make this pandemic worse than it already is by taking away something many of us look forward to once it is all over.

This would be the biggest mistake ever. The Cow is the last authentic pub left in the area, it's filled with creative and inspiring people. Their food is delicious, the atmosphere is real, the people are real.

It will break my heart to see this place closing.

Really please do not close The Cow. I have never absolutely never felt unsafe there, there is just lots of love and sharing.

I have lived for 10 years in the area but I have also worked in this pub for a year when I was younger and never stopped coming back. This place is full of memory and hopefully new memories to come.

And there is absolutely no crime there. This is definitely not the kind of place where there is trouble.

I have met people that help me to become who I am today professionally. I would even say I became a film director a lot thanks to this place.

I even wrote a script based on this place.

To whom it may concern, I'm writing on behalf of The Cow's premises license - 21/00981/LIREVP The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Rd, London W2 5QH is a landmark establishment in West London that serves the local community. Many professionals - artists, musicians, fellow creatives as well as celebrities and tourists have flocked from around the world to eat and drink here.

Everything about this location is perfect.

The food, drink and decor are spectacular - it's a pleasure to eat and drink at The Cow.

The staff are friendly, the ambience welcoming, it feels special to spend time in this gastro pub space. The Cow is the destination after a working day, after a meander through Portobello market and a shopping splurge in Nottinghill Gate.

The Cow adds to the neighbourhood, it is a quintessential part of the community. A place to meet friends and family. But also a backdrop for so many photo shoots - we need to support British pubs not destroy them.

We truly hope that you will continue to support this business and allow them to operate out of this venue.

Sadly in March 2021 - Lockdown 3 in London continues, and food and beverage premises are not open to the public, the Covid-19 pandemic has forced so many family run businesses out of operation.

Please do everything you can to support this business that brings so much pleasure to the many punters that frequent the space.

████████████████████ and been a regular visitor to the Cow since it opened in 1995. There is no other pub that I visit as regularly. It is as close as there is to a traditional neighbourhood pub anywhere that I have visited in central London. They are happy to serve you a quick drink or let you linger over a pint. There is great grub too. It's peaceful and quiet. I have often met my wife after she has been there for an hour or two on her own; she says it is one of the few drinking establishments where she is completely happy to be there alone. I regularly visit with mixed parties of friends for lunch (or used to before Coronavirus); it's just a great place for old & young and any gender.

That said, I know my back story is one similar to many and for all those local patrons who without The Cow, its employees and the spirit it brings to the community their quality of life would be seriously impaired by its absence.

████████████████████, just over 3 years ago. On arrival in Westminster I embarked on finding a suitable 'local'. Without question this was the most friendly, welcoming and community minded pub in the area. I remember the first time I entered and was met by the huge smile and welcome from Petro. On my second visit, a knowing nod was gestured as there was a queue for the bar. It spoke volumes that I was acknowledged and happily waited my turn. On the third visit my order was remembered with a handshake and exchange of names. From then on I has always been welcomed with a handshake, fist pump, man hug or kiss on the cheek from the ladies and have never had to say what I wanted. This is the personal touch, friendliness, professionalism and quality of the people who make The Cow the asset it is. Everyone takes the time to welcome, chat and treat you with respect as if you are one of the most loved members of the family.

Maybe after a month or so of visiting, getting used to the locals including Max's Dad (max is a dog), the publisher, disco Dave the decorator (sadly now deceased but forever remembered in the mural on the wall of the cow), I got into conversation with ██████████ a teaching assistant for the local primary school and carer for his 92 year old Mum. ██████████ and we have become the best of friends and I am privileged to say I am his support bubble as he lives on his own with his elderly mum. After moving to London and not knowing anyone, I feel so privileged to have The Cow on my doorstep as without them I would not have the friends and contacts I have, thank you The Cow.

Over the 3 years understandably i know all the staff and patrons of The Cow and I am honoured to say they are my friends. Petro has introduced me to local carpenters who are replacing my front window a local Westminster business, Disco Dave, before his sad death decorated my hallway and Oscar the chef cooks our anniversary meals he will not allow anyone else to cook for us and ██████████ has won Westminsters' Carer of the year award. My memories of living in the area are centred around The Cow and it is truly what makes this community function welcoming everyone from whatever race, religion, creed or colour all are welcome and this spirit does it justice.

Until Covid, I would visit 3 or 4 times a week for a couple of pints and when available the large sausage rolls (which are the best in London by the way, closely followed by the butchers in borough market). Though I should say I don't buy as many since they put the price up to £5 from £3.50 which I think is a bit much. But you have to pay for quality and it is good.

Anyway, during all my time visiting the cow over the years I have not experienced any public order issues or crime, unlike the Westbourne Arms I might add. We have no fixed pattern to our visits and therefore I believe my account would be an accurate reflection for the vast majority of the time.. The cow supports the local community always treating the local residents with first class service, I see this first hand and is a model for how pubs should be in the age of pub chains and the selfish isolating nature of their business models.

If you would like any further information or have any questions I would gratefully reply.

It has come to my attention that Westminster City Council is reviewing The Cow's Premises License.

This I must say comes as a shock and huge surprise to me. I've been a customer of the pub and a local resident for more than 10 years and in that period the Cow has gone from being a pub where I went with friends in my twenties to now being a place I and many other regularly visit with the family.

The Cow and its employees play an important role in the local community as a pub that welcomes and brings people together from various walks of life and also age groups. I think especially in an area like Notting Hill with such vast cultural and socioeconomic differences places like the Cow plays a vital part, and I would argue few other establishments do it as well as the Cow does.

I have never experienced any illegal activities, disorder or public nuisance during my visits to the Cow (a good proof of such is that we go there with our five year old son). The Cow's staff as well as its customers have always shown respect towards each other as well as its neighbours.

A potential closure of the Cow would be a big loss to the local community especially as the importance of venues that successfully bring people together will be even more important when we exit this pandemic.

I write in support of The Cow. I have no doubt you will have received many messages of support for the pub to remain open.

I am a Westminster resident, in a vulnerable group, and a barrister. I therefore understand how important it is for the community for public houses to keep within the rules at the present time. The Council has refused The Cow's appeal for a Fixed Penalty Notice due to an alleged breach in November and the police witness statement sets out difficulties that the pub had controlling customers last Summer. These are obvious matters of concern for the licensing authority.

The Cow is a very popular pub for good reason. It is the life and soul of Westbourne Grove and further afield. The terrible phrase it is a 'victim of its own success' maybe apt. The management should be worked with to ensure that it can operate safely and without disturbing the neighbours. The incident in November was seemingly a misjudgment in challenging circumstances, particularly for the hospitality industry. Shutting the pub down would be a wholly disproportionate response and likely to be counter productive. The pub employs excellent security staff who do their best to manage the crowd; and maybe going forward they could be better resourced to keep the pub open. If the pub closes then many patrons may choose to congregate in the vicinity of the pub without the management and control that the pub usually provides.

The Cow is an institution in West London. You will have seen that from the correspondence. Closure would be a disaster for the community, which is coming out of the dark period of lockdown. The licensing authority should work with the management and keep the pub open or it will deprive the area of a pub that makes London great and stand out globally. Not to mention the committed staff who would lose their jobs at a time of great economic uncertainty.

The Cow is one of the most neighbourly pubs in the area and regularly hosts evenings celebrating the music and culture of NH and beyond; from toasting the haggis on Burns Night to Tom Jones singalongs for St David's day and Carnival. To lose a pub like this at a time when our local support networks are really needed would be a nail in the coffin of what makes Notting Hill such a fantastic place to be.

I've never experienced anything to cause concern at The Cow, just a warm welcome and friendly faces. It's a true gem of the area and should be cherished, not cautioned

I wish to comment on the decision to review the Cow on Westbourne Park Road license.

I've been an irregular customer of the Cow for other 20 years. I've visited at all times of the day and it is one of the friendliest pubs in the area. Unlike some pubs in the area it feels safe and the staff are extremely professional. I've never noticed any nefarious goings on during my visits, there is never a fug of cannabis smoke nearby unlike a lot of other pubs in the area.

I'd say that the Cow gets the balance spot on between serving great food whilst maintaining it's personae as a local pub.

To change it's licensing conditions would be retrograde step for the jewel in the crown of West London pubs.

It has come to my attention that there has been a recent request to review of the Cow's Premises Licence.

The Cow is an asset to the community, by providing a safe and secure environment for family and friends to quietly have delicious meals, meet socially with friends and celebrate everything that is offered by the warmth of the establishment.

I have been a patron on the Cow for over 20 years. It is always offering a friendly and warm atmosphere. There are all walks of life that congregate, and meet to enjoy time with each other, strangers and just chat and socialise.

I confirm I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues while visiting the Cow. In fact the exact opposite.

I implore you to grant continued licence of premise to the Cow.

and speak in support for The Cow pub regarding their Premise License review in association with reference number: 21/00981/LIREVP

The Cow is an integral asset to my household as we rely on it to socialise with our local community. The pub attracts a diverse mix of cultures, all united by The Cow's brilliantly kept beverages and excellent food (their ales are first class and the seafood dishes are exquisite).

The Cow provides a comfortable and safe space to socialise and we have never experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. The staff are warm and considerate and this ethos reflects in the nature of The Cow's guests.

The Cow is more than just a pub; its warmth, inclusivity and spirit are the product of decades of nurture. There are very few pubs of its quality in Westminster, let alone London as a whole.

Please preserve this vital community hub.

I write in regard to our licence review of The Cow, Westbourne Park Road.

roughly the time that The Cow has been open. I value this public House very much. I have visited it pretty regularly over 25 years and not one single time have I ever seen any criminal behaviour or even felt in any way uncomfortable or threatened. I've visited with groups of male and female friends, business contacts, my wife, and there's never been anything other than a well behaved but fun atmosphere. During the recent slight relaxing of the lockdown rules in the autumn where I was allowed to have a business meeting in the dining room I was majorly impressed as to the conduct of the staff. I was greeted and only allowed into the building after my name had been checked against a list of bookings. All of the staff wore masks religiously, as did the small smattering of family diners. This was invaluable to me as I am self employed and had nowhere to meet anyone for these matters otherwise. I cannot conceive why the licence is under review other than as a routine administrative matter and I would urge you to let this pub continue as before. There have been a lot of pub closures over the years and a place such as this is of huge benefit to the culture, atmosphere and social cohesion of the area. Somewhere that has managed to stay popular despite the dormitory nature of Notting Hill and Westbourne park recently helps to sustain the many other businesses in the area. No pubs means, in the end, no restaurants. In short I, as a 50 year old, can find no reason why this pub should be under review. It hosts a well behaved and relaxed mix of all sorts of people, as a great Public House should.

I am writing to you to express my views regarding this fine establishment known as "The Cow" and the news that Westminster Council would like to revoke the license . Would just like to say in support of the Cow ,owner ,staff & patrons,that I have been a customer here for more than 20 years .In my opinion not only is it one of the best pubs in London it is also one of the best run pubs. Many of the staff ,ie Luca have been working there from when it first opened more then 25 years ago. In all of my times going to the Cow I have never seen or witnessed any anti social behaviour of any description ,indeed this would never be tolerated by the management as its a very well run established . And furthermore The Cow should be seen as asset to the community and protected as such . Also has the best Guinness in London ,and oysters are fab as well,I like to think of myself as a good judge of Guinness as I gerw up in Dublin on this product. But please do not do anything that will adversely affect the future of this fine pub & dining room .

It would be an immeasurable loss for West London to see it disappear.*

I have lived in the area all of my life and have been going to the Cow since it opened.

First of all, it serves unique food cooked in the heart of the pub ground floor on one stove, the combination of food and drink selections is unmatched by any pub in London. The result of having the kitchen next to the bar creates an unbelievable atmosphere which permeates the entire pub. It is in my opinion the finest pub establishment in London and has turned into a cultural icon. Which is synonymous with how the area has developed over the years. For me it is the beating heart of Westbourne Grove area, where people from all backgrounds socialise and become friends, that is the true beauty of this pub. And is very rare in London. To remove its license would be a form of suppressing culture, especially at a time when it needs to be promoted. I have never experienced any form of crime or public nuisance there, only unbridled joy and companionship.

I am writing in the hope that this message will help to prevent there being any negative change to The Cow's premises licence. I greatly appreciate and value all that The Cow has to offer and any change to the way that it operates will not only damage The Cow itself, but also the local community and the reputation of the surrounding area.

The Cow is a local favourite of mine & my family. I've been going to The Cow ever since it opened & now go with my grown up children, we all love it, it has delicious food, friendly service and a buzzy atmosphere, it's like visiting an old friend... The Cow is a symbol of all that is good about this part of West London, and is a much loved institution.

In all the time we've gone we've never seen any trouble there, it's just not that kind of place. As a Londoner there are plenty of pubs/places to avoid for those reasons but The Cow is just not that kind of place.

Finally, places like The Cow will need all the support they can get once they emerge from lock-down.

The Cow is most definitely one of those.

I understand that for a review to have been lodged there must have been several complaints regarding noise. Also its specific location within Westminster, with a higher than average crime rate would also have contributed to the review, but I would contest the validity of both claims in relation to The Cows license.

The staffing and control of noise from the Cow staff has always been a issue taken very seriously. It's a mutual respect for the neighbours and pride in the establishment, that I've felt is also shared by the patrons. I must admit I can hardly think of any other hospitality venue that takes the matter so seriously. Yes, The Cow is extremely busy and as a consequence adds to the noise of the neighbourhood, but that is because it is so loved by so many Londoners. It's an example of how a hospitality venue, in a struggling sector (during the most difficult time in history), can add character, charm and value to a city. Through commitment, craft, disciplined management and passion The Cow has earned its position as one of London's great traditional pubs.

With regards to crime, again I have always felt the the cow, with its strong security presence balance brilliantly a feeling of safety without imposing on the community a sense of danger. I have never once seen, experienced or been aware of any crime in or outside the cow.

Finally, I feel passionately that hospitality venues like the Cow (and very few others) are part of the very fabric of London, contribute greatly to the quality of life, and make Westminster the tourist attraction that it is. If a venue like the Cow, steeped in history and totally unique in offering, was lost to London it would be a far sadder place. Of course should small changes be needed or an offer of assistance from the council given to help keep this area of Westminster safe and neighbourly I'm sure the management of the Cow would be extremely keen.

[REDACTED]. I soon discovered The Cow. [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] I was delighted to find that The Cow "ticks off" two of my boxes: 1. A great English pub (albeit Irish) and 2. A fine dining, but casual, experience upstairs. Over the last 2+ years (pre Covid) I dined, with my American guests and English friends, over a dozen times.

I especially appreciate the seafood diners and quality of service. At no time did I ever experience disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. In fact, I have never seen more than 10 to 12 people in The Cows outside area. There is a pub kitty corner, not far away from The Cow, that I have seen 40-50 people outside in their courtyard area for smokes, they seem to have been making more noise than The Cow.

The Cow offers (god, I hate the term) "gastropub" food and a nice atmosphere. Please renew the license, for the sake of the the cultured neighbours who visit the cow.

As someone who has dined there frequently for more than 25 years, I have never witnessed anything that could be described as a "public nuisance", a "threat to public safety", or "crime and disorder". Indeed, it is somewhere I associate very much with the opposite; a place I have no hesitation in booking at any time for a meal with a friend, guest, client or business colleague.

I have eaten at restaurants in every part of the world, and have witnessed the full spectrum of what could be described as nuisance, threat, crime or disorder. I have consistently found The Cow to be managed and run to a very high standard by an exceptional and professional team.

It is unique in both quality and character. Not just a local institution, but also one with a national and international reputation. A place that both neighbours and visitors return to again and again, and recommend for excellent food, hospitality, atmosphere and ambiance.

The Cow was one of the first pubs in the area to be taken over and given a refresh back in 1995. We were regulars and decided this was the place where we'd like to have our Wedding reception back in 2001. It's woven into our family history.

Busy pubs, with the clientele spilling out onto the pavements on warm sunny evenings are a real feature of Notting Hill. In this area in particular, the Walmer Castle on Ledbury Road, The Cock & Bottle on Artesian Road and this corner of Westbourne Park Road, where the Westbourne and The Cow are opposite each other, are classic examples of this wonderful, vibrant culture.

Notting Hill culture is on the streets. It's in the art on the buildings, it's the market on Portobello, it's Carnival.....it's the pubs. The Cow is part of this rich Notting Hill heritage.

If you ,one-by-one, shut down these institutions down, you will slowly kill off what makes Notting Hill a unique and exciting place to live. There will be little value left if this area is homogenised to be just another bland wealthy enclave like South Kensington or Chelsea. Look at the difference between Westbourne Park and the Oxford Gardens area where there are no pubs. Both have a mixture of 19th & early 20th century architecture, but Westbourne has the social infrastructure of much loved pubs, restaurants and bars. It has a vibrancy and colour that attracts people from all over the world.

Now more than ever, post the pandemic lockdowns, we will need our local pubs, so that we can gather and reconnect with neighbours and friends.

Why close a successful 25 year old business at this time, when we need every business to do well? I do hope your review of The Cow's licence means it can stay open for another 25 years.

We have never experienced any disorder or crime activities here. If you want to know where that is, I suggest you look around the surrounding streets for the people breaking into the cars and stealing from the houses. This friendly social pub is not contributing to any of that.

Both of us are looking forward to having a pint of Guinness at The Cow this year to celebrate our 20th wedding anniversary. Crossed fingers.

Hi there

I am mailing with the greatest concern, I have just learned about the possible review of the premises license for The Cow. I couldn't actually believe it when I heard it, as The Cow is one of the best pubs in London and definitely my favourite.

I have lived in West London since 1992 and have gone to the Cow with my friends regularly since then. It has always been a place of genuine hospitality and the staff are some of the best people you will meet running a bar. They have a love and passion in the place that really shines through, you always feel very well looked after and your happiness is their priority. Not something you can say of many places these days. The quality of the food and drink they offer is second to none, I have always enjoyed eating and drinking there.

The Cow should be protected and put on a heritage list as it has kept the charm and tradition of Pubs from days gone by. It's a different and charming place to meet friends, eat and drink or just have a pint on your own. It's somewhere where you can meet different and interesting people.

The characters that drink there have been going there for many years and are the backbone of London life. They are and The Cow itself, are why people find our beautiful city so interesting and an important place to visit.

It's tragic to see the area being systematically reduced to a place where corporate chains that offer nothing in terms of culture and places for people to go are taking over from our lovely independent places. Places like the Cow offer the true character and experience of London. In 29 years, I have never ever had any problems at The Cow. It's a place where I go to relax and I always feel looked after there. It is a true gem in our city and I am totally shocked that it's even in question!

It's come to my attention the plight of The Cow pub in west London please be sure this little establishment is an institution in this area in fact even further afield I myself I am Scottish and have lived in and around London for over 25 years this particular pub was pretty much my local Establishment for a long number of years but nowadays I'm out in the Essex countryside yet I still visit there regularly making the regular pilgrimage by train a hand full of times a month.

In these days of mental Health issues and all the rest of it it's pretty much the only bar an individual can visit on their own and still have a good night as there is always a friendly face to make fun conversation with it's that kind of a place and in these very uncertain times we need places like that they are essential.

I for one would be very disappointed indeed to say the least if anything happened untoward to West London's iconic little pup please reconsider any negative motions that may be being considered at present as closing this establishment will not only disappoint thousands of regular customers the impact from further afield will be so felt beyond west London we don't need anymore disappointments as a society I think you will agree so please reconsider and allow this special little place on the corner to continue to do what it's doing and thrive for us all to enjoy and keep in our Hearts.

It's a place I want to continue to visit until I'm An old man and I can take my son for his first great pint of Guinness please do not rob me off this simple gesture.

Trusting you hear my views and utter dissatisfaction if it closes with immediate effect.

Dear Sir / Madame,

I understand that you are reviewing the licence of The Cow of 89 Westbourne Park Road. For as many years as I can remember The Cow has been an intricate part of the fabric of Notting Hill. It is a fantastic restaurant and pub at which my friends and I have enjoyed countless evenings and afternoons. It is certainly amongst the best in the area and I know that it's numerous patrons will want get through its doors when it can open again. The staff are always very welcoming and they provide customers with a great drinking and dining experience. I can safely say that The Cow is a Notting Hill institution whose reputation is known across London and beyond.

Over all my time there I have never witnessed any nefarious activity in the establishment. Indeed I believe it adds so much to the area and creates a great spot along with The Westbourne and creates a fantastic buzz which is often lost in neighbourhoods these days with businesses closing down or changing use. As we all know pubs are so frequently closing down and being turned in yet more luxury apartments. On the previous point, this is especially important when in effect people have been cooped up at home for most of the last year. Establishments such as The Cow will play an important role in the healing of communities and the individual who have been decimated by COVID-19. Furthermore one needs to consider the closure of so many F&B business's throughout London and the UK. [REDACTED] The Ledbury Restaurant has closed which was a critically acclaimed eatery. Everywhere one looks, we can see businesses that have served communities for years closing. Purposefully closing another one will be a tragedy and indeed a crime in itself.

I hope you reconsider this action and allow The Cow to continue trading.

Kind regards,

Dear representatives of Westminster City Council, To whom it may concern,

I hope you are well.

I have been made aware that the Cow's Premises Licence is under review. As I am a regular patron of the Cow as well as a Westminster City Council resident, I felt it was my duty to share my experience of this establishment with you.

There are very few places in London (let alone Westminster) as unique as The Cow. It is somewhere I would go for just a drink after work or for a birthday dinner surrounded by my closest friends. It's a place where the diversity of patrons is unlike any other places I have been to. People — young and old and from all walks of life — always come together to create a welcoming yet exciting atmosphere. As soon as you walk in you know you want to be regular in this place. I have been to The Cow with my mother to catch up after more than a year apart, with my business partner to take hard decisions about the future of our company, with new colleagues to share oysters and toast to burgeoning friendships, with fellow immigrants to share a Christmas Eve lunch far away from our families, or simply by myself when in the mood for a drink amongst a crowd of jolly and good-humoured strangers.

The Cow is that unique. If it means anything, it's the only reason and the only place my East London centric group of friends will commute 1 hour west and come to meet me.

I have always felt safe and welcomed. I have never experienced crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

I trust you will take into account the above when reviewing the premises license.

With all my best, [REDACTED]

It was with great sadness that I learnt that the Cow's Licence is under review.

It has been a focal point of the community for nearly 30 years serving excellent sea food, in particular, in a warm, friendly and relaxed environment.

It is one of the very few pubs in the heart of London where it is possible to visit as a female independently and feel safe and looked after by the bar staff while having an opportunity to meet neighbours.

It is one of the only pubs left in central London that offers the good cheer and welcome British pubs are known for internationally.

Over the many years of enjoying a pint of fresh prawns and a glass of wine at The Cow I have never seen any disturbances or upsets which I feel is testimony to the way the owners run it and the atmosphere created by their staff.

It would be heartbreaking if new arrivals into the area, who may have purchased nearby houses, are campaigning to close this local neighbourhood meeting place which is a wonderful, and much-needed, asset for the community.

Like many locals and former residents the loss of the Cow would feel like the closure of the community, just at a time when everyone needs places to gather, come together again and bump into locals in a genuinely neighbourhood friendly, safe pub in Westminster.

I very much hope the licence will be extended and local people will be able to continue to come together over a convivial chat at the Cow.

To Whom it May Concern,

I have learnt today about a licensing review on The Cow.

This pub is an integral social hub for many people in the area. We have lost so many local social venues and they have all been replaced with new builds/housing. Residents who move to the area see that there is a pub so if they want somewhere go to the country!

The Cow is a place where I met long standing friends and a place where we all meet now especially over the summer months. This local place is where you come to enjoy great local food and say hello to regulars who you see down in Portobello. I have enjoyed some very special evenings here with friends who have visited abroad to show off what great places we have in London!

In the 37 years I have lived in this area (where I grew up), not once have I experienced any violence or nuisance eevryone respects the rules and neighbours and it has always maintained this throughout its time! We get more nuisance from teenagers coming out of Secondary schools!!!!

It is civilized, a bit more grown up than its neighbour the Westbourne, offering great food, drinks and an atmosphere that simply must not be lost. Too many pubs like the Cow are being lost, sold to corporates, changed or closed. Please don't let this happen to the Cow too, we need gathering places where everyone is welcome, conversations abound, friends are made and moments are celebrated. Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing to strongly object to Westminster City Council's proposed review of The Cows Licence.

The Cow pub is a wonderful establishment that offers quality food drinks and service. It has been an asset to our community for 26 years, and hugely popular with so many people who live in the area and come from miles around to experience their hospitality. It is an institution and a big part of this area.

We simply do not understand why this is being accused of being a public nuisance and safety risk. We have drunk and dined in this establishment for over two decades and never once felt unsafe or experienced any crime related issues. It is a warm and safe environment to spend time in.

We need more quality pubs like The Cow that take pride in their food and drink. I lived locally for years and always chose to drink at The Cow and love returning to it. After such a terrible year for everyone, not least the hospitality industry, it is quite devastating to hear this news. We should be celebrating our communities more than ever now, not taking away establishments like this based on untrue and unfair accusations and complaints.

I don't doubt there will be an outpouring of support from many people who understand how ridiculous this is, and you need to listen to all our voices.

Sincerely

Sirs

I am writing to support the continuation of the Cow's licence.

[REDACTED] choosing the location for the vibrancy of the local offering. During the lockdown, suffering depression from the isolation, I was eventually able to wander outside to meet other locals at the Cow in the summer months.

The Cow is a central part of the community here. Even living at such proximity, I have never witnessed disorder coming from the place, and find it hard to imagine that such disorder would outweigh the social benefits of the establishment to the community.

Kind regards, [REDACTED]

Dear Westminster City Council Licensing,

I am contacting you regarding the licence review of The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Rooms.

[REDACTED] I have been a customer of The Cow since it opened 25 years ago. I regard it as part of the heartbeat of the area and an establishment that should be protected and preserved as a local asset. It is a pub where everyone is genuinely welcome. It can be a fine dining restaurant or somewhere you just call in for a beer, but it is always focused on quality in everything it does. At a time when many pubs, bars and restaurants are becoming homogenised in their offering, The Cow is a precious jewel of originality and authenticity.

I have always found The Cow to be a very civilised establishment - somewhere I am happy to visit with my family. I have never witnessed anything unpleasant, rowdy, dangerous or illegal in all my years as a patron.

I strongly support the renewal of The Cow's licence. I recommend that it is an establishment that should be celebrated as a highlight of the area for locals and visitors alike.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]

Having heard that the council is reviewing the cows licences i was shocked and felt compelled to write this email

I have frequented the Cow for over 15 years on and off as my godparents are [REDACTED] to the cow and frequent regularly. I have some very fond memories and in all those years I have never once come across or seen any anti social behaviour in or outside of the cow pub! If anything with what the cow has done for that area it should be considered as a heritage site

I hope that the council reads and explores the responses to this petition and quickly dismiss it

Hello.

I would like to make a representation against the the removal of the premises license for The Cow. I own many pubs in London myself and I have to say that The Cow is THE PUB of all pubs. It's a treasure, not only to the people of Notting Hill but of London. A beautiful well run pub that is a shining example of what a pub should be within its neighbourhood community. Long may it continue.
(But if you do take it away, you should give it to me. Only joking..err hmm..)

Kind regards

Dear Wesminster Council,

Ref number: 21/00981/LIREVP

I wish to relay my absolute support of The Cow Pub, 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 SQH

For many years I have been a regular patron of The Cow. I am a long time advocate of it being one of London's true gems, a fun, diverse, inclusive welcoming gastro pub with amazing food and charming staff at its heart. I always felt comfortable visiting alone, meeting old friends, bringing business associates and friends from all walks of life to experience this unique pub. Never a disappointment! In recent years I have lived locally and I have come to appreciate the Cow as an important part of the local community. A place where locals and visitors from further afield can connect. I have only ever had positive experiences, have always felt welcome and safe. It has been my experience that the staff and clientele have the utmost respect for local residents.

In these difficult times it is more important than ever that we have safe, welcoming, fun venues to socialise and connect. I believe The Cow is a true asset to Westminster and London and look forward to visiting in the near future when we are able to once again.

Please feel free to contact me for any further information.

Dear Licensing Team,

Upon hearing that Westminster City Council has issued a review of the Cow's Premises License on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder, I was genuinely astonished.

I have been a regular visitor to the Cow since 1996. At no time have I ever witnessed any such issue.

The Cow is a most of all a local community centre, where people from Westbourne Park and beyond can gather and rejoice. It is one of those unique places where the true spirit has created such a special atmosphere of community culture and spirit.

So many places have already disappeared from the area over the last decade - to make space for often Americanised chains catering for affluent yuppies who fancy Notting Hill for its authenticity but have also crowded out true British institutions serving the already endangered local community.

Closing down The Cow would take away one more highly valued social beacon from that precious local community and erode its culture even further.

Kindly empathise and do not let yourselves get driven into making the wrong decision based on whoever may have invoked this review based on misrepresentation of the true cultural and social value of the Cow and the decent citizens who cherish its presence in the Westbourne Park area.

Yours sincerely,

*For myself, The Cow represents everything that is wonderful about my adopted home. Dear Sir/ Madam,

re. 21/00981/LIREVP The Cow

I hear that there is a review of the cow's Premise License.

I just wanted to say that I have been visiting The Cow since [REDACTED]. It's my favourite pub - and restaurant - for miles.

I have never known of or seen any nuisance or bad behaviour associated with it - in fact it's a bastion of respectable gastro-pub-ness - I can't think of a nicer pub in the whole of London.

It has fantastic food, friendly staff and a slightly after the first flush of youth clientele whose only claim to nuisance is reminiscence of times long gone - no doubt grown in the retelling.

I've passed many pleasant evenings, and when funds allow, eaten remarkably well. It softens the heart so well, that I have even introduced a lovely couple of friends entirely by accident one summer evening, as one was walking past on his way home, and they were married in short order, now with 2 lovely children. It's that kind of a place.

It's a credit to the neighbourhood and exactly what a local amenity should be. It's quite beyond me why anyone would complain. I can only assume they're either malicious or trying to do some dodgy real estate deal by taking possession of the place.

If the council cares about protecting social amenities they will throw this out with the bottles in the morning.

thankyou for your time

To whom it may concern

Notting Hill is one of the most special neighbourhoods in the world. Every day I feel so lucky to live in Notting Hill. I moved to Notting Hill from New York City and immediately felt the joy of living in a big city with all its culture, diversity and creativity. But unlike New York, I had this neighbourhood that took care of me.

The Cow was one of the first pubs I went to - in my late 20's, single and new to the city. And it's one we still frequent whenever we can - now in my mid-40's, with a husband, a dog. The staff have always been wonderful, looking after us so carefully and kindly. The Cow is the most wholesome, neighbourly pub in Notting Hill.

Not only have I never experienced harm or crime here - I have experienced great community with a range of characters. We have struck up many a conversation with a neighbour - sharing dog day care tips, restaurant tips and finding out we have mutual friends in common. This is the Cow - it's a great place. When my friend lost a pet, it was at the cow that we consoled her. When I was turning 40, it was at the Cow that we raised a glass.

London has lost so many of it's wonderful pubs. Some just disappear. and become restaurants (The Chepstow) Some get bought by big groups and lose their charm (The Walmer Castle (now sold again) and The Ladbroke Arms, The Cock and Bottle). Some belong to the young (The Westbourne) and some belong to the tourists (Portobello Road). But The Cow belongs to us, the neighbourhood.

Please don't take it from us. In a year when we have lost so much - please let us recover as a community at the places we love.

Please save the Cow. Please [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] and was immediately smitten with the friendly people and warm welcome from locals. Nowhere was this more evident than The Cow and I've enjoying long lunches with family and evening catch ups with my friends here for around 15 years. It has always been a convivial atmosphere but not rowdy. I see it as friendly safe place for socialising; I have never experienced or witnessed any crime at the pub. I've now moved further out to Chiswick but still look forward to regular visits to catch up with old friends and it has been the place I have missed most during lockdown. The Cow has so much character and is viewed so fondly by everyone I know, it would be a real shame if we were deprived of such a valuable social asset just when everyone needs it most.

Hi there,

I recently came across the news that Westminster Council is planning on revoking the license for the aforementioned pub.

Firstly, I'm a little baffled by the Council's motion, in particular because the situation at the moment for hospitality businesses is dire to say the least, with locations closing on an almost daily basis. As such, the last thing we need is the council bringing the hammer down on another.

Beyond this though, The Cow is a much loved local institution that not only brings life and character to a corner of town that is fast becoming quite staid but has also been a safe and quiet place to have dinner with loved ones.

Indeed, in my many years as a customer I have never witnessed any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues as a result of the pub's actions or involvement.

I'd therefore like to see this motion reconsidered.

For further comment please do not hesitate to get in touch.

I've always had wonderful experiences in the Cow, a unique and characteristic restaurant with excellent food. It serves as place where an eclectic mix of people are brought together, enhancing the cultural and diverse mix that typifies the Notting Hill area. I believe exactly these characteristics are what make the Cow a unique London spot which should be treasured by its local council and the wider community.

I write to you with concern on reading of the upcoming review of the Premises License for the Cow Public House, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London W2 5QH.

I would like to add my support for the Cow as a long standing patron since 1995. This pub has always provided good food, drink and atmosphere and I have never encountered any instances of public nuisance, crime and disorder of any kind in all those years.

As a family we have enjoyed many evenings there in the upstairs restaurant with all ages from my father [aged 78] down to the youngest family members for anniversaries and other family celebrations. At no point has anyone encountered any situations where we would feel threatened or uncomfortable and more importantly have never experienced any instances of criminal behaviour.

Local pubs are a very important facet of local neighbourhoods and I believe that the Cow has been a public house at this location for far longer than the current landlord/owner Mr Tom Conran has been resident. He, along with the owners of The Westbourne pub across the road should be applauded for their investment and years of hard work in making this corner of the area into a welcoming and vibrant place. I remember full well what the immediate area was like before the Cow opened under his ownership and am horrified that the Council should even be considering withdrawing this license.

The changing demographic of West London has brought in many people who purposely buy a property next to pubs and then try to shut them down in exactly this way so that their property price increases - I sincerely hope that if this is one of those cynical exercises that you will, in your wisdom, see this for what it is.

This morning I heard on the radio that pubs have been closing at an alarming rate during the pandemic and it would be counteractive to breathing life back into London if you were to take this erroneous decision to shut such an important local amenity.

Yours sincerely,

To whom it may concern,

Having visited the Cow for many years, I know this licence review - and the suggestion that they are a public nuisance / public safety concern / and encourage crime - will hurt them a lot, because they care so much about their local community. They love the Westbourne area - and any suggestion otherwise is totally wrong and uninformed. This is a pub by locals, for locals. Walk inside and this becomes obvious immediately - it's warm, friendly and welcoming always.

As a local resident of Westminster, I fully support The Cow and their Premises Licence.

And to be clear - I have personally never experienced or witnessed any crime, disorder, public nuisance, or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

To Whom it may concern,

The cow has become an institution in Notting hill. It really is a huge part of the culture of Notting hill. They offer great friendly service and fantastic food and beverages. It's an asset to the area. I certainly go there regularly for simple bite to eat, a great pint poured by Pietro and really friendly chat and some advice when needed. It's extremely hard to get the level of service at anywhere else. It's really one of a kind.

From working in Notting hill for over 15 years it really is such an iconic spot that really attracts many people to the area including tourists.

We have tenants that specifically rent close to this location just to be close to the pub. I really think that revoking a licence would be a great shame for the local community and industry in general.

I have never experienced any crime or nuisance whilst at the cow, nor has anyone that I know. Nor have we ever heard anything similar.

Kind Regards

Reference 21/00981/LIREVP

I would like to highlight that over the last 9 years I have been in London that the cow has been a vibrant restaurant I have felt comfortable attending with friends. Family and by myself to enjoy their wonderful food and fun and compassionate staff and patrons.
It's truly a welcoming place and unlike other places throughout notting hill I have never seen any violence inside or near it's premises. The patrons and staff are proud of their establishment and would not encourage foul acts. The cow is a staple place and would be a shame to lose and I say this as someone that works in the east and enjoys the different areas of London each week, yet I always look forward to a home cooked meal with a staff that offers not just service but friendly support as well

Happy to speak further

Dear Sir / Madam

I understand that you are reviewing the License for the Cow. Honestly - i am amazed. Dumbstruck would probably be more accurate.

I have lived in Notting Hill area for 20 years - [REDACTED] for 6 years. I am 54 and used to [REDACTED].

The Cow is my local. I must have been there well over 200 times. Why? Not only is the food and wine excellent - but the atmosphere - set by the staff and the customers - is the best of any pub i know. It is friendly and interesting - strangers speak to each other. People of all backgrounds - that means Diversity..... People are polite to each other and respectful of the neighbourhood. I have also walked or driven past it countless times - probably thousands.

I have never witnessed anything eleven remotely questionable or concerning - let alone threatening or potentially criminal.

The Cow is an Icon in this area. There is no comparable pub anywhere near this. And it is central to the vitality of that area - already at risk from the closure of Lucky Seven. I would be devastated to lose this pub.

You just cannot do this level of damage to this area.

Please do not revoke this License.

Dear Sir,

It is with consternation and disappointment that I learn of the License Review proposed for The Cow.

Of all the premises that might cause issues in the Borough, The Cow seems the least likely. Indeed, The Cow seems to represent the best of friendliness and conviviality in the Borough.

It provides what we all want in the modern world. A cosmopolitan mix of ages backgrounds and ethnicities. It is a favourite location for many of my friends who live locally and when I travel from ██████████ to visit, a destination of choice. I am 63 and my wife 67 and we enjoy the warm and friendly atmosphere as much as our children in their 20's and 30's. We do not hesitate to travel at the weekend to feast on beautiful seafood and fish soup as well as communing with my Irish mates over some of the best kept Guinness in London.

As a family and a group of friends, we have never witnessed crime, violence or any form of disorderly or uncontrolled behaviour. We have never felt unsafe and I can assure you that I would not take my wife to a premises that had any of these behaviours.

If there is a review, I hope that it is only to find a way of giving the team more outdoor space and support.

The Cow, as either a pub, restaurant or both, deserves all the support it can get from its customers and the authorities. There are fewer and fewer old premises left and they must be supported and nurtured. A professional team of talent like those employed at The Cow, should be admired and supported. They certainly are by their customers.

In any review I would be prepared, indeed happy to provide reference of the high quality business known as The Cow.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing with regards to The Cow's premises licence review.

I personally would be devastated if this fantastic pub were to no longer exist. It has long been a meeting point for my friends and I, and there hasn't been a single occasion where I have not adored its family run feel, and its delicious food and drink. It's one of the most iconic hang outs in area and its history is admired and appreciated by all those who frequent its 4 walls.

There aren't many pubs/restaurants in London that I will return to time and time again for one dish in particular, as I am one of those people who always wants to seek out something new, however The Cow's chicken kiev is by far the best chicken kiev I have ever eaten, and will ever eat. Some may argue that a single dish isn't an important enough factor to save a pub, but I would proudly and confidently take on such a person and argue against this. Food brings us joy, food brings us comfort, food sustains us and enables us to do great things. This dish does all of things for me and I know it does for many others. Whenever anyone asks me what I was up to the previous evening, and I tell them I went to The Cow, 99% of the time, the person will then ask - "Did you have the Chicken Kiev?" This dish is famous. It creates common ground between people. It makes people smile. It is without a doubt worth fighting for.

I can whole heartedly confirm that I have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

Please let this pub continue to thrive and provide happiness to its customers.

Hi

I have been going to the cow for years and love the intimate vibe they have, the food they serve is some of the best in Westminster, the Guinness is the same!

Throughout lockdown I would look forward too getting a cow from home delivery and I can say it helped me feel better on days when I weren't feeling great!

I would be devastated if the iconic cow pub were to close and I'm sure many others would also be.

In times where enjoyment is so important to us now, we need places like the cow to look forward too once normality resumes.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I am writing in support of The Cow.

[REDACTED] and have known The Cow since it first opened. It is one of the few places that still embodies the heart and soul of the West London I have always loved. The Cow is a cultural melting pot, bringing so many different people from the community together. My experience of The Cow has always been a fun and friendly one - and often filled with enriching conversation and encounters with brilliant characters from near and far. The Cow is an important character in the story of the area.

But, more importantly than all that, it is my 77-year-old father's local. [REDACTED]: The Cow is a safe and welcoming place for my father to walk to every day (during normal times) and meet with friends and familiar faces. It is a big part of his life and he has missed it terribly during lockdown. But, true to the spirit of The Cow, the staff have texted him regularly to make sure he is well and safe at home until he can once again return for his favourite G&T.

It is that kind of community-minded lifeline that makes The Cow an essential asset to the neighbourhood.

I sincerely hope you decide to protect this special place.

Out of everything that has happened in the past year, this is probably the most ridiculous news I have heard. With pubs and restaurants having been closed for the majority of 2020 and 2021, this is such a disheartening and disappointing move from the council of Westminster. You should be supporting The Cow during tough times like these.

I can confirm that I have never experienced any public nuisance, safety issues, disorder or crime. The Cow has been an establishment for a quarter of a century, and is one of the only pubs in West London where you can actually have decent food.

I kindly urge you to concentrate on crime and disorder elsewhere, I could name a few places in Westminster Council...

Dear Sir/Madam

It has come to my attention that The Cow has been issued a License review by Westminster Council. I am writing to you to explain how much of an asset The Cow is to the local community.

[REDACTED] and the Cow has always been a rare jewel in an area that is becoming increasingly gentrified and 'chain' shop like in its nature. It serves original food and drinks that are well priced for the area and continues to always attract a wide range of people from all walks of life. In comparison, many other places in the local area only attract a certain type of person, creating even more divides within the community. The beauty of The Cow is you get people from all walks of life all sharing life in the same spot, this creates a unique and electric mix of harmony, curiosity and fun.

Please take into consideration the uniqueness of the place and how it really is a true local in the community. We cannot afford to lose an original venue like The Cow. Once a place is gone it is incredibly hard to bring something as original as The Cow back.

Many thanks, [REDACTED]

Dear Councillors,

I have read with incredulity news of an objection to the Cow in Westbourne Park Road. As someone who has lived [REDACTED] and known the pub in both its previous and present incarnations since 1978 I am puzzled to hear that there could be any objection to its existence. It is a centre of local everyday life and the area would be much the poorer without it. I have never witnessed any crime, disorder or public nuisance, and on the contrary it has, in the last twenty years or so, been run with a spirit of enthusiasm and generosity towards its customers who are almost all locally based. It would be nothing short of a tragedy if The Cow were to lose its license.

I have never experienced any disturbance from the pub or the customers and [REDACTED]. It has been brought to my attention that you are reviewing the licence of "The Cow" Restaurant at 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2.

I would urge you to continue to allow "The Cow" to continue to hold a licence - in fact to consider that you support the business in any way you can to remain precisely as it is, as it represents almost every aspect of the character of Notting Hill and cries out to be preserved.

I cannot believe that after the year that the Hospitality industry has had to endure, that anyone in their right mind would seek to make somewhere as authentically English in its character and cooking as "The Cow" any more vulnerable than it might already be.

I have eaten there and taken my teenage children there and only ever found it to be a place that exuded a rather quiet, contemplative atmosphere. It is friendly, softly spoken and even suggests the charm of somewhere that you would expect to find in the country.

If there has been some suggestion that the place is either unruly or risky - why would I have taken my children there at all?

I can only imagine that some property speculator has bought into the locale and wants to "boost" his investment by some ill-considered idea that without a restaurant he will somehow "gentrify" his immediate area - he's probably never lived anywhere near there before.

To ruin "The Cow" would be to diminish the neighbourhood and ruin an aspect of London authenticity that cannot be retro-fitted. Please consider this letter to be in full support of "The Cow" remaining unmolested and allowed to go about its business exactly as it has before.

[REDACTED], the Cow has been my home from home.

The Cow is a place where I can feel comfortable, relax and not feel the unfriendly glare of the newer, more pretentious people that were moving into the area in order to "capture" some of that Notting Hill magic.

The Cow encapsulated that magic unwittingly, and so it became one of the area's best kept secrets.

Full of real people, real locals, people in the know.

If you went outside, you were always respectful of others, and kept noise to a minimum. People were jolly, but never rowdy. The Cow is a place where stories are told, music is listened to, and food is digested.

If there has been a complaint, I can only imagine it is from someone who has never really been to the Cow. I mean really been there, like eaten their delicious oysters with a pint of guinness, had a sedate Sunday roast, a beautifully cooked Kedgeriee, or had a chat with a stranger. The Cow means an appreciation of what is local, what is tried and tested, and not what is destructive.

I have had many birthdays, reunions and night outs, that have always ended up at the Cow.

I am sure the people/persons who prompted the misguided complaint are not a regulars, as I've stated above, the Cow is for the more mature crowd. If it was a place where I was worried about boisterous drunken behaviour, I would never have gone back on a regular basis. The Cow means a lot to me. It's part of my back story. It's where I went on a first date with my now ex partner, and the father of my only child. We went there over a 16 year period, for the duration of our relationship. One of the few stables in my life. When Lockdown restrictions are eased, the Cow is the first pub I will go to.

As a criminal Barrister, when not working, I like to find places where I can let my hair down, talk to a stranger, and not think of work or anything like that. Funnily enough a few Judges who live in the area, have exactly the same idea!

I was deeply saddened to hear that The Cow Pub's license is under review.

The cow is an iconic landmark in west London. It attracts tourists, locals, tradesmen, fine diners and young professionals.

It's a place where young and old can sit together and share stories, life experiences and even a song. We all need places like The Cow, especially when there is so much change in the world, having a familiar place where you are guaranteed to see a friendly face is a great comfort.

It's the only pub in London where I have never seen anyone discriminated by income, age, race or sex. This is so important where £10 million pound houses sit alongside social housing.

For those who live alone, and have suffered immensely from isolating lockdowns, they will be looking forward to the doors of this indiscriminating pub opening once again, so that they can feel a part of a dynamic community. It will be what keeps them going!

I'm writing to express to deep concern over the review of premises licence The Cow on Westbourne Park, W2.

The Cow is not only a pub filled with friendly, charming locals (and people from further field) but is a fantastic restaurant. There is no where else like it that combines the warmth of a pub with the quality and sophistication of a restaurant. The staff are amazing as are the customers. It's a total icon of the community.

The Cow means a tremendous amount to myself and friends who visit here for the relaxed and friendly atmosphere, great service and food. For my family, this has been the venue to celebrate and come together, from my 94 year old Grandfather, to my 4 year old niece - a uniquely transgenerational place. I can't imagine a West London without it, and am in total shock and surprise to learn of this review.

I've only ever experienced a wonderful time here, have never seen anything like crime and order, or anything alarming. Apart from how quickly the fish stew goes down... It's always been a smooth operation when I've been there, from staff to punters. I would happily sit here alone as a young woman, or with friends or family.

It would be a gravely deep loss, especially when people so dearly need a safe and happy place to come to.

I write to object to the suggestion that The Cow pub on Westbourne Grove, London is to be closed. This pub/restaurant is a much loved institution in the area and is an important part of the Notting Hill community. It is a genial and valuable asset to those of us who live in the area and to many who visit it from all parts of the UK. Up until last year and the lockdown we used it frequently for drinks and family celebration meals as it serves high quality food and a very convivial atmosphere. In the 25 years I have lived in this part of London I have never experienced any disturbances or noise as a result of its existence.

It is of crucial importance that we support all these businesses in Notting Hill if we are to retain the famous character of this part of London and it goes without saying that after a year of disruption this business needs our support.

I very much hope you will reconsider the review of their licence.

I am writing to share my experiences of the Cow pub. and pass the Cow on a daily basis, both during the day and in the evenings. Moreover I am a patron of the Cow and the Westbourne pub opposite. In my 15 years of visiting the Cow I have always found it to be well run, orderly and a highly civilized establishment. There are no issues with traffic, no issues with rubbish. I can't see what the problem is about. It is an asset to the area and to London as a whole. There are very few pubs left in London that cater to the whole community and serve such a diverse group of ages, races and backgrounds. The council should protect this asset and redirect its efforts (and my council tax contribution) to pursuing more important matters.

Please reconsider your decision to threaten to take away the Cow's Licence.

Why do I believe The Cow is an asset? - The Cow is one of the communities best assets. Providing some of the finest food in a public house, not only in West London but all of London and the South East of England.

What does the Cow mean to me? - It is by far my favourite pubic house in London. Serving the best Guinness and Oysters. Having the best music playing through the sound system. The dining room upstairs is a fantastic feature where one can reserve tables.

What are the great things about the Cow you should hear about? - All the staff are incredibly friendly. They work great together and always look after everyone incredibly well.

I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or any safety issues whilst visiting the Cow. The outside area is very small and does not allow for large amounts of people to gather outside.

It is one the of the finest pubs in the country and it would be absolutely shocking for this to be taken away from the community which think of it so fondly and regard it with such great thoughts.

The Cow is one of the main reasons we have remained a resident in Westminster for so many years. Christmas without our annual December lunches at The Cow was more of a blow this year, than almost anything else Lockdown prevented.

To whom it may concern

I am writing to you today in respect to the premises licence review for my local, The Cow.

As a patron of The Cow since 1995 when it 1st opened, in a world of mediocrity, The Cow offers a haven to those who appreciate the traditional conviviality of the pub. With a deep understanding of patronage and the customer experience, it is truly unique in the pub landscape of London, and for me falls in the same bracket as The French House in Soho - institutions that should be cherished and protected.

In my attendances at the pub, far from being witness or understanding of crime, disorder or public nuisance it has always been quite the opposite - conviviality, good humour, loyalty, great food and drink and overall great times. When it comes to marking my life with occasions The Cow is often the top of that list and praise should be heaped upon Tom, Petro, Luca and the team for maintaining such high standards since they opened in 1995. Consistency is the key in hospitality and they have done this with bells on.

I trust that the council realises the value of such an institution in West London, and reflects very favourably upon it whilst making their considerations about the future of the premises licence and hence The Cow itself in its current guise. I urge you to be prudent and considerate of the very important role it plays in local life in our community. It is an asset of this community and I implore you to renew the licence.

To Whom It May Concern,

I do not live in London but The Cow in 89 WESTBOURNE PARK ROAD LONDON W2 5QH is home to me. Never ever have I experienced any sort of violence, crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. On the contrary, my friends and I always feel very safe and welcomed. My sister and brother in law are close neighbors and regulars and The Cow is my favorite pub in London; I love going there, sitting outside while enjoying a pint and the seafood platter and friends coming by. The Cow makes the neighbourhood special and I couldn't imagine it not being there. Punters are locals, neighbours and visitors and there is always someone to chat to.

I celebrated my birthday on the first floor and not only was it delicious, the service was excellent and family and friends had a great time.

I can't wait to come back to London as soon as possible and go directly there. Before Corona this would have been at least 5 times a year with multiple visits to The Cow during each visit. I really miss it and would be very sad if it would disappear.

Please, do not close The Cow.

Dear Westminster Council,

I kindly ask you to seriously reconsider the removal of the license for the Cow Pub. It is a long standing establishment, a home from home, a place to spend time with friends, share a meal and a good old fashioned pub which we are seeing such a decline of in London!

What I can only say is, if you are removing their license, then why not every other pub in the area too?! We as locals love this pub, we are welcomed with friendly faces and open arms. In what has been a terrible year, we are looking forward to seeing our friends and sharing a pint at our local. Please don't remove its license!

Dear Westminster City Council,

Ref: 21/00981/LIREVP

I'm writing to express my support of The Cow Bar and Dining Rooms, as I understand its premises licence is up for review. Having been a patron for over 20 years, I can not state strongly enough what an asset it is to the Notting Hill / Westbourne Grove area. In that time, it has been a fixed point in a rapidly changing neighbourhood - consistently welcoming all comers, a hub of bonhomie that reflects the surrounding community in all its vivid diversity.

[REDACTED] The Cow was the first place to give me a foothold in this vast city, the first place I felt welcomed, and in the intervening years, I have seen it do the same for others. It's the first place I bring visitors to London, and they are never disappointed. It is a bar for all occasions: among my friends, it's where we have wet the heads of numerous babies, where we've revelled on Saint Patrick's Day and celebrated birthdays. There have been quiet lunches and some of the best dinners I've ever eaten (the food is consistently excellent). As a single woman, it's one of the few bars where I feel completely comfortable and safe going on my own, knowing I won't be bothered. It's also where I chose to meet close friends after a family bereavement - its gentle familiarity was a balm. It has been there for everything, and yet in all of those years, on all of those occasions, I have never seen or experienced any disruption or disturbance or confrontation or crime. I am sure this is due in no small part to the long-term staff, whose professionalism is matched only by their warmth.

London is a living, ever-evolving city - bars and restaurants come and go with alarming regularity, and Notting Hill in particular has changed almost beyond recognition in the years that I have lived here. But The Cow has prevailed and, for all its rascalion charm, has become something of an institution.

I believe that to lose it would be a huge blow to the community it sits at the heart of, stripping it of yet more character, chipping away at the bonds that provide a crucial sense of connection and closeness in what can be a lonely metropolis.

In the past awful year, when so many of us have experienced the damaging effects of isolation, the importance of trusted, communal, convivial spaces like The Cow has never been clearer. Please don't take it away from us.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Westminster City Council members,

I hope this message finds you in good health and feeling fine.

With great dismay I heard yesterday that Westminster City Council have issued a Review of The Cow's Premises Licence. I am writing to you in support of The Cow and the upholding of its licence.

In the 14 years I have frequented The Cow I can confirm that I have not experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

The Cow is an asset of our neighborhood; it brings us together in thick and thin and rather than a nuisance is a haven. I've attended wakes there, as well engagements and birthdays. Its where we go for Burns' Night and St. Patrick's day; where we gather for Carnival; and where we take our teenagers out for a Sunday Roast.

When I am alone in the city and my wife and children are away, The Cow is my living room where I can feel at home and safe (and well fed!) amongst friends and family.

Please keep The Cow open.

Perhaps the past year has been confusing and hard on all of us and we all just need to let a little love into our hearts to make it through 2021?

Please keep The Cow open - I know I speak for so many when I say, we need it to come back to from lockdown, we literally need The Cow - it's an institution, not just the place itself, but the people and the history and the location and the food and the welcome and everything it represents.

I have no further remonstrations to make except to plead once more that The Cow be allowed to continue to function in it's important role at the heart of our community.

Yours Sincerely,

Dear Sir/Madam,

[REDACTED] I am a 24 year old Englishman living in Singapore, writing in relation to Westminster City Council's review into the Cow.

I grew up going to the pub with many family members and friends. It formed an essential part of my time in the neighbourhood, with some of my fondest memories having taken place there.

As you are fully aware, places of character and memory are becoming less and less common with many struggling to keep open during the pandemic. How do we expect London to remain a great global city with only Weatherspoons and Costa left on the high-street?!

I have many friends based here in Singapore with similar memories of the Cow. Only the other day, we were reminiscing about one day returning and having a pint of Guinness there.

has prompted this.

[REDACTED] all the years The Cow has been open and it has always been the one place I would take friends to for a drink as one feels comfortable there devoid of any threat of potential aggression or trouble. I have never encountered any abuse or threatening behaviour there, and have never been offered any drugs. The food and drink there has always been maintained and served hygienically. I have never had to return a pint of beer for being off.

I belong to the IVC swimming club at Porchester Baths and during the Summer last year when restrictions were eased we used the Cow for our after swim drink because we could socially distance safely outside as a small group, (almost all our group are aged 60+). On entry inside to purchase our drinks we were held in a queue limiting numbers inside, and name / tel number taken in case any future tracking was required. I ask that you take my comments as a local tax-paying resident into serious consideration when conducting your review, and seek to resolve any issues without having to withdraw the licence of The Cow as it's a very valuable and necessary asset to our community.

Yours faithfully, [REDACTED]

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing with regard to Westminster City Council issuing a review of The Cow Saloon Bar and Dining's premises licence, ref 21/00981/LIREVP.

I am a resident of Brent and have regularly enjoyed meeting up with friends and dining at this venue. It's a cosy pub with a lot of character (sadly rarer than ever in these gut-and-remodel times) and very popular (it's not easy to book a dining table, even on a weekday!). While it is often crowded with customers, I have never witnessed any trouble - in fact, if you didn't know where it was, you'd have difficulty finding it because there is no indication of the conviviality within. As a woman in my 50s travelling to and from The Cow on foot and on public transport, I have never felt any concern about entering or leaving the pub - no threat of rowdiness or crime, or any intimidation over public safety or nuisance. In fact, it's clearly a very 'nice' pub in a 'nice' area, far more so than can be said for the pubs local to me! I hope that their licence will be granted as The Cow is an asset to the area, indeed to the character of London.

Thanks, [REDACTED]

To whom it may concern at Westminster council,

I'm writing to confirm and document my utmost support for The Cow pub, Westbourne Park Road, remaining in place and continuing to operate as a public house for all to enjoy.

It is shocking to learn that their Licence is under review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

The Cow has been a regular destination of mine from the moment I moved to West London 25 years ago. From the age of 21 to now (age 46) it has always been, and still is, in my list of top 5 of pubs to go to. Whenever friends visit London from overseas, I ALWAYS take them for dinner at The Cow. Simply put, it's a London Institution. I am proud of London for having pubs like The Cow. I can't think of one other pub that has as many qualities as The Cow. The staff are amazing and I have formed relationships with all of them over the years. The Cow's atmosphere and environment feels like an extended family. The lengthy service of the staff is a testament to the brilliant work/life culture The Cow stands for. It is also important to point out that I have NEVER experienced personally or heard of, for that matter, any form of public nuisance, public safety issues, crime or disorder whilst visiting The Cow. In fact, as a woman, it is one of the only places that I would feel comfortable going on my own for a meal or a drink.

We have continued to support The Cow throughout the Covid-19 pandemic by ordering food for home delivery most weekends. It's kept us going throughout these testing and challenging times and has brought much needed relief to very stressful and anxious lockdowns.

We are looking forward to the day The Cow reopens its doors following the lockdown, when we will continue to frequent and support this wonderful, friendly, fun establishment. The Cow losing its premises license is an unimaginable thought. The community needs The Cow now more than ever before.

Please do the right thing for the many many thousands of us loyal devotees and customers.

Yours sincerely

I hope this mail finds you well. I am writing to you to appeal that "The Cow Pub" remains open and their license is renewed without further delays.

The Cow is a very important part of the neighbourhood and safe place for all residents as well as visitors to the area. It's a very proud institution for us all.

It's one of the few places in the area that has kept such integrity whilst maintaining an authentic charm. They continue to always deliver on high quality food & drink and their staff cannot be matched in their unfaltering passion for what they do and the service they provide to their patrons.

I have always had the best experiences at The Cow and have always felt safe at home every time I have visited this establishment.

I hope this appeals to your better judgement in saving such an institution and keeping the integrity of our neighbourhood alive and well.

The Cow is a home away from home and we all cannot wait to be welcomed home once again.

Save The COW!

There are no reasons whatsoever that the council should even consider revoking The Cow's license to trade. Do you people even try to imagine how difficult it's been for The Cow and other small businesses in the borough during the past year? The Cow has survived, just, and now the council is considering killing it. Shameful. Utterly shameful.

As regulars since opening we can assure you that the atmosphere in and around The Cow is unfailingly convivial, peaceable and orderly. It's a bar restaurant. The interior is set up to encourage conversation. When music plays it is always set at a volume below that of conversation levels. If it were otherwise we wouldn't go. The regulars at The Cow are entirely respectable, locals mostly and a good social mix. The Cow is a priceless local asset. It should be cherished as such.

Presumably the council has received a complaint of some kind. If so, the council will, no doubt, consider the possibility of malicious intent.

I write to you as a patron of the Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road.

Having spent many a pleasant evening there I am dismayed to hear that their licence is under review.

A warm and welcoming environment, they have been providing their customers with excellent food and drink for over 25 years and have become a huge asset to this part of London.

Times have been incredibly hard for the hospitality industry and the future is looking uncertain. I expect to see many establishments unable to re-open so to lose one unnecessarily would be incredibly sad for [REDACTED] residents and visitors. I have personally never been aware of issues on public nuisance or safety, I have only ever experienced a friendly and jovial atmosphere.

The situation can surely be resolved with the management who undoubtedly will respect and address these concerns.

I have no hesitation in recommending The Cow, as a safe and welcoming place, to any of my customers at Sweetings Restaurant now and in the future.

Yours sincerely

To whom it may concern,

I would like to offer my opinion on the Cow as I understand the license is due to come under review on the grounds of public nuisance, safety and the prevention of crime and disorder. I have visited the Cow a number of times over the last few years, I have always found it to be one of the most welcoming and enjoyable experiences on each occasion. Friends of mine who live in the area often invite us to meet there (not recently of course) and it has been a valuable meeting spot for us to enjoy an evening.

I hope we will be able to continue to do so in the future.

Kind regards,

To whom it may concern,

I have been a friend of The Cow for nearly 6 years. [REDACTED], I will always remember the day I walked through its doors for the first time: warm, vibrant, everybody busy in conversation, a perfect pint of Guinness, half a dozen oysters that tasted like the sea.

The words 'iconic' and 'institution' are words that are thrown about loosely when we talk about special places, but if they were to be used today, may they be used here. The Cow embodies the warmth of spirit that all neighbourhoods wish for, adding enormously to the rich tapestry of that corner of London. I am sure that I speak on behalf of many when I say that I yearn for its doors to open again.

A measure of how much of an asset The Cow is could be taking note of the variety of people who enjoy themselves there. With such high quality that is void of pretentiousness, one is disarmed and feels at home. It is clear that The Cow has this effect on everyone who walks through its doors. I love taking visiting friends for dinner or drinks; I show them with pride that The Cow is 'my little place'. Being practically a neighbour, I have never experienced anything but happiness and enjoyment from its presence and I cannot imagine The Cow ceasing to exist.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sirs,

I was very disappointed to learn that The Cow's license is being reviewed.

[REDACTED] and have been a regular visitor to The Cow ever since. It is an excellent, beautifully-designed and well-managed pub which has been a hub for my social life for 25 years. The Cow was the first place I went - for Guinness and a pint of prawns - after the UK's first lockdown ended last summer; it will also be my first port of call once the current lockdown ends.

The Cow entirely merits its reputation as one of the best gastropubs in London (among the top 20, according to the Evening Standard). It is a design classic, and closing it down would, in my view, be an act of cultural vandalism. Its closure would also be highly damaging to the local economy, within which the Cow is a revered landmark.

I fail to understand why the Cow's licence is now under review. I am happy to confirm that in all these years I have never felt remotely threatened at the Cow, nor have I witnessed abusive or criminal activity.

I appreciate that being a neighbour of any successful pub must at times be frustrating for local residents, and that this presumably is the reason for the current complaint. Yet, such frustrations will have been commonplace ever since the first pub opened in the UK over 1,500 years ago. They are not a valid reason for closure of a successful and loved business.

At this time, while we all suffer the emotional distress of being kept in near-solitary confinement in our homes, nothing would be more distressing than knowing that The Cow will not be there as a focal point of my community's social life on the other side.

I therefore very much hope the Council will renew The Cow's license.

I am copying this email to Tom Conran's office - but, the interests of full disclosure, confirm I have never met Mr Conran.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I'm writing to share my support for The Cow pub (89 Westbourne Park Road, London W2 5QH) in response to the Premises Licence Review (ref. 21/00981/LIREVP).

I [REDACTED] and count The Cow as one of my favourite pubs and restaurants in the area. It's an authentic British pub which serves high quality British produce at a really fair price making it both a brilliant local as well as a lovely place to have a special occasion. I've had birthday meals there and think the quality of the food/drink, service and atmosphere is fantastic. I regularly recommend it to friends and family.

I have never experienced any crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues at The Cow. I've visited since the pandemic restrictions were put in place (when dining indoors was permitted) and they followed covid healthy and safety measures with all tables distanced etc. whilst maintaining great service.

Whenever I visit The Cow I have a great time - because everyone there is having a great time. Happy staff and customers - we would all be bereft if such a rare gem it were to close.

Best wishes

Dear Westminster Licensing,

I am writing to you concerning the pending Review of the premises licence for The Cow Dining Rooms in Westbourne Park Road. Ref. No. 21/00981/LIREVP.

Since it opened in 1995 I have been to The Cow on many occasions celebrating countless birthdays in the downstairs Bar and enjoying many a Sunday lunch in their upstairs restaurant. The food is excellent and the atmosphere lends itself to a pleasant dining experience.

The Cow is a great addition to the food provision in the area with its unique cuisine and cosy intimate interior. As a small establishment, it serves well for those of us who do not like the larger pubs with loud music and young crowds. As an older, single female who has been a resident of this area for over forty years, I find the Cow provides a welcoming, safe environment to meet friends either for a meal or a quiet drink in the evening. I have never experienced unruly behaviour or any sign of public disorder during my visits ...and would feel quite relaxed to pop in for a drink on my own.

The Cow is a valuable asset to the Westbourne area providing a comfortable, local atmosphere, slightly off the beaten track and, away from the livelier Portobello Road area, it serves as a proper local bar!

I would hope that these considerations can be taken into account and that The Cow remains as it is for at least another 25 years.

Many thanks, [REDACTED]

I understand you are in the process of reviewing Ther Cow's premises licence.

I just wanted to put on record two important points. Firstly, the Cow is a first rate pub and eating house - quite possibly the best in London. Great ingredients, warm welcome and fantastic beverages. My friends and I have been coming since 1997 and we adore everything it has to offer. Secondly, in all these years we have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues - quite the contrary, as we have always felt safe and secure.

I hope you come to the correct conclusion and allow the Cow to continue to serve the Capital.

Dear Sir,

I am writing regarding your review of The Cow's premises licence.

I have been visiting The Cow for 11 years. It is a key part of the community in Notting Hill and people also travel to The Cow from all over London, and beyond, as it has such a good reputation as a proper pub, a great friendly atmosphere, excellent food and high grade musical entertainment.

In all the time I have been frequenting The Cow, I have never known there to be any instances of public nuisance or safety, and I have certainly never seen any instances of criminal activity or disorder.

To whom it may concern,

I am led to believe that you are in the process of reviewing the premises licence for The Cow in Westbourne Grove.

I am saddened by this new and would like the record to show my firm belief that the withdrawal of a license for The Cow would be wholly wrong. As a long term resident of Chelsea & Westminster, employee of [REDACTED], I have been a regular patron of The Cow since 1998.

I believe strongly that The Cow is an arguable contender for the title 'greatest pub in London', with exemplary seafood and an incredible atmosphere. It is a welcome antidote to the growing culture of impersonal corporation owned public houses and undeniably an important cultural landmark. Like The Grapes in Shepherd's Market and the Mason's Arms in Bow Lane, we must protect the best of breed of quintessential Britishness.

Also, I must add that in the many years I have been visiting The Cow with friends and family, I have never once experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues. Quite the contrary, I have always felt safe, secure and welcomed by a friendly staff that care about their venue in a way that is sadly being lost to the march of rapacious capitalism.

I trust you will come to a just decision and allow The Cow to continue serving its place as part of the rich tapestry of London.

Yours Sincerely, [REDACTED]

To whom it may concern,

I am writing regarding the licence review for The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

I have been visiting The Cow on and off for about 15 years with friends and family. It is without question the best pub & restaurant in the area, with an inimitable, unique character that gives so many people joy.

At such a difficult time as this, the existence of places like The Cow is what we many are really living for. In fact, when I personally think of society opening up again it is very much with my mind's eye on sitting with loved ones in such a fine establishment that offers such a sense of the community we are all missing at the moment. The establishment is really the heartbeat of the area and where one truly feels welcome and at home at all times.

To the specifics of the licence review, I can categorically confirm that I have never experienced any type of crime and disorder, nor public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. Nothing even close.

Dear Licensing Official, Westminster Council,

I am writing to you today in support of keeping The Cow pub and restaurant open, hopefully forever.

I had heard of and had visited the lovely, traditional, gem of a pub that is The Cow. One of the things I love best about this neighborhood is that it has its own unique, diverse character and heritage. The Cow is one of the places where you can socialise with people from all walks of life. In my visits there over many years I've run into local characters, movie stars, financial wizards, D-List celebs, and aristocrats.

It's a special place, and remarkable all the more because it would be impossible to create this kind of environment artificially; it has evolved naturally and to my mind is the truest expression of all what makes Notting Hill so special, and why I stay here. Such a valuable asset to the community deserves our respect, reverence, and protection.

During these dark times, I have dearly missed the opportunity to connect with others and the places which make this connection possible. I've walked by The Cow many, many times throughout this lockdown and been able to remember the good times I've had there and hold up as hope the belief that those times will return, eventually. It would be cruel to take this hope away from people like myself.

As a woman, I value places where I can go out and feel safe, and I have always felt safe in The Cow. I've never experienced any rowdiness or bad or criminal behaviour of any kind in any of my visits to The Cow, so I could not speak to that. What I can and will speak to is the utter imbecility of people who have chosen to live near a pub who are then surprised to find that pubs contain people and conversation.

It seems punitive and unjust on the kind and professional people who run The Cow and on the establishment itself to shut it down forever based on the peevish complaints of those who, quite frankly, should have used better judgement in choosing where to live. I don't regard The Cow as a particularly noisy pub at all, and I certainly don't believe that the community should lose The Cow and that the many should be disadvantaged based on the concerns of just a few.

As I close this I thank you for reading and considering the voices of all those in the community in making this decision. It would truly break my heart to lose the The Cow, in a year when many, including myself, have lost so much already.

Kindest regards,

Dear Sir/Madam

I write in regard of the re-issuing of a licence for the Cow pub, Westbourne Park Rd.

I for one and I'm sure I can speak for all my own circle of friends and family, would be so very sad to loose the Cow as a valued meeting place.

It has always been a delight to go there and enjoy their hospitality. I particularly like to go and have a meal or at least a snack of a pint of prawns which are always delicious. The food has always been one of the main reasons that I would visit The Cow.

It can get quite loud and jovial but I have never witnessed anything untoward or disruptive. In fact I would say the opposite. People always seem to be respectful of each other and really friendly which can be unusual these days.

I hope that this might reassure you of my good intentions and those of this establishment.

It would be a significant lose to the community if we were to loose The Cow. God bless her.

Many thanks for your kind attention. Very best wishes.

To Whoever, this may concern,

I recieved a news article from The Cow on 89 Westbourne Park Road, that instantly sent shockwaves through my very spirit. The Cow's license is being reviewed.

I have known of The Cow much longer then i have had the pleasure to call them friends.

After going through the training, leaving with excitement that has lasted till this day, i set out along and began speaking to all of the businesses. I noticed the area had a community and i was drawn to it.

before The Cow, but even at payment sense these are the 2 businesses that was centre of business development managers attention.

After being in the area and being known through a good reputation, i came across the staff of the cow, they were very willing to hear me out, and gave me a chance to meet the owner which i appreciated. I have done there card machines for 7 years now at the Westbourne and The Cow, as well as over 5-10 other merchants along the same road. I am here every carnival in support of all of these businesses so i am aware of all situations in this area, and i know this better then many people even who live here.

While working in merchant services i also spoke to some of the estate agents and I noticed that The Cow and The Westbourne was also used as an amenities in the area. This is a place i met many friends, prospects. I fear, any further disruptions past the ordinary, following brexit, following this lockdown. I know personally from doing the merchants card machines and following many discussions. The businesses have all found it tough lately and when things reopen The Cow not being there will feel like Notting Hill has made a massive loss over this lockdown.

While walking down to say hi to old customers, its impossible not to see the damage, i can see hope is beginning to return for some, but closing the cow will feel like a huge kick in the face to many people in the area, who have social distanced, they have stayed at home, they have lost money on trading, some 100s of thousands. They have had to miss out on carnival trade. MAu MAu closed down, Rum Kitchen. If the Cow closes this will hurt the community so much, not even to mention that it will cause even more problems because the Westbourne will take on all of the extra traffic and although it seems like the 2 are busy, 1 by itself is actually worse as 2 balances the traffic and the different types of attitudes in the community, which in most cases would result in a much more friendly atmosphere so less conflict.

I think everyone will agree with me here. While at the Cow, everybody feels safe. I have never experienced any violence, even arguing in The Cow, there is always many staff, security, and local friends and faces, the security even across the road all support eachother and this is one happy community, nothing anywhere is perfect, but my experience and i would say 99.9% of customers experience is always a positive one. Something to make you wanto come back here, even move like me. Naturally as this is a community, at times people are outside, always affable, smiling, talking and reminding me on what made me fall in love with the first time i set foot in .

Shutting This pub any longer then this lockdown has forced will be a very big mistake and i hope to see the happy faces June 21st when this lockdown is finally over. I'm sure through this whole experience of this pandemic, we have all learned positive lessons that will help us operate at the top of our industries. Please reconsider.

Best Regards

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to share my views on the license renewal of The Cow public house on Westbourne Park Rd.

I have been a local resident for the past 18 years. The Cow is the jewel of our neighbourhood. It's the only pub that I would go to on my own knowing full well that I'll know a couple of locals and will no doubt meet some new ones. It's the friendliest and most welcoming pub that I know in London.

My wife and I celebrated our wedding day in the dining room of The Cow in January 2020. This is testament to how much we value, appreciate and support the establishment.

If the license were to be revoked it would be an enormous loss to the neighbourhood and community. I believe you must also consider the employees of the pub who are in my opinion the best and most loyal employees that you could ever wish for. Luca and Pedro the main bar staff have been working there for over 18 years and know most of the customers names and their favourite drink!

I implore you to look favourably on a full renewal of the license so the community of this idyllic pocket of London can continue to enjoy a friendly pint with delicious hearty food.

If you would like to discuss this any further or interview me as part of your investigation I would be happy to make myself available.

Greetings

Having been born and lived in the area for many years, I would like to whole heartedly support the review of the Cow's licence.

The Cow has been an integral part of mine, many and the area's social fabric for years; especially with the vast reduction of other (inferior) licensed premises over the last 20+ years.

The Cow has a wonderfully diverse, interesting and friendly crowd. Along with fine food, beverages and wonderful staff.

In addition, I have never witnessed any crime, public nuisance or safety issues whilst there; unlike certain other premises not that far away.

It really would be a tragedy to lose such an important and integral asset to the community / locale. The area has changed enough over the years and losing something that help's make it unique, which if the Cow would be lost, would certainly discourage visitors to the area or certainly may make certain residents / loyal customers seriously think about relocating.

Kind regards

Premises in question: The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Rd, London W2 5QH ("The Cow").

After having lived in the community for over 2 years and frequently visiting the above premises during that time I can confidently say The Cow is an asset to the community. The Cow is a special place offering exceptional food, service and hospitality. It is a favourite pub for many local residents, including for my partner, myself and many of our friends living in the area who enjoy the great combination of great food, drinks and service, a combination that in my opinion is rare in pubs. During COVID, its delivery of food and drinks has also brought a positive light to the otherwise restricted and dire circumstances we find ourselves in.

In addition to the offering of good fine and drinks, staff are incredibly friendly and accommodating as well as highly respectful of the surrounding neighbours, constantly reminding customers to keep noise levels down and to generally respect The Cow's neighbours at all times when attending The Cow, including when outside or leaving the premises.

Yours sincerely

To whom it may concern:

I am writing to show my support for The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

The Cow is very much an old fashioned proper pub which is much loved and supported not just by the local community but by a much wider community as a hub of the area and a well known destination for out of towners. It is a beacon of light to many people to meet, connect and of course enjoy its fantastic food. All served by wonderful staff led by Petro and Luca. It is the fabric of Notting Hill.

Personally it holds fantastic memories of birthdays, dinners with friends, quick drinks post work, never having to ever arrange to meet a friend necessarily as you will always know a friendly face will be there whether you know them or not. Remember Cheers? Well the same vibe but with much better beer and amazing food! The Cow is a old friend full of a wonderful mix of people all happy to lend an ear, give advice, celebrate an occasion or feed you until you are full. The Cow does not discriminate who you are or where you are from.

I most certainly have never suffered any crime, disorder or safety issues there at all. The staff are very good at keeping people in check if necessary and safe, of which we all respect as it is such a much loved place. We, the customers, CARE about The Cow.

As many pubs have changed hands/clientele or closed down over the years The Cow has carried on for 26 years, and I have enjoyed a good 11 of them and wish to for many more years to come.

Yours sincerely [REDACTED]

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you as a long term resident of [REDACTED] as I understand Westminster Council are currently reviewing the Cow's licence.

I moved into the area in 1995 and first went to the Cow in 1997. I've been a customer since then. It's a 'true public house' - it's well run, friendly, serves good quality food and beverage and where people from all walks of life are welcome. It's a place where I feel comfortable meeting friends but also feel happy to take work colleagues and my parents, who are struck by its convivial atmosphere. Over the years it has earned a positive reputation that has spread throughout London and beyond.

In the time I've been going there I've very rarely seen the kind of bad behaviour often associated with popular pubs. I was there when it reopened on July 4 last year, the first day after lockdown. Although I didn't see it, I was aware that there had been a fight that night - notable because such incidents are so rare in the Cow! My understanding was that the fight was between young men, some of who had come over from the Westbourne pub across the road. Given it was the first day the pubs had been open in nearly four months it was perhaps not a surprise that such an incident took place.

The Cow is one of the last true pubs left in the area, making it a real asset of community value. A couple of years ago a well known local resident passed away - the Cow was the obvious place for his many friends to meet and console each other. It's the place of choice for many in the local community to gather at Christmas and on other special occasions.

I believe it would be a huge loss to the area should it be closed, so was saddened to hear its licence was under review. The events of last year have been unprecedented making communal spaces more important than ever. It's often said that the difference between Covid and the war/blitz - was that during the war pubs and schools remained open which helped foster community spirit. I would be grateful if you could consider my comments, which are shared by many local people, in the forthcoming review of the Cow's licence.

To whoever this may concern,
I'm emailing regarding the review of the Cow London on Westbourne grove. [REDACTED] and have grown up there, I consider it my second home and for it to close would be completely heartbreaking. I can assure you I've only ever seen people having a great time and never come across 'crime and disorder' like you've stated there is. It's a place I hold very close to my heart, as do a large majority of West London... Calling it the best pub in West London may sound biased but I can assure you that many others feel the same way, I've had people come up to me and say that they love it so much because it's 'a place where everyone is accepted.' and if that isn't a reason why the Cow is a great asset to the community then I'm not sure what is. When I heard it was being reviewed I was in shock, not only have I grown up there but I have also worked there so I've spent a lot of time in the pub and have never experienced any 'public nuisance', nor have I experienced 'safety issues' like it's been said there is. This year the pandemic changed a lot and we couldn't operate as usual, but we made sure that everyone social distanced and The Cow hired many security guards to enforce that rule. The Cow closing would be so heartbreaking for many and I honestly pray it doesn't come to that.

Westminster City Council,

I believe The Cow is an asset to the people, the neighborhood, and London and should retain its license. I can only attest to this because each time I visit, I've had nothing but comforting meals, great service, and made memories with friends old and new. [REDACTED], I didn't know anyone. A co-worker suggest The Cow. My first visit was on a typically British night in November with my visiting sister after our first Premier League match. We strolled in, found a table in back on the first floor, and it was the quintessential end to our evening. We sat in back, ordered a few pints, had the best fish stew around, and settled in. The mood was light hearted, food and service exceptional, and I felt at home.

From this first visit, I've been back many times. When friends visit from out of town, I make a booking. It is a place that retains that special something despite all the changes around it and I think that combination makes it a revered place for all of us. I have never experienced crime or disorder, public nuisance, or safety issues while visiting. I have always experienced a welcoming atmosphere and service and exceptionally comforting food and drinks. The Cow and all of its patrons due live up their moniker, "Eat Heartily & give the House a good name," and I look forward to my next visit with friends once this is all behind us.

Thank you and keep well.

Best,

Please reconsider your action against the Cow. Having been bought up in west London the Cow pub has been and always will be my go to venue to meet friends and family alike in the area. It serves the best Guinness and oysters, this side of a Dublin and it is the beating heart of the area. Not once have I experienced any crime or antisocial behaviour there.

I am writing in connection with the upcoming review of the licence of the The Cow public house on Westbourne Park Road.

I have been going to The Cow regularly since it opened twenty six years ago. I have always found it to be a safe and friendly environment, serving excellent food and run by a highly efficient and professional staff under the leadership of its owner Tom Conran.

Having visited on numerous occasion with friends, business colleagues and family I have never witnessed any violent or unacceptably anti-social behaviour, and have never felt concerned for my for my own safety or for any other of its patrons, or the general public.

It is of course a pub and like any others I have frequented there have been occasions when individuals have drunk too much however the staff have dealt with the problem with the utmost courtesy and professionalism. There is a zero tolerance policy upheld by the staff and management, to ensure the enjoyment of their patrons.

It's a credit to the Cow that the majority of their staff are full time employees of many years' standing who take great pride in the personality and reputation of the pub and have maintained high standards throughout its many years I understand that the issues that have led to the current review of The Cow's licence have all occurred in the past year where we have had to endure the difficulties of Covid.

The government's pandemic related restrictions have been changing constantly since the pandemic began, and often appear to be wholly arbitrary. The confusion around them has been further compounded by different rules being applied by the four nations, and further regional differences within those nation over different time periods. The government's messaging and implementation of those greatly varying regulations has been at best muddled, confusing and contradictory.

We are living in extraordinary times where so many have been severely affected both financially and also suffering mental health issues and the one thing that people can see on the horizon is the ability to go out and socialise. Many hospitality business have had to close and therefore the ones that have survived should be encouraged and supported.

It would be astonishing for The Cow to be punished by removing its licence for the alleged infringements when it is such a safe haven for so many people....and indeed you would be removing a local institution which in these times would be detrimental to the reputation of the City of Westminster Council.

Yours faithfully

Dear Westminster City Council,

I would like to share my thoughts about one of the most wonderful pubs London has within its centre: The Cow.

Personally, The Cow has played a key role in that it has made my arrival in this city so much more colourful than it already can be. It is a place where I and everybody I have ever had the opportunity to introduce to it were welcomed in the friendliest and most personal form. With a unique charme the team has managed to make every visit special.

In very few places come people from so many backgrounds, countries and probably taste in beer and sports together peacefully and at eye level like at The Cow.

It is therefore an important place not just for me, but everybody who I introduced to it and especially those who didn't have the chance to experience the hospitality and the unexpectedly fantastic Oysters or Chicken Kievs.

At the very least I can confirm that I have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. I would much rather confirm that I have experienced wonderful people, ideas and overall an outstanding time.

Thank you very much for your time and I hope this will help with your decision making process about the potential future of the place and its people.

To whom it concerns,

I don't quite understand what has happened that I should find myself in the position of me having to write this email.

How on earth is there a situation where Westminster Council are issuing a review of The Cow Restaurant and Dining Rooms Premises Licence?

I am shocked beyond words. The Cow is not only a local institution it is a London institution and indeed British institution. I have lived in this community for over 20 years and The Cow is a centre point to our community providing a wonderful environment to meet with friends, colleagues and family. I am sure that I don't just speak for myself but also for the thousands upon thousands of people who would echo my words. For any of my friends visiting from abroad a visit to London is not complete without the British tradition of a pint in The Cow.

I protest in the strongest terms to this "licence review" by Westminster Council.

The voices of the local community need to be heard so that the council can fully understand how important The Cow is to our local community.

What on earth is going on? What has prompted this review?

I believe that this "review" must be carried out thoroughly and be publicly available so that we all might understand what a colossal piece of mismanagement is occurring here.

The Cow Pub, Restaurant and Dining Rooms plays an essential role in the cohesiveness of this community.

I very much look forward to hearing back from the council as I am sure does the rest of this community.

Dear all,

I wanted to send a quick email regarding the potential closure of The Cow pub (Ref: 21/00981/LIREVP).

I can't say how tough this would be to see this pub go under. This really is an institution and an excellent showcase for London pubs and London's culture generally. We are a large group of friends and see The Cow as our 'home' pub; couldn't fathom to see it close.

The Cow, so much more than any other pub in the surrounding area, is a beacon of multi-culturalism and a perfect spot where people of all backgrounds, colours and ages meet and mingle and I'm always so proud of London when I experience the vast diversity of the crowds there - without a doubt this is what gives the venue an energy that can't just be replicated but has taken years to mature. I can't think of how it would benefit the local area for this pub to close. The benefits it brings to the community, which more than ever have been tested this year, must far outweigh any negatives which are generally associated with pubs, noise, drinking etc.

I really do beg you to keep The Cow open and ensure that the local community - the rich and poor, the old and young - have this pub at their disposal to ensure that when we emerge from the darkness of 2020 and lockdown we all have our favourite pub to return to and make up for lost time and rebuild friendships and a feeling of community spirit and togetherness (and also to once again enjoy the outstanding fish stew).

Thanks for listening as well, ██████████

Hi,

Wanted to send my email of objection to the closure of The Cow pub, a truly iconic establishment of Notting Hill and the focal point of so many memories for all types of people. The Cow has a unique feel and incredible food that is not matched by the other generic pub establishments of Notting Hill. Losing The Cow would be a huge blow to the area and another jewel of West London would be lost, a place of work and meeting for the whole community gone.

The Pub attracts such a variety of people from all backgrounds colours and ages to meet and converse. We have seen the importance of social interactions in the year of COVID and how important contact with others in the social environment can pull us out of the misery. The Cow represents everything I love about London and I have been proud to have it in my local area, I cannot emphasise enough the value of this establishment to the surrounding area but more broadly London - it is everything we should be celebrating.

My household ██████████ will be absolutely devastated if the closure goes through and there would certainly be one less reason to remain in Notting Hill. I really urge you to reconsider the unreasonable closure of this historic Pub, and tens of thousands of others would agree.

Many thanks,

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing in support of not only The Cow pub and its wonderful staff, and management but on behalf of all of London, as for me The Cow is the embodiment of what makes the cities hospitality industry so unique and special.

I have been visiting The Cow for 15-years. [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] I have entertained visitors ranging from recent university graduating children with their friends, all the way up to CEO's of large Japanese corporation at The Cow. The welcome is always the same. A place where all are treated equal in an atmosphere that reflects the evolution of the London Pub experience. A few years back I took my retired parents to The Cow. My father was actually [REDACTED] which gave him more than a right to an opinion on London and pubs. In his own words, "this is exactly what a pub should feel like"....."friendly, warm, escapist, egalitarian, a place where no one is judged". He ended with "THIS IS A PROPER PUB".

For me to hear that Westminster in considering closing this establishment is a true disaster. It actually makes me question why would I choose to return to live in London after the pandemic, if our future is nothing more than branded restaurants, pubs owned by celebrity chefs under the horrible name "gastro-pub", and an atmosphere that is on a one-way ticket to sterile conformity. Maybe it is people like me that you want to remove, so you can fill the houses with more foreign second home owners running off for their plates of sushi, and dim sum?

All I have to say is "God save The Cow".

As a long standing customer of The Cow No 89 Westbourne Park Road London W2 5QH. I would like to draw your attention to the fact that The Cow has served as a fantastic restaurant, and pub and an important community place in the area.

Many many well known people have enjoyed the amazing social interaction, the warmth and depth of character of the place itself.

When the Cow was opened in 1995, it was a unique concept, Tom Conran travelled to Ireland and France and U.K to gather material for his pub, I remember it well and he gave us this wonderful eclectic flavoured environment to enjoy, fresh oysters A lovely pint of Guinness, with a feeling that we could be in Brittany or somewhere close to the sea. Ofcourse we weren't, stepping out we faced a council estate and the end of Westbourne Park Road, nothing was happening in that part of the road, until Tom came and made something from nothing.

So now we are 26 years done the line, 26 years thats a long time and its classified as an establishment now, its part of the fabric of the community of that part of London and spills over into RBKC. We as a community want to remain a community, we want these places to exist and be part of the heritage of the area. The council has a civic duty to hold the community together if it really cares about the people.

In all the time the Cow has been in existence its more then paid its way the council has received alot of money in Business Rates, licensing fees etc, many people have received honest employment from working there, suppliers have received good revenue, for there produce etc. This is a chain and its incumbent on you the council to help business not to shut them down. Families have a place in this the Cow's revenue supports Families as well, has this been thought about ?.

No I absolutely do not support the closing of the Cow theres no good reason to do this and it will hurt people, and it will damage the community who like to go there and be part of a community. We want community, not closed down sad frontage. We have already been through enough here, without closing one of the most well known respected meeting places and good food places in London.

It is not often that a venue appeals to all generations, and it would bring so much sadness to so many to lose this. At a time when we all are looking so much forward to being able to come together it is unfathomable to think that we won't have places like this to look forward to at the end of such a bleak year. Additionally, I have never once witnessed anti-social behavior that is not expected at any drinking establishment. I believe that the owners, managers, and staff members are nothing but respectful and quick to act if anything that is not deemed appropriate were to occur. They truly love their pub and go out of their way to make it a safe place for their customers, and the surrounding community.*

I can assure you that if you've ever had a perfect pint of Guinness pulled, or a plate of their unbeatable bangers and mash or chicken Kiev you would never be able to even consider taking this establishment away from all of

Dear Council

I am writing to you in support of my local pub The Cow. I've been a regular there for 25 years and would just like to tell you what a big part of the local community it is.

The Cow always observe national holiday celebrations like St George's day, St David's day, Burn's night and of Course Carnival. They really make a effort to decorate the pub out depending on which celebration it is and the pub gets a very good crowd in on those nights.

They always have doormen monitoring the entrance and crowd. I can honestly say I have never seen any bad behaviour inside or outside the Cow at these events or any other night. I've always had the feeling of being safe inside and outside the Cow.

I'd also like to mention how professional all the staff are. Also how generous Mr Conran can be. To times stand out for me.

1. He held a benefit night for the victims of Grenfell and raised thousands of pounds.

2. On St George's night a group of about eight men came into the Cow to celebrate the night. Nobody knew them as regulars. After a hour I started talking to them and they informed me they were firemen from the Paddington fire station and they saw all the St George's flags outside earlier that day and decided to celebrate St George's day in the Cow that evening. I told them they were all hero's because of Grenfell and then told Mr Conran who they were and he came and introduced himself to the firemen and announced to them and the staff that anything the firemen wanted that evening was on the house. This really lifted the evening having these hero's in the pub and everyone showed the firemen love and respect.

This is the kind of pub the Cow is.

It truly would be shame for it to close after all the fantastic year it's been part of the community.

The last year has been very difficult for everyone. So I ask you to please consider the massive service the Cow does for the community and please let them continue with the great service they do for us all in the area.

Dear Sir/ Madam

The Cow, Notting Hill.

I was both deeply saddened and somewhat perplexed to receive the news that yet another of Notting Hill's iconic destinations is under threat, and that on this occasion, it is under threat from the very body that should be supporting and nurturing its own borough's precious cultural jewels right now, rather than inadvertently or worse still, deliberately threatening them.

If I have understood the position correctly, apparently the affected / afflicted local residents outnumber the Cow's patrons, and as such their views must be heard ?

This in itself, is a laudable position which I fully support, but I am afraid that the notion that anyone living in the vicinity of either the Westbourne and the Cow - during at least the last 25 years - didn't know that they were living next to two of the most perennially popular and iconic pub/restaurants in London, is utterly ridiculous, and indeed, was likely one of the reasons they moved there in the first place.

This is an example of a current property listing by Hamptons online:

Situated just off Portobello Road in the heart of Notting Hill offering easy access to many restaurants, shops and bars. Westbourne Grove is also nearby offering an array of fashionable boutique shops, cafes and restaurants.

In time, is there the possibility also, that Portobello Road market will suffer a similar fate, because the setting up of the stalls on a Saturday morning is rather vexatious for the locals ?

I have been a patron of both the Westbourne and the Cow over the last 25 years, and throughout this period, there has been an emphasis placed on respectful and neighbourly behaviour by the owners of both establishments - and, an ever shrinking space to drink outside - simply to afford neighbours the opportunity to imagine that they didn't in fact, choose to live next to two stalwarts of the London restaurant / bar scene.

May I please very respectfully suggest, that you consider with enormous care and interest, precisely what you believe the cultural and socio economic impact of your decision will be, and also what kind of borough you're wishing to shape going forward: Notting Hill is an iconic destination globally and the Cow is one of a tiny remaining number of jewels in that crown; to harm it would be to sound the death knell for the cultural health of the entire borough.

I very much hope that you will evaluate this matter with the gravitas that it deserves, and that furthermore, you will reach a conclusion that adequately reflects the contribution the Cow has made both to Notting Hill, and to London's wider, unique profile in the world.

Best wishes

Very sincerely yours, [REDACTED]

As someone who lives within a stone's throw of this establishment I find it bemusing that the council believes that it's in the public interest to close The Cow down - in the 15+ years I've been in the neighbourhood I've yet to hear of or witness a single complaint least of all issues relating to crime, disorder and safety.

I would wholeheartedly recommend keeping the pub open and maintaining it's role in the local community.

I object to the cow pub losing its license.

'The Cow Pub' in my opinion is one of the last true refuges of hope in an ever changing London. An establishment that has stuck to its roots and never got above herself. You can have Stella McCartney at one side of you at the bar and a big issue seller at the other. Both served with the same warmth and respect that every patron who should stride across its threshold deserve. Something I feel is being lost to London as a whole.

In the 18 years I've had the pleasure of calling it "my local", I've never heard one argument, nor seen one act of violence, nor seen the staff having to deal with someone being unruly. That's the beauty of the place, respect given, respect shown.

I met my first wife on the green bench in the corner after only three weeks of being in London. All the tables at my wedding reception were named after pubs with the cow taking center stage, so no doubt I have a sentimental history with my pub.

Hailing from Scotland, all my family and friends who've been down to visit me over the years have all been to the cow. Any trip down is not complete with a visit, nor the customary question, "what day are we going to the cow?". I even been asked the same question from friends far and wide across the globe.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I was sorry to hear that the licence for The Cow was under review and would like to offer a few words in support of its renewal. I am not normally a huge pub-goer, but I don't consider the Cow to be a run-of-the-mill pub, and therefore visit it as often as time permits when I am in London.

I invariably find the staff welcoming, the friendly clientele a wide mixture of all ages and professions, the food completely exceptional; in short I consider the Cow to be a perfect exemplar of the community watering-hole, and the area would be the poorer were it not to have its licence renewed.

I have never felt less than 100% safe either inside or outside the Cow, nor witnessed any untoward behaviour by customers there. In my experience the noise generated from tables outside is considerably less than other establishments in the immediate vicinity.

I do hope The Cow will be able to trade long into the future, as I really value it as the kind of public house which is so rare in London now, the kind that really puts its stamp on a community and in return becomes an emblem of that community, through its determination not to constantly reinvent itself to no discernible purpose, but just to celebrate its long-established individuality and be a great neighbourhood public house.

Yours faithfully

It provides food at an incredibly high standard, (the fish stew is second to none and the Guinness is just perfect. To think that it's in danger of survival is unthinkable, I've never experienced any issues with crime, only a convivial atmosphere and a welcoming, caring staff who care about their clientele. Good evening,
[REDACTED]

I am writing to you in response to your review of The Cow
I have been a guest and customer at The Cow for at least 20 years.
I work overseas in some unsavoury countries and find that returning home to The Cow i hanker for the safe space that it is, that I will find good friends, good conversation and a happy place to enjoy a few hours.

The Cow means the world to me as I have made many good and close friends there from chance encounters.

The Cow is a community space where you meet people from all walks of life. The decorator, market trader, professor, maitre D, rock n roll singer, BBC commentators, artist, maker of hats.. the list goes on. Safe to say the clientele are eclectic.

All are made welcome with equal hospitality.

I am by profession someone who observes many things the average person doesn't and i can say with good heart that i have never encountered anything that could be described as 'Crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues.' Nor would the staff there permit such things to happen. A place that did would not get my custom - i just don't need that when i return home. Even during Carnival when so many places suffer issues i can say honestly i have never seen such a positive energy and generosity of spirit.

Pubs that are also dog friendly are a rarity these days and both myself and my dog have been made extraordinarily welcome.

The staff there have the ability to make you all feel part of one big happy family and that is to be embraced and championed.

I can not fathom what has prompted this review, but i am sure it will show the esteem amongst the community that the Cow is held in.

Establishments such as The Cow should be cherished.

To whom it may concern,

Please be advised that I have been a patron of The Cow for over 20 years.

I did not live in the area when I first started to enjoy the friendly ambience, good beer and great food that this pub consistently provides but when the opportunity arose it was one of the reasons that me and my family moved nearby.

I have never seen any type of public disorder or even heard third hand of such behaviour in all the time that I have been going to The Cow.

It is a pub where you know that your family will always be safe.

As an ex licensee of a potentially volatile premises I am always impressed by the way in which the management and staff conduct themselves and work hard to ensure that this great place continues to be such a relaxed and welcoming local community establishment.

In conclusion it is a massive asset to the area.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you think that I may be of any assistance or you require further

To Whom it May Concern:

We write in full support in maintaining the The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining rooms open.

Since we have [REDACTED], this pub has welcomed both my husband and I (and friends) with open arms, contributing to the much cherished feeling of community. We have, over the years, made friends whilst dining and drinking at The Cow, and have missed it tremendously since the beginning of lockdown. To turn your back to an established community institution like this one would be extremely unfair, especially during a time when we should all be supporting each other.

Last but not least, I have never experienced any crime or safety issues coming from The Cow, in fact, quite the contrary. The real concern is the crime that is happening around the area, which has very little to do with their premises.

I sincerely hope the council abandons this motion to remove their license. It will be an irreparable loss.

I am writing in support of The Cow Public House, Westbourne Park Road, who Premises License is, I hear, under review.

The Cow is, in my opinion, the best pub in West London. I have been a customer for more years than I care to count. It regularly appears on top lists and has an outstanding record for food and drink. It is a huge asset to the area. Furthermore I have never experienced anything but a friendly and gregarious customer base and staff retinue. The only negative I can level is that the bar is sometimes too popular.

The long and painful period of Covid restrictions has been an inconvenience for most of us but for the hospitality sector it has been a fight for survival. It is therefore not unexpected that desperation and exasperation has occurred amongst landlords. For Westminster Council to withdraw The Cow's license at this time would be beyond cruel and would surely be a very unpopular move.

Licensed premises in general, and The Cow in particular, should receive your approbation not your prohibition.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to you to plead the case for The Cow restaurant and public house as an asset to the district of Westminster Council.

I used to live in the area and now work locally, with many friends and family in the same street as The Cow, I can honestly say that I have never witnessed any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues when visiting the Cow, or even passing it in the street day and night.

I have dined in the restaurant upstairs on family occasions with children, parents and friends. All generations are welcomed warmly and the atmosphere has been consistently friendly, warm hearted and local.

It is one of the very few pubs downstairs where I feel comfortable going to on my own as a single, now middle aged woman. I will always see a friendly face and would greatly miss the opportunity to feel safe, looked after and around friends, new and old. It is a truly neighbourly establishment.

This is an Independent pub and restaurant and it greatly saddens me that its existence should be threatened in an ever increasing environment of branded chains of restaurants. Its loss would be a devastating blow to the good character of Westminster.

It is exasperating to think that an establishment that has played such a large part of my family life, my social life and now my grown children's life could be threatened by false information and reports such as these.

Please keep The Cow premises licensed.

I am writing to give my fervant support to the renewal of the license for The Cow, Westbourne Park Road. For many years I was a resident in neighbouring Kensington and Chelsea and, like many people who know the area well, cannot affirm strongly enough how important a part of the community The Cow is. Losing an institution like The Cow would be the first step in ripping the heart out of the community, stripping away its uniquely special character and homogenising the area. Sadly we have seen battles like this rage across London, and in most cases the only winners are real estate developers and big money corporate chains. Nearby Portobello road has been the epicentre of such recent battles, with some small concessions being finally made due to massive public outcry after various irreversible losses of age old institutions to faceless corporate brands. It would be tragic if this happened to that magical corner of Westminster that draws in so many people from far and wide. I would like to explain what makes The Cow so special. Firstly, it is a pioneer. One of the very first pubs to be able to genuinely call itself a gastropub, serving classics such as provençal Fish Stew, served with the saffron alioli bread - one of my favourite dishes of all time, amazing selection of oysters and seafood, beautiful selected meat of known quality and provenance plus great vegetarian options. Secondly the staff. Often the same faces for years and years, always recognising you and treating you with professionalism and respect, with great knowledge of the food and drinks that they serve. Also the clientele. They are an eclectic bunch but with a hardcore of regulars, and a large percentage of people in their forties and fifties. I have never walked into The Cow and not met someone I know. In fact, several times, I have met people whom I didn't know I knew but after a friendly conversation have realised we have many friends in common. In short,

In short, The Cow represents everything a great community pub should. Great food, great company in an unpretentious and egalitarian setting. It is like a community living room, which in this world of increasing social isolation is an absolute lifeline for some. Never once, by the way, have I ever experienced any crime, violence or anti-social behaviour there. It is an absolute asset to the community.

People need great places to enjoy themselves. If they are taken away it will force people elsewhere or into private homes, a process that will remove the pillars upon which community sits. Without community what do we have? Simply places to live. We must not be short sighted. What made these areas great to start with? What makes people flood to them from all over the world? It is their uniqueness and their character. We should be celebrating and promoting institutions like The Cow for they provide the colour and flavour of the area that draws people in, keeping it vibrant both economically and socially.

Please do not hesitate to contact me should you require further information.

Very best regards,

I'm a Londoner born and bred, and I come back all the time (other than in lockdown). The place I always meet people is, needless to say, The Cow.

Nowhere has the same conviviality, bonhomie and quality, measured with sensible prices, in an area of London that's central and accessible. It's a proper, old-fashioned pub with that something extra that makes it special. You'll appreciate that with regulations that only the big chains can hope to meet with ease and huge overheads these individually-run places are becoming increasingly hard to find. Which should make the Cow only more precious: London needs establishments with character, not a plethora of faceless chains.

I've ever, ever, witnessed any rowdy behaviour there, had any health or safety issues or seen any crime take place: it's the essence of civilised after-work socialising or weekend family gatherings - for me and all my family, now, it's a home away from home.

If the neighbours are complaining, might I suggest, maybe, they just need to get out more?

ear Sir/Madam

I am writing you in support of keeping The Cow pub part of the community.

The Cow has been an integral part of the community and I am shocked to hear that you are considering revoking it's license.

The Cow is one of the few remaining traditional pubs in the area that serves a diverse community - from locals to tourists to celebrities. It's a place for all that offers joy and welcome arms no matter who you are. I don't understand why Westminster would choose to revoke the licence of an employer (and a diverse employer at that) that has supported its staff through this pandemic and who offers positivity and happiness to so many.

but still consider the Cow as my local. I look forward to being served my half of Guinness by Petro at the bar and then sharing a story with a local builder or an old teddy boy! It's a fascinating and interesting place that is utterly unique. It's not a excluding gastro pub with over inflated prices.. it's a local pub. Let's keep it as it is.. please!!!

I am writing in regards to the review of the license for the Cow pub- reference number quoted above. I have lived and worked in and around Notting hill for twenty six years. The same year I came to London the Cow opened its doors round the corner from my first flat - and year in year out I have passed through it's familiar doors for a glass of wine, something to eat and to socialise with friends. This has always been the BEST public house in the area. Its everything a pub should be; Its relaxed and easy going, playing host to this unique community of the local area. It's been a hard year for everyone, and many businesses have struggled, but hospitality, as we know has been hit the hardest. Despite this, the obvious passion that the pub has for the business to survive is very evident; having turned its hand to delivering their classic dishes to our door..

To come this far, and as we finally see some light at the end of the tunnel, this kick in the teeth, with the uncertainty of this absolutely unnecessary review, must be utterly soul destroying. The Cow is only an asset to this area, and should be supported by the council to ensure that these business owners can reopen their doors, and start to rebuild their business, and us locals given the opportunity to enjoy this establishment for many, many years to come. Lastly and most importantly, I have never in all my years of visiting have ever encountered anything other than great food, drink, service and company. I can confirm that I have never experienced any of the allegations, no crime and disorder, or safety issues at all. I very much hope you listen to these heartfelt appeals from the heart of this vibrant community and do the right thing, and help this asset to the area to thrive as we start to reopen the businesses that the owners have poured so much love, dedication, hard work and energy. I look forward to a positive outcome and visiting as soon as I can.

I am writing nervously on behalf of my favourite place in London and the quite surprising news that its licence is in jeopardy. I want to start by saying how ridiculous an idea it is that this almost family sitting room is dangerous in any way. This would be laughable to be honest if this situation wasn't so personally worrying to me. The Cow, since I made a move here from Ireland five years ago has been has been a great comfort to me as a man away from home forming new friendships and learning about a new city. There hasn't been a bad time ( and there have been many) in this experience that the mighty Petro and his wonderful smile didn't fix. It is coming up to my birthday and every birthday over the last few years have been spent in the same corner of the pub with the same woman that I love doing the same thing. Eating Oysters and drinking pints of Guinness. Those Pints and bivalves are the only constant during those special times as The Cows magic is in the wonderful and welcoming cast of characters and friends that also call it their front room just like me. Belly full, heart full and home each March 12th.

I am not going to waste my time telling whose lap this letter lands on of how vital a local pub is to its community or how especially important it will be to us after the horrors of the year we have all had. It would be flippant of me to state the obvious to someone who has been trusted as a custodian to special places like this.

I will however appeal to your better judgement to trust the voices in these letters and especially trust the true word of Thomas Conron who brought us all together and has been adding to this this city for many years just like his great father before him. Let him continue his work especially when our London is going to need all the help she can get over the coming months.

Throw open the doors of The Cow, Don't close them.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

I write regarding

Westminster City Council's licensing review reference number: 21/00981/LIREVP

The Cow public house is a one off, non chain enterprise that needs to be protected, a review of the licence is not appropriate especially during this time of such hardship to local people, and struggling hospitality businesses.

The Cow is more than just a pub, it's a uniquely curated venue that provides more than usual pub fare, it provide a place to celebrate all occasions, it provides good creatively considered high quality food, it is a socially mixed local establishment that welcomes anyone and everyone, to review the licence effects all the normal local people that enjoy what it has to offer, not only the establishment itself.

During the last 25 years of enjoying the occasional visit to the Cow I have not seen the alleged crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues that have been brought to question in this review. My experience is that it is well managed, and a creative asset to the neighbourhood that would be hugely missed if it's ability to trade was hindered or curtailed.

Please recognise the local support for Tom Conran and the Cow.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I am writing to you in regards of the license review for The Cow. Reference # 21/00981/LIREVP.

To whom this may concern,

Although this was previously assumed to be common knowledge, it now needs to be stated: The Cow is an asset, and plays a clear and crucial role in the local community.

The Cow is my favourite pub in London, not only for the amazing food and delicious Guinness but also for it being the place where I first met my fiancée.

I always look forward to going to the Cow, whether it's just for a quiet afternoon for a pint and some oysters, going for a lovely dinner, or celebrating a cultural holiday. Regardless of the occasion, the Cow is always an enchanting and joyous place to be!

After living through a pandemic and being forced to stay inside, it has become clear how important it is, for our mental well being, to have some sort of human connection and being able to spend time with loved ones. Right as we begin to see the light at the end of the tunnel (restriction easing and normal life returning), it feels as though our community is now being robbed of an important location; a beacon, known both locally and famously. I have longed for the Cow to finally re-open and to think that may not be possible, (due to the Westminster Council), breaks my heart.

The Cow is unlike any other establishment! For many, including myself, it is like a second home. It is a safe haven, where everyone feels welcomed and included, as if we are a big family. The aesthetic details speak for themselves; from the decorations for any event, down to the juke box updated weekly, loaded with vintage records and hand-written lists of songs! The Cow is loved by locals and well-known socialites alike. As a famous location is also important to discuss the positive fiscal implications of keeping the Cow alive. Have we have not even considered the positive financial impact of the community? In short, the Cow needs to stay and the people who support it will continue to do so.

Sincerely,

To whom this my concern

I am writing in connection with your licence review of the Cow, Westbourne Park Road and I am extremely saddened by this news that the licence of this Notting Hill legendary pub is under threat.

I have never experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues at this pub in the 25 years that I have lived in the area.

This pub is iconic and part of the social, cultural and economic fabric of Notting Hill.

People move into the area close to a pub like this and buy more cheaply because of their proximity to a potentially noisy pub, take the benefit of that reduced price and then try and close down the pub. It simply is not fair. It will make the area poorer for it if the licence of this famous establishment is revoked.

I have eaten succulent pints of prawns and imbibed many pints of beer amongst friends in the four walls of the Cow over the years and would miss it dearly.

The pub sector is struggling enough without upsets like this. Please save The Cow for the collective mental health of the area.

I am writing in regards to the license review on The Cow Public House.

It will explicablely sadden me if The Cow Public House were to permanently close. I feel as do all my neighbours: that an 'Asset of Community Value' will be forever lost. I believe The Cow Public House is vitally important for the community's social and economic wellbeing and that of the west London area - particularly, during these difficult times.

I am closely associated to individuals that are struggling with social and financial issues - they see the pub as a place to meet friends, chat to the locals and to get some respite from their own problems.

As a resident of the area for over 26 years, I have never experience anything but polite and friendly service from the staff at the Cow. There are many public houses in the local area, all of which have undergone new management and ownership - sadly most have lost their character and community support. Please do not let The Cow Public House be another statistic.

Dear all,

I wanted to send a quick email regarding the potential closure of The Cow pub (Ref: 21/00981/LIREVP).

In my view it would be a deeply saddening event if this pub were to close. This really is an institution and an excellent showcase for London pubs and London's culture generally. I have friends who travel across the whole of London to visit the Cow and have an unique experience every time.

The Cow, so much more than any other pub in the surrounding area, is a beacon of multi-culturalism and a perfect spot where people of all backgrounds, colours and ages meet and mingle and I'm always so proud of London when I experience the vast diversity of the crowds there - without a doubt this is what gives the venue an energy that can't just be replicated but has taken years to mature. I cant think of how it would benefit the local area for this pub to close. The benefits it brings to the community, which more then ever have been tested this year, must far outweigh any negatives which are generally associated with pubs, noise, drinking etc.

I really do beg you to keep The Cow open and ensure that the local community - the rich and poor, the old and young - have this pub at their disposal to ensure that when we emerge from the darkness of 2020 and lockdown we all have our favourite pub to return to and make up for lost time and rebuild friendships and a feeling of community spirit and togetherness (and also to once again enjoy the outstanding fish stew).

I'm writing to express my support of The Cow Bar & Dining Rooms. I have frequented this pub over the last twenty five years and it is a very important meeting place for the local community. It has an atmosphere that is very rare to find these days and brings a whole cross section of Portobello residents together, where socialising and meeting new people still exists. I just wanted to register some thoughts on the Cow. And unqualified support.

I have lived in Notting Hill since 2002 and I think I first visited the Cow in around 2005. I remember the towering seafood platter I ordered and the unique feel of the place. I am pretty sure I was served Guinness by Pietro that day. And I remember the amazing combination of Guinness and oysters, which was new to me at the time. The Cow became my regular pub and I refer to the number 7 bus as "The Cow Bus".

I have met a bunch of my best friends there on mid week nights, sitting in a booth or propped up at the bar. Pietro and Lute are there seemingly every day and everyone considers them the best barmen in West London. The fish stew is magical and can't be replicated !

(I have never met the owner Tom, but I have seen him at the pub a bunch of times. )

The pub is exceptionally diverse - an old mans pub, mixed with a bunch of creatives , dentists, thespis, Irishmen, Aussies and kiwis.. I really can't think of a racial group that doesn't wonder into the place and it is the ultimate community melting pot. I love the place and it is no exaggeration to say I would actually cry if it was ever closed down. I have always felt safe there and it's a lovely welcoming sanctuary.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to express my opinion about the premises license review of The Cow Pub at 89 Westbourne Park Rd, W2 5QH London, which I strongly believe is an indispensable asset for the neighbourhood.

[REDACTED]

We always considered The Cow the living hearth of the neighbourhood, a second (if not first) home, where locals could meet in peace.

We always found peace and happiness there, I really can't imagine how The Cow could represent a source of nuisance or, even more absurdly, crime.

The withdrawal of The Cow's license would represent an unbearable loss and a damage for us and undoubtedly for many other residents.

The Cow is our common house, it is the soul of this neighbourhood, its best social asset. Please don't take it away from us.

Kind regards,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you both as a term resident of West London. The Cow public house has been an institution for over 25 years and a real backbone to the local community. It provides a well respected hub for the area and serves high quality food/drink at affordable prices. The Cow is a very important asset to the area and should be cherished. I never witnessed any anti social behaviour, crime or public nuisance during my visits. The Cow provides a refreshing change from the high street chains.

To whom it may concern ,

I write to you dismayed at hearing of the impending licence review for The Cow pub on Westbourne Park Road . I have been a regular customer of this wonderful community asset for well over 20 years . My working life has been and still is predominantly in [REDACTED] - and this place really has been a pillar of the local social scene for a diverse and wonderful mixture of professional and artistic people .

Even though i moved from the area 5 years ago and now live in Suffolk i spend time in the area every single week and still consider The Cow to be my 'local'. And it continues to be an important - perhaps more important than ever - social hub in my life .

As well as the locals , It's no exaggeration to say that people travel from far and wide to eat the wonderful food and soak in the atmosphere - this establishment really is a unique and important attribute to the Notting Hill and Westminster scene.

We are all just emerging from an incredibly difficult time for individuals, communities and businesses alike ; social hubs such as The Cow will be critical for the well being of many - perhaps more than ever in the coming months ahead . To be contemplating it's forced closure seems almost unbelievable to me - and would be a huge blow to many in the community .

I do hope that you will take this into serious consideration .

Kind Regards , [REDACTED]

I am writing with regards to the proposed conditions on the licence for The Cow.

I have visited the pub on many occasions over the last five years and never witnessed any criminal or disruptive behaviour. The pub is a really valuable asset to the area and would be a great loss to the local community if it were to close

I hope that your concerns can be met and The Cow can remain open.

Dear Westminster City Council

I was deeply saddened by the news you are reviewing the licence for The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

The Cow has been at the centre of the area for so many years. It's both an important place culturally and culinary. Where so many meet from all walks of life. The perfect example of local culture and a very important lynchpin to so many who live in the area and beyond. The loss of local pubs is such a blow to British heritage. A relaxed place to meet and be, to connect and talk. With technology taking over our lives and so many with their heads in a device the loss of a place for real connecting would be a real blow. It would be a huge shame for the area to lose an iconic place. It's British at its best, it's diverse honest and great. Its a safe warm and wonderful place.

I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow and have been there over 100 times.

Yours sincerely

Dear Council,

[REDACTED] and have never had any crime or safety issues whatsoever.

The Cow draws an eclectic bunch of interesting people where all walks of life, rich, poor, varying colours and creeds all get together for the love of creativity and a social gathering.

The food and drink are great and it is an integral part of the Westbourne/Notting hill fabric. The pub provides a great social centre for all of the locale, to remove the license will remove part of the soul of the area, we need to preserve and look after these long-standing, respectful, independent local businesses for as long as we possibly can.

I trust that with all of the support you will receive from the Cow patrons, many of whom live or have lived in the direct surrounding area that the license will be preserved.

Thank you for your consideration,

To Whom it may Concern,

I write to you regarding the Cow pub and dining rooms on Westbourne Park Road. I have been a regular at the Cow for many years and am concerned to hear that you are reviewing their license.

The Cow is a rare thing in a city like London. It creates a welcome space for locals, as well as tourists and occasional visitors. Everyone is equal, treated well and fairly. The staff, food and atmosphere is entirely unique. It has been the setting for so many important moments in my life in London, including the place I chose to take my infant baby daughter to meet her godparents, and my elderly parents for countless dinners and lunches. As a woman I have always completely comfortable stopping in alone for a glass of wine or supper. Day or night. In my professional capacity working on relocating international clients to live in London it's always where I take my most important and valued clients. It's authentic and special, and the long-standing staff and locals, many of whom have become good friends would be devastated at its loss.

I have never experienced any sort of issue relating to safety, public nuisance, crime or disorder. In fact I can honestly say it's one of the better establishments for creating a warm and safe environment for its patrons.

In these incredibly hard times, it's so important to value the hospitality industry in our amazing city. The Cow is integral to the locality, the culture and vibrancy of London. It is so much more than just a place to eat and drink. Please accept this letter as a sincere plea to do all you can to allow it to continue.

Dear Madam/Sir,

I am writing to you in support of The Cow restaurant and pub on Westbourne Park Rd. W2, London. It made me very sad and a bit anxious to hear that this long-standing local establishment is currently being challenged to keep its doors open.

The Cow has, for many, many years, been a place for locals to gather and socialize, celebrate, meet new people, and let's not forget, enjoy GREAT food. It's a family business run by a local resident who only ever wanted and still does, only the best for his guests, friends, and family. The memories I have of this establishment are many. Beautiful times, fun times, sad days have turned brighter at The Cow. It's a place to gather and laugh and forget your worries for a bit, which we all have our fair share, especially in the current climate. I celebrated my wedding at The Cow, many birthdays, shared other friends numerous special days there and I am only one of many who can say the exact same about this little gem.

Taking away this local pub and restaurant would be a huge disappointment for many people all around the world; I still meet people in different countries who know and love The Cow and always smile when the name is brought up. That says something about a place. It's part of the neighborhood and it's good times, good vibes, and happiness in a world where sometimes that's hard to come by.

I hope this letter will give you some insight into what this place means to me and so many others.

Please don't take it away.:

Dear licensing officers,

We [REDACTED], are writing to you about our favourite pub in west London "The Cow" on Westbourne Park road. We have always lived in this area and were so happy when it opened 26years ago as it provided a very nice civilised local place we could all meet in, providing delicious food and cosy, welcoming ambiance. It felt safe and clean and happy. We never saw rowdy elements, nor crime, nor disorder, no public nuisance either and great safety in place.

We need places like this to keep communities together and leading example of behaviour for other establishments around, it creates a happy environment and has always been in control. We never encountered problems and as many lovely pubs have closed locally it remains important to keep those special ones going, just like in France or Spain or Italy where locals can gather to their cafés, bars to exchange news and chatter. This pub "The Cow" has been a front runner for offering fantastic food upstairs and in pub a choice of freshly cooked or fished fare. How lucky we are.

Taking this life away will transform this area into another dormitory town, where everyone stays in their house and having this pub means I feel safe walking the street as there is people! Keep our city alive and happy, not another high street clothes shop, or chain coffee shop, this is still Portobello, Notting Hill, why is there a threat to close such gems.

Sincerely yours,

I have been a patron in The Cow with family, friends, colleagues and the lot - and have even been supporting them throughout lockdown by ordering via Deliveroo. The Cow is truly a unique institute of Notting Hill and must be saved at all costs. I have been frequenting for years across many different days of the week and I have never once experienced crime or disorder, safety issues or public nuisances in my hundreds of times of being there.

Dear Sir,

Subject: The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Room Licensing Review

I am very concerned to hear that the Cows premises license is up for a review. People are attracted to these once bohemian areas because of the family run establishments that add excitement and character to a otherwise sterile environment filled with furniture, hairdressers, kebab shops etc. In fact it is businesses like this that make the area so desirable and affluent in the first place. London is rapidly becoming a waste land of banality. No longer a attraction to locals and tourists. You would be making a mistake to even think about closing down this much loved business. I walk passed regularly and have never felt threatened, nor upset because of anti social behavior, and if it is criminal activities you are looking for you might want to focus more towards Queensway where i have witnessed numerous drug deals taking place openly amongst groups loitering. It doesn't take a trained eye to see the nefarious hand shakes. If people moving into the area are making noise complaints etc they really shouldn't have chosen to live there in the first place.

Regarding The Cow.

The Cow and have frequented with regularity it since it opened 20years+ ago.

Vibrant pubs are the heart of a community- one can eat or drink inexpensively while conducting business or engaging with friends and family.

Notting Hill has become a dormitory for elitist ex-pat banker types, who no doubt complain at the 'great unwashed' hubbub that is the very essence of what a socially integrated community should be.

To suggest that a busy, inclusive community venue that brings life to the increasingly desolate streets of Notting Hill in some way incites anti-social behaviour or crime surely misses the very concept of the 'Public House.'

Dear Westminster Council,

It has come to my attention that The Cow's licence is up for review. The review has been sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

The Cow is a huge asset to the local area. It is the most welcoming and friendly pub in Notting Hill and makes no judgement on their customers. They have served me and my friends so incredibly well over the years and seeing Petro and the team is always a highlight of my week. They always go above and beyond to help us when needed.

The Cow has been a regular part of my life for the last 10 year and I really couldn't live without it - not only the best Guinness in London but the food is spectacular, the staff amazing and the atmosphere incredible.

In all my visits to the Cow, I would say I have been there every single week for the last 10 years, have I ever experienced any crime & disorder, any public nuisance or safety issue.

I cannot re-inforce how crucial this pub is to the local area - this is an establishment that drew me to Notting Hill & the surrounding area.

I love the Cow.

I understand there is to be a review of The Cow's premises license. As a local resident for more than thirty years I'd like to say that this pub is exactly the sort of characterful, friendly, interesting and well-run place that makes this part of the world so pleasant to live in or indeed visit. I have never seen any significant trouble or disorder there - if you are concerned with public nuisance you might want to take a look at some of the major fast food franchises in the area which regularly generate huge amounts of litter.

In short The Cow is a gem of a pub and I hope that it continues to serve the neighbourhood for years to come.

I frequent this establishment regularly and have always found it safe and friendly. I am disappointed that Westminster would take such action against a local independent business that is a pillar and support network for so many people from all walks of life. It's fills me with doubt that the council is fit to make decisions and these actions show it has little understanding of the community and local businesses. Dear Sir/Madam,

I understand you are conducting a review of the Cow's Premises licence, on the grounds of "prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of public disorder."

and regular patron of the Cow for nearly 20 years, I would like to state that I see the Cow as a haven of safety where locals and tourists alike can enjoy good food, drink and company, in an area that has always been somewhat edgy in terms of crime. Indeed the number of burglaries in the area seems to have increased during lockdown, while the Cow has of course been closed.

The Cow is a local institution, enjoyed by countless people from within and outside the area. In contrast to some other popular venues, I have never witnessed any sort of violent altercations in or just outside the Cow, not even verbal. The atmosphere has always been very friendly, people looking out for each other.

It would be a disaster for the local community if the Cow had its license revoked. Especially at a time when pubs and other community venues are having such a hard time just staying alive as a result of pandemic restrictions.

I also note that in my experience in the past (ie pre-pandemic) management has been vigilant about not allowing people to take their drinks onto the street and enforcing correct closing time. However it is possible that such vigilance may need to be reinforced, to help allay potential complaints from local residents.

I entreat you to allow the Cow to continue to operate and serve as an important social hub for the local community, under the terms of its current Premises License.

Yours sincerely,

and frequent the Cow pub and restaurant and have never had any issues with crime or noise.

Given the economic crisis that we are in for the hospitality industry, I can see no benefit from penalising them for the overall crime rate and noise in the neighbourhood. We should be looking to do the exact opposite given hospitality is providing important employment to many people in the low-wage sector of the economy which needs help.

Moreover, pubs are an important part of the Notting Hill community and they are continually diminishing in number as property developers step-in. It would be a huge shame to lose another landmark pub in London.

OBJECTION

Dear Sir or Madam,

I write to you distressed to hear that my local pub, The Cow on Westbourne Park Road, is facing a review of its licence.

The Cow has been a mainstay of my social life since moving to the area way back in 2008 (which would certainly make me one of the newer locals!). Over the years I've had many a pleasant evening or afternoon enjoying a pint of Guinness and eating from their superb menu. Many of my friends are those I have met whilst there.

I believe the licence review has been sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

Given this I feel I should state that I have never had issues in the pub relating to any of those issues. Indeed, that is precisely WHY I have returned time after time to the Cow, as I am grateful in the knowledge that I can enjoy my time in a happy, safe environment free of the issues that plague some of the venues at Notting Hill Gate and beyond. Not once have I experienced aggravation, had anything stolen or witnessed any fighting or threatening behaviour.

I recognise the need to review and monitor pubs and bars to ensure they are providing a safe and reliable venue to the public. As such I write to you to ensure you that that is entirely the case with The Cow and wholeheartedly express my desire for it to continue for another 26 years and long beyond!

Yours sincerely,

To whom it may concern

I am writing in regard to the license review of The Cow public house and restaurant, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London.

[REDACTED]. Over the last four decades, I have seen this area develop and change, in some ways for the better, but also at the cost of the community as gentrification has crept through, closing pubs and social spaces, and turning more and more businesses into unaffordable housing.

Too many of the venues that bring the unique and diverse community of Notting Hill together have closed, and in the wake of the pandemic, I fear many more will not survive. The Cow on Westbourne Park Road is a lifeline of togetherness, neighbourhood spirit, and a huge asset to the wider community.

As a busy working single woman, The Cow is the one pub in the area I happily stop into alone for a meal, because it is safe, civilised, and friendly.

I have never seen an argument take place, let alone any kind of disturbance. I have never seen any unruly or unpleasant behaviour, as the clientele are respectful, and as the pub's motto goes, intent on "giving the house a good name".

The food is outstanding, the pub is always clean and well managed, and the atmosphere is always that of a locals pub, rather than a city drinking hole.

The staff of The Cow are second to none, knowing most if not all the patrons by name, if not at the start of the night, certainly by the end. They very strictly enforce opening hours, more strictly I would argue than any other pub in the area, and I have never witnessed any unlicensed late openings or lock ins of any kind in the last ten years of being a regular.

I have been a victim of theft in several of the area's pubs in my lifetime, but never in The Cow. On busy nights and special occasions they always have excellent security staff, and I know that any person no matter how regular their patronage will be barred from the pub on the first instance of bad behaviour. I have witnessed this, and have friends who still are not permitted to return to the pub due to one off discrepancies many years prior.

I have met a great many new friends and collaborators in The Cow, and as a gathering place for local residents, especially those in the creative industries, it is unparalleled. It is also renowned globally among colleagues in these industries.

Any future restrictions on The Cow's license would have a negative impact on my life personally, as well as on the community as a whole. I would feel like a genuine asset of the community has been unjustly targeted, and I would support an appeal of the decision.

If as a business they have managed to survive the pandemic and still have the means to operate once lockdown is lifted, I feel they should be given every support and encouragement by the local council to do so.

Yours sincerely

Dear Sir/Madam,

Letter in support of The Cow

The Cow is a West London institution and I strongly support the renewal of its licence.

The Cow remains one of the few remnants of the vibrancy and diversity that once typified our local area.

As a resident [REDACTED] for the last 25 years, I have never had any concerns if respect of public nuisance, safety or crime and disorder relating to The Cow. Conversely the staff and management of the Cow have always been respectful of and helpful to local residents and I consider the area safer as a result of their vigilance and diligent management of the premises.

I trust that Westminster council will renew their licence and I would be grateful if you kept me informed.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Sir, Madam,

I hope this email lands in your heart for kind approval in relationship to The Cow based in West London.

This place holds a million memories, a million more delicious bites & sips and not to mention its infinite exuberance of joy, fun & permission to forget a few moments of weary daily life.

In these times of emotional hardship, threat of livelihood and physical well being, The Cow represents our pathway home to a happier time, a bite & sip of reassurance that maybe we can find the energy to "do" it again, rebuild. A quirky cornerstone of West London that has so much more to offer for the next generations to come.

This is the approval we seek for, not just a simple license but a slice of goodness that we can still rely on that wasn't taken away in this bizarre historic time.

With gratitude for your consideration,

Today I have been shocked by the entirely ridiculous news that Westminster council is reviewing the premises license of an outstanding neighbourhood institution, The Cow Pub on Westbourne Park road, W11.

I have frequented the pub for more than 20 years. Regularly. I also, do not drink and have been in the bar/restaurant business for over 20 years.

Why in gods name would you review their license? I have sat in that pub, sober, for amazing nights with friends and family, young and old and it is run to the highest standard and not once in my time as a customer have I witnessed any trouble, fighting or illicit behaviour. The place is a neighbourhood institution and loved both on a local and global level.

The Cow is the type of place Westminster council should be holding up as an example of what a proper pub/restaurant should look like. It is exactly what every neighbourhood should have. What are you doing? It's wrong.

My suggestion is that you should maybe look at about 100 other licensed premises within the borough of Westminster that should be closed for all types of illicit carry on.

I feel Westminster will feel the wrath of a large part of the local community that frequent the pub, not to mention the swarms of celebrities that will No doubt jump on a campaign to save this pub. The council will be laughed at at a national and international level of this review is carried out.

I am a Westminster council tax payer. I do not want my tax to fund this sort of rubbish. Leave the pub and it's license alone.

It's a fantastic pub.

Thank you. [REDACTED].

I am writing in response to the issue of a Review of The Cow's premises Licence by Westminster Council.

I would like to share my experiences which are at direct odds with the grounds sought, namely prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

My experiences of this public house couldn't be further from the charges of public nuisance or public safety. It is one of the cornerstones of the community in the area and truly represents the diverse nature of the surrounding community. Folks from all walks of life are welcomed with kindness, goodwill and cheer. It is well known establishment on the tourist route during the first half of 2020 continued to be so. It brings folk from all over the globe to the area which is a great asset to the local community assisting other public houses and restaurants.

This past year has provided numerous challenges for the industry with confusing and ever changing rules as well as a desire to serve faithful guests who are passionate about this institution. If any infractions have been made during this pandemic period, reason should take hold and common sense should prevail, although I am well aware that Westminster Council is not famed for this trait. This has been a miserable 12 months for all people, folk are fed up, they want something to hold onto. Revoking The Cows licence will be damaging to so many people. A kick in the teeth that will create a strong reaction in the community, I have no doubt. I again urge reason and common sense.

[REDACTED] for 24 months leading up to March 2020. This, as I am sure you know, is located [REDACTED] from The Cow. I have never had any issue which i could describe as a public nuisance or indeed disorder. I have had no noise issues, no disorder issues.

I hope the above is given due care and attention, as I hope you give to the no doubt countless submissions you will receive.

Dear Sir / Madam,

I was surprised to hear that The Cow's Premises Licence is under review.

Whilst there will always be those who are anti any establishment selling alcohol on their doorstep, as an enterprise The Cow deserves your full support.

It is a friendly and welcoming establishment and in my multiple visits I have never witnessed any improper activity or felt remotely unsafe / intimidated. It is a popular venue with a buzzy atmosphere but always the right side of boisterous in my experience. My wife is not a pub goer but we both have female friends that select the Cow as a meeting point or to visit on their own which I think is testament to its benign nature.

We are lucky to have three thriving businesses (The Cow, The Westbourne and The Bonaparte) within a small area all of which provide a different offering. The fact that they can all survive in a difficult era for pubs highlights good management and their enduring appeal to a wide audience both locally and from further afield.

I view the Cow as an integral local institution and it would be a crying shame for any restriction to be imposed on it that hampers its ability to be a viable business moving forward.

I am writing to you to share my thoughts about The Cow pub (89 Westbourne Park Rd, London W2 5QH)
Excuse the rambling but i promise it will make sense in the end.....

[REDACTED] i was so grateful to have found The Cow.

It reminds me of a London i thought had been lost, the ones you see in movies and people say, "nah it's not really like that anyone", "it's too gentrified now, you don't get any real characters" etc...
People of every demographic come to The Cow to chat, hang out, catch up and chill out.
It's full of life and laughter and AMAZING food! - This if you have eaten in any "gastropub" in the past is a real asset not to be under valued.

The Cow is somewhere i will head to on a rainy Sunday afternoon when i can't be bothered to cook, or a mid week lunch with my dad (who is probably more opinionated about food than he is politics).
My partner and i stop in for a glass of wine or a pint of (the best) Guinness when we've had a tough day at work, my boyfriend desperate to make the bar man Pietro his friend.

It is a shining beacon in the community, not one who's importance should be underestimated.

We are currently in the process of moving to [REDACTED] and as well as the fact that our new place remains a sub 20minute walk to my best friend and godchildren, it is also a swift [REDACTED] to The Cow. Isn't this what community is about? Having these places that mean something to you, places that bring people together, where you can recall that insane fregola di mare you shared with your old man or the chicken kiev your cousin had to take home in a doggie bag because she underestimated the portion size.

It's one of those places you hate to brag about incase it gets too over crowded and you can't nab a seat at the back for dinner!

I walk in and feel like i'm so lucky this is my neighbourhood. We have never experience any crime or disorder - even when the football is on! which really is something.
I doubt you'll hear anything but love from it's patrons and all i can say is long may she reign!

Kind Regards,

Dear Westminster City Council,

I am shocked & concerned to hear that The Cow, one of West London's most iconic & singularly authentic venues, is having it's premise license reviewed.

It is rare in today's London to find an independently owned, community-focused asset like The Cow occupying a prime location & most importantly, offering a friendly, family oriented service at a price level that makes it accessible to all of the local patrons. It goes without saying that the nearby Portobello Road, once a fruit a veg market, bears little resemblance to what it once was. Companies like 'Five Guys', Tesco/Sainsburys, All Saints... All diminish the authenticity of the area & reduce opportunity for entrepreneurs.

Which brings me to why The Cow is so important. The Cow has been observed by friends as one of the only truly cosmopolitan venues in London. It is impossible to nail it down to one clique, social group or nationality that feels welcome there & finds the space accessible. The staff are incredibly accommodating, the crowd of locals are the most loyal of any pub I have frequented during my life in London & I can honestly say, as much as a pub can be, it is a community asset which is irreplaceable. For many who live in small flats such as in the Trellick

Tower, it is a warm and welcoming home away from home. I personally believe The Cow could easily raise prices or adapt it's offering to the wealthy audience in Notting Hill; the value to the community is that The Cow does not yield to maximising profit. It values the purpose it serves the local community over turning a profit.

I can personally say that I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues when visiting The Cow, and would like to understand why, after the year that the hospitality industry has had to endure, this venue is coming under review?

Within the local area, there is extremely low cost housing that would bring with it an element of anti-social behaviour. I can't see how The Cow could have acted any better over my 5 years frequenting it to change that.

Please come back to me so that I can understand the logic from Westminster Council in this review. Reference number 21/00981/LIREVP

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this to support a local establishment that has been in my life since before I can remember. The Cow has been a cherished asset for myself and many others around the community for well over 20 years and as a result, holds numerous fond memories. It is where I celebrated my 21st birthday party as well as other less formal birthday celebrations, it is where I held my fathers wake, and where I have spent most national days of celebration such as St Davids day since I was of legal age.

For many The Cow is more than just a public house, for them it is THEIR house, THEIR front room where they go to spend time with friends and loved ones. Some of the elder members of the community have nowhere else they can rely on to go and receive some human interaction that is integral to their mental health. The cow never turns it's back on them or anyone for that matter.

From a culinary prosepitive the cow holds its head high above most restaurants in the community. People travel from far and wide to indulge in The Cows famous fish stew or their chicken kiev or the variety of seafood it is known for. Not to mention the fact it famously serves the best pint of Guinness in London.

Overall The Cow is a space that people from all aspects of life come to to enjoy its warm inviting atmosphere and on most occasions are met by the smiley face of its loyal Barman Pedro who regardless of how many drinks he is juggling, finds time to make you feel welcome and loved. There are only a handful of establishments left in the whole of London that offer this and The Cow is by far the one I personally would choose every time. Without it countless people would be without a place to simply go and surely as a result the community's spirit and morale would suffer hugely. Over the years it has embedded itself in the areas cultures and traditions and for that reason as well as numerous others it should be seen as a cultural monument that needs to be preserved as much as possible.

Yours Sincerely,

To whom it may concern,

The Cow is a great institution. To close or limit it would be to attack the very nature of what it is to be a British man or woman. It encapsulates what every person should do with their weekends - have fun, make merry and laugh.

At this time, we all need a smile and some light at the end of the tunnel.

If The Cow was to be closed permanently - God help us all.

I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues at The Cow (or any pub in Britain).

To close it, or to remove the licence of any pub in Britain right now would be amongst the gravest crime imaginable.

Give us hope, and keep our pubs open.

Dear Westminster licensing team,

I am writing to you as a 21-old student who has never written to the council in support of anything in my life. I hope that this indicates how shocked I was to hear that the Cow's license was under review.

In short, the Cow is a community institution. No other pub attracts such a diverse demographic of patrons: any age, any class and background. It is the only pub in the area where you feel that the community looks after you. I feel far safer at the Cow than any other pub because the patrons know the area and care about you. I vividly remember a time I was bitten by a dog in the street and the Cow was the first place I went into because I knew that the bar staff would look after me and they fixed me up with first aid.

Over lockdown many pubs have had to increase security measures to comply with government guidelines. The Cow stands out in my mind as exemplary since they not only complied with these measures (unlike many local pubs I could name) but did so in a way that did not alienate the community that depend on the pub for company and good cheer. I have never witnessed crime or disorder in or around the Cow - and feel sure that there would be far greater antisocial behavior if Petro, Luti, Tom and the Cow bar staff were not there to keep an eye on that stretch of Westbourne Park Road.

Anyway...I think you get the idea. I love the Cow and you should too. I would be happy to stand any of the licensing committee a pint of prawns and Guinness at the Cow on June 21st if they remain unconvinced.

I am writing to express my support for The Cow Pub. A place that provides a hub for a diverse community and a place that is an asset to your local community.

As a pub in the heart of a community, the Cow provides all it must provide:

- A place of social and meaningful interaction, the employees of The Cow are always polite, welcoming and conscientious in their manner towards customers. Further, an occurrence that is often quite rare, the owner Thomas is often at the heart of the pub. He is conscious of making sure that he serves his local community, providing quality and comfort.

- Communities often build a sense of shared values and The Cow is no different. The cow runs respectfully, politely and in a law-abiding manner. I have visited the cow on numerous occasions and not once have I witnessed anything that could be deemed as breaking the law, nuisance or disorder.

It is not necessary to say, as the heightened awareness is obvious. We are in turbulent times, people feel isolated, the community you represent is facing another few months of uncertainty and hardship. The Cow Pub will unarguably be a beacon of hope for many, a place that they will be eagerly awaiting the reopening of. The Cow has and continues to be endorsed by high profile members of the public, who I do not believe would endorse a place that acts unlawfully and against core values of society.

Personally, I have always felt safe, comfortable and overall content on my visits to The Cow. It is highly likely that you will receive a high volume of emails as The Cow really is a pub that the community would simply be lost without.

Thankyou for your time in reading this email and I hope that this is resolved in a manner that is representative of the collective opinion of your local community.

Dear whomever this concerns,

I understand that The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining room has had a review issued by Westminster City Council and therefore I feel compelled to speak on behalf of the community by what an utter joy it is to have the pub in my community and to what wonderful experiences I have at this pub.

The Cow for me is a symbol of many happy memories of my time in Notting Hill, through changing flats, trials and tribulations in my personal life, this restaurant and bar has always felt like returning to a dear friend's home. Where the warm interior greets you, along with the charming, friendly long time staff. The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining room feels like a port in a storm, somewhere that is safe and friendly. Where I have shared some of my best memories, with my dearest friends over delicious food, most notably the chicken kiev! It really would be a travesty if anything were to happen to The Cow.

I have never experienced any such crime, disorder or safety issues at The Cow. Rather of the contrary kind, on one occasion where I myself dropped my card holder in the bathroom, 10 minutes later another lovely customer had hunted me down and returned it to me, with help from the staff! Hardly a hotbed of crime but rather, somewhere people genuinely take care of you.. In addition, I not only have many lovely memories of The Cow but I have also made many dear friends in the community thanks to The Cow, which in a world of facebook and instagram feels so incredibly rare. Some of those, I have even gone on to work on creative projects with. The very essence and environment is one of joy, cosiness and security. As a young woman in London, there are very few pubs I would consider pitching up to alone and yet, The Cow I often do!

Should you have any further questions regarding this please do not hesitate to contact me!

Dear Sir/Madam,

The idea that this iconic and wonderfully popular pub is cause of nuisance and should have its license withdrawn is an utter nonsense.

I defy your offices to find a friendlier, less troublesome, more socially and age mixed and better-dressed crowd anywhere in London.

Notting Hill has changed greatly over the 30 years I've lived in and around it. This pub is one of the few spots that still offers a warm and lively (without being boisterous) atmosphere and that still plays host all walks of residential life.

Upon any visit you light be ordering at the bar alongside young and old from the estate, we'll known musicians or premier league footballers. The food is excellent and reasonably priced, the staff warm but characterful.

Where else can you drink Guinness sitting next to David Beckham or Tom cruise, have a chat with a plasterer from the estate while a Rasta chef prepares you oysters while playing incredible roots reggae?

I rarely get involved in these 'save' campaigns - in many cases when pubs get sold off or developed it tends to be from lack of local support/patronage. Nothing could be further from the truth with The Cow. I've never seen any trouble at The Cow over the 25 years I've been a regular there and I'll gladly stand up and be counted as an avid supporter and petition whomever I need to.

London needs more spots like The Cow not less.

I'm writing to confirm and document my utmost support for The Cow pub, Westbourne Park Road, remaining in place and continuing to operate as a public house for all to enjoy.

It is shocking to learn that their Licence is under review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

The Cow has been a regular destination of mine from the moment I moved to West London 25 years ago. From the age of 21 to now (age 46) it has always been, and still is, in my list of top 5 of pubs to go to. Whenever friends visit London from overseas, I ALWAYS take them for dinner at The Cow. Simply put, it's a London Institution. I am proud of London for having pubs like The Cow. I can't think of one other pub that has as many qualities as The Cow. The staff are amazing and I have formed relationships with all of them over the years. The Cow's atmosphere and environment feels like an extended family. The lengthy service of the staff is a testament to the brilliant work/life culture The Cow stands for. It is also important to point out that I have NEVER experienced personally or heard of, for that matter, any form of public nuisance, public safety issues, crime or disorder whilst visiting The Cow. In fact, as a woman, it is one of the only places that I would feel comfortable going on my own for a meal or a drink.

We have continued to support The Cow throughout the Covid-19 pandemic by ordering food for home delivery most weekends. It's kept us going throughout these testing and challenging times and has brought much needed relief to very stressful and anxious lockdowns.

We are looking forward to the day The Cow reopens its doors following the lockdown, when we will continue to frequent and support this wonderful, friendly, fun establishment. The Cow losing its premises license is an unimaginable thought. The community needs The Cow now more than ever before.

I have been going to the pub for 25 years now since I first moved into the area as a student, and have always appreciated its friendly staff and welcoming environment, whether for a quiet drink with friends or a fantastic meal with local produce upstairs. Unlike many of the restaurants and pubs in the area it has maintained roots with the local community and not just tried to upgrade itself and squeeze out its old customers. I have never felt any sense of danger or public nuisance around there, just a sense of the vibrant local community that we are so lucky to have at this time.

And particularly in a period when so many hospitality venues are at risk of closing after Covid, I cannot think why there should be a desire to close a successful and popular local venue like The Cow.

I feel that this pub is an integral part of our community. Moreover I am shocked to hear that it could be shut on safety reasons. I feel so much safer in streets where there are pubs and shop than empty residential streets. It is so much safer to have mixed used streets than purely gentrified areas with council house ghettos among them. Keep this neighbour real by keeping The Cow pub open and other shops and restaurants too. It has been there for years. Please do get in touch for further information, assistance etc

I am writing regarding the review of the Cow's Premises licence I believe the cow to be one of the best run pubs In London The Cow is the only Pub I frequent , I'm pretty fussy and usually don't like pubs very much I go there for the food which is incredible and the atmosphere which is unrivalled . The cow also holds a lot of sentimental value for me as I am sure it will for others Being in business for an incredible 25 years I have never seen or witnessed any crime or disorder , public nuisance or safety issues while at the cow . I find it incredulous to need to write this email however here it is I hope I won't need to write again

I am writing in support of my local dining restaurant and pub, The Cow. [REDACTED] . I have frequented The Cow and The Westbourne opposite for many years. I have never experienced any anti social behaviour associated with either venue. The Cow has been a source of comfort with their easy takeaway food during this current lockdown. My husband who is shielding and I (both in our seventies) have been able to order by phone and collect delicious home-cooked food from The Cow during their opening hours. The main door is locked and the side door opened courteously and quietly by one of the staff on duty. Everyone I see there is wearing a mask and observing social distancing. There is no loud music. The lighting outside is not obtrusive. It is a charming venue within the tradition of great London gastropubs. I do hope the Licensing Committee can be assured by my comments and those of other locals living nearby. The Cow provides an important social amenity with a family history of significance in London. Please keep it alive and well for us all to enjoy.

families and friends. It has fostered rising culinary talent, it has hosted weddings and wakes, and as come to represent the very last bastion of good old-fashioned, down-to-earth British hospitality. And if the past pandemic year has taught us anything, it is just how fundamental places such as The Cow play in fostering and maintaining the well-being and prosperity of a community.

It is impossible to think The Cow's presence encourages crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues - indeed one would argue that with its positioning, right in the heart of a very densely-packed residential area (with housing estates on one side, and terrace housing on the other), The Cow's very existence helps to maintain a higher degree of neighbourhood safety than would exist otherwise.

The staff keep an eye on the comings and goings of the neighbourhood, and both residents and out-of-borough visitors feel reassured by the fact that there is life in the area, especially at night, and that on the whole, everyone looks out for one another.

While it would clearly be naive to suggest that no pub is without an occasional scuffle, I can't possibly imagine Tom and his team don't do all they can to ensure their presence on Westbourne Park Road is a positive one. After all, they have been at the very heart of this community for a quarter of a century - how many pubs or restaurants can boast being around for that long these days? They are as invested in their community as their loyal following is invested in them. The Cow is a vital lifeline to what still makes London one of the greatest cities in the world - equality, integrity, and damn fine food, ales and wines. Now is the time to support and nurture much-loved institutions such as The Cow, especially after the immense difficulties and heartbreaking challenges of the past year; it is NOT the time to be threatening its existence. Notting Hill would be much poorer - culturally, emotionally and gastronomically - without The Cow.

I am writing today to advocate for The Cow's Premises License to not be revoked.

The Cow was the one of the first pubs I remember going to with my family to eat when I moved to England at the age of 8. It is where I go to have oysters and beers with my dad after work, and if someone were to ask me to book my favourite place for an evening with friends, I would always choose the Cow. The Cow defines the epitome of excellence in terms of the pub experience: its food, atmosphere, and drink are all great. When you have the opportunity to patronise this sort of establishment, it is abundantly clear the hard work that would have been required to create and maintain such a special place. In my years long experiences at the cow, never have I experienced any safety, public nuisance, or crime and disorder issues.

This pandemic has already crippled so much of the pub industry which forms an integral and historic part of British social life: it would be beyond a shame that the Cow should also have to close because of the strains of the pandemic. I truly believe that whatever fine they have or will pay is enough in terms of a punishment. The Cow does not deserve to have its license revoked.

Moreover, [REDACTED], which infamously hosted a birthday party in lockdown and was fined, went on to be reviewed, and ultimately did not, have its license revoked. Although different circumstances and in different remits, I firmly believe that The Cow, which I can assure you means much more to many more local people than Casa Cruz does, deserves to keep its doors open as well.

I implore you to consider what I, and I'm sure countless others have said in support of The Cow.

Dear Westminster Council,

Good Afternoon

I'm very saddened to hear that Westminster council are reviewing the license of the Cow Pub on Westbourne Park Road.

The Cow is such a unique and interesting pub that is very much a stalwart of the local Notting Hill drinking and dining scene. Where other establishments have fallen by the wayside to gentrification, the Cow has very kept its unique character, charm and originality.

The Cow personally means so much to me for a number of reasons. It's a home away from home where the staff are kept on and feel like family. People always have a smile on their face when you walk in and you know that you will be well looked after by their wonderful array of staff. It smells and feels like a pub from a different era, that I can pop in and out of for a hit of nostalgia. Within a 20 Metre Space there is a jukebox, bar and fish kitchen all providing different functions tying in with one another to give the pub its unique sense of character. The pub almost feels like a secret despite being so close to the main thoroughfares of Notting Hill. The Cow is not just a Pub, it's a community of like minded people enjoying themselves in a friendly and cosy environment.

What harder time in History have publicans faced during the last year. The Cow has plugged on, keeping some of its staff in work, serving wonderful takeaway meals for locals craving a slice of culinary love during such hard times. With other pubs, food can very much be a side thought, this is not the case with the Cow. The Fish Stew is well known to be one of the best in London and where else can you enjoy a pint of Guinness and Oysters at the bar listening to the Doors. I agree with Jim 'some people are strange' but I love it.

In all the years I have been a regular, I have always been taken aback by courtesy and friendly nature of the staff and customers at the Cow. I have never experienced crime and disorder and would honestly say that it's one of the safest establishments in the area, which is no easy feat given it's a pub serving alcohol.

I hope my message will go a small way to ensuring the Cows licence is renewed, as I along with many other locals would be devastated to lose the place we call home.

Best Regards,

Closing down the Cow would be a huge loss for the neighborhood. It is the only pub in which all types of people come together and the only pub in Notting Hill in which you can have a decent meal.

I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the Cow. On the contrary, I have met my future husband there while celebrating mothers day with my mum :) My grandma had her first ever oyster at the cow, and I could continue all day with the cutest and most innocent "cow stories" if you would like me to.

I am even attaching a couple of photos for you, so you understand how much this means to me. There are not many places with a soul and if I had to describe NH to someone, the cow would certainly be an important asset of the neighborhood.

All the best,

Dear Westminster Council,

I write in the strongest possible terms to support the Cow pub in its appeal against the quite ludicrous claim that it is a possible public nuisance. when Tom opened the pub. Quite frankly it proved to be one of the most pivotal days of my life. Almost every major event in my life has involved that pub and wonderful upstairs dining room.

I now live in north london but make regular pilgrimages to the Cow. It is a labour of love, Tom and his team have put everything into it From interiors, fantastic sea food, Guinness and the craic. The best and most sacred place in Notting Hill. It's not unrealistic to say thousands of peoples life will be the poorer if it goes. Closing it down will make closing the Mangrove on All Saints seem like a minor kerfuffle. Don't!

To Whom it may concern,

We have heard that Westminster council have issued a review of The cow's premises licence. We feel that this would be a very poor decision especially in the current climate. As we sit here in lockdown one of the few things that ables us to keep going is looking forward to going back to the cow, meeting friends in a good old traditional English way. There is a real sense of community , the locals that go there are like family , and it gives people security and friendships that you can't get any where else. we have been going to The cow for over 20 years , we even met each other in The cow and then went onto marry. ( we go every week and have lunch at the same table we met at )

We have never encountered crime there and always feel completely safe . It is our favourite place to go and hopefully the first place we will go and eat at when the government allows.

please don t take away our beloved pub and give The cow the licence it deserves.

Many thanks

To whom it may concern

My husband and I are writing in response to the review of The Cow's license.

The Cow is a local institution that has been at the centre of our community for many years. During lockdown, the pub has shifted its approach multiple times, responding to exceptionally difficult circumstances in order to maintain basic services - providing food and drink to many.

We are regulars, and are shocked to hear that the Cow's license is under review. Not once have we ever experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues - before or during Covid. From our point of view, it is exceptionally well managed, by a great team - we've have never seen any kind of trouble there.

The Cow is one of few pubs which is open, friendly and inclusive, bringing together a true mix of ages and backgrounds, something that makes it uniquely special to us local residents.

With businesses closing all over NH and Westminster, it seems shortsighted to be threatening such a long standing pillar of the community that brings people together and stimulates our local economy.

This community needs the Cow, and would be infinitely the worse without it.

Dear Sirs,

I write in support of the Cow Public house retaining its licence.

As a local resident ( [REDACTED] ) for the last 20+ years, The Cow is not only my "local" (and that of my family, as my children have become of legal age), but is very much a long established "local institution" for the community.

With the continued decimation of the High Street, avaricious Landlords demanding too much rent in W2 and W11, not to mention the ongoing struggles of the Public House sector - even pre COVID 19, much of the "established" local amenity that once gave the area its unique character has been forced to close with little of any amenity value to the local community coming in to replace it. Indeed, in many instances either nothing, or "yet another" Private Equity backed restaurant chain that fails after 3-4 months, whereby leaving a hole where a once widely used and well loved local business once existed.

I strongly urge you not to risk more wholly unnecessary decimation of the local community's amenity by challenging The Cow's right to continue as a local business and to remain at the heart of the local community. Post the COVID 19 pandemic, as a result of the inability of people and communities to meet at all for over 12 months at the diktat of Government, we will need as much local amenity and convivial places to gather, plus as many "local institutions" as possible - particularly viable ones - in order for local communities to be able to gather, remember and relish what an actual "community" feels like. The Cow is, and has been for a number of years, very much at the heart of this for the local area.

In support of the Cow,

Yours sincerely, [REDACTED]

To whom it may concern,

I wish to contact the council to explain my thoughts and experiences at The Cow pub on Westbourne Park Rd, W2.

Having been a regular visitor to the pub for nearly 10 years i certainly believe this pub to be the one of the only pubs in the area to have a feeling where you are always welcome. Regardless of who you are the atmosphere is always that of friendliness and positivity. If you have had a bad day the staff or other patrons will always be there for a chat whether being sat at the bar, by the fire or outside. I can not think of any area of the country that wouldn't want an establishment like The Cow in their borough, village or district. The Cow is truly unique and i love it.

This country would be for the better if more establishments like the cow existed where everyone is welcome regardless if you live across the road, a castle or straight of a plane arriving in London for a holiday. Westminster council would be foolish if they were to take the pubs licence away from them. I can't wait to come "home" for a Cow Special of 6 Oysters and a pint of Guinness.

During a period of unemployment and regular unhappiness i would regularly sit outside the pub working on my CV and i never felt any sort of issues being there on my own, the staff again always there for a friendly chat.

With all of the time i have spent in the pub i have never seen any form of crime or anti social behaviour and have always felt safe whilst there, in fact i think i have used the cow as a safe haven when not feeling safe when walking home at night. I would never have any health or safety concerns whilst visiting the pub. The staff and management of the pub should feel very proud of themselves for creating a safe and friendly establishment well away from any anti-social behaviour, public nuisance or criminal element.

I hope that my words go some way to help sustain the future of The Cow.

Good evening,

I am writing to you with regards to the proposed review of premises license for The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

Although I am not a resident of the area, I have patronized this establishment frequently on trips to London from Glasgow where I work in the drinks industry.

By virtue of my career I visit many pubs and bars in many countries and I have rarely been in one as well-run as this.

I believe the grounds this review has been sought on are public nuisance, public safety and the prevent of crime and disorder. On no occasion have I visited The Cow and experienced or observed any behaviour which could remotely fall under any of these categories, with even the widest interpretation of what might be considered dangerous or irresponsible.

I have mostly visited the pub on weekends, which by any account should be the time when one would expect such behaviour to be most prevalent, and even at 'chucking out time' I have never heard or seen anything untoward even when patrons have moved into the street to head home. There is a community spirit present whether one is part of the local community or not and this extends to the warm, welcoming and safe atmosphere even as a group of lone females, which is sadly rare in most licensed premises.

I am a personal license holder and have never seen any behaviour which by any stretch of the imagination would make me question whether I would hypothetically take responsibility for the venue.

I would urge the council, especially at a time where our valuable pub culture in Britain is in such a precarious position given the events of the last year, to rethink this course of action and allow The Cow to keep serving its loyal customers.

It is one of the few establishments that continues to cross the cultural divide and reflect the traditional mixed demographic Notting Hill. It is a wonderful venue where young and old, rich and poor can socialise in peace.*

As an Irish man and long term resident of Notting hill, this venue represents much of the neighbourhood has lost as upmarket chichi venues have replaced independent, characterful and cultural establishments. I am often greeted with exceptional hospitality by long-term staff, which is a rarity in the neighbourhood which is so often staffed by short-term journeypeople.

I have never witnessed any criminality at the Cow. Even during various stages of government lockdowns, the staff made every effort to disperse crowds and comply with government guidance.

Dear Sir / Madam,

I am and have been for many years a patron of the Cow. Since first visiting in 2012 until its doors have temporarily closed, I have never witnessed any instances or issues of public nuisance, public safety or crime and disorder take place on or outside its premises. Quite the opposite, the pub is something that is becoming increasingly rare in London, as that of a genuine public house with warmth and good behaviour shared by anyone who has the opportunity to visit.

The Cow is one of the reasons I have returned to live in the area after moving back from Chelsea this year. It will be the first establishment my wife [REDACTED], copied) and I will visit when lockdown ends, as it was the last we visited before entering lockdown.

My wife's parents count it as the best gastro pub in London and exposing my in-laws to public nuisance, public safety concerns, crime or disorder would not be a wise move for a son-in-law (however good the Guinness and Fish Stew are). Thankfully, this is never the case.

To revoke the Cow's licence would genuinely see me lose faith in what good regulation looks like. Of all the establishments I have visited in London the Cow tops all of them as a place to visit, eat, enjoy a drink responsibly and do so without fear of any of the issues cited on this licence review. I implore you to confirm its continued operations and role as a central hub in a community that values it hugely. Notting Hill and London would be a poorer place without the Cow and its team.

I understand Westminster City Council are reviewing the Cow's Premises License. This deeply concerns me as the Cow has been at the heart of the local community for years. It has a very wide and broad spectrum of customers. Including many locals, who use the pub as a meeting place. It is not a typical pub, focused on the young, being accessed by a very wide and older demographic who respect its unique charm, friendly character and quality food.

For me, it is one place where you can get away from trend, fashion and just enjoy good old fashioned quality food and drink, with familiar faces.

I would also like to add I have not experienced any crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the Cow. Infact I have found the staff, helping local vagrants and also, many of the regulars buying local elderly residents, who are a little down at heal, dinners. Something you rarely see.

It is a one of the most unique pubs in London. A venue that defines London - gives London its charm.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing in relation to the review of the Cow's premises licence in Notting Hill W2.

[REDACTED]
My business background has primarily been in the City but I have been involved in entertainment and hospitality as a side business.

I have been a local at the Cow since it was opened.
Notting Hill as my adopted home has always held a special place in my heart.
I have watched its transformation over the past few decades with a front row seat.
I regularly put on music and charity events and as a result have been intimately connected with the many diverse and socio-economic communities in the area.
It is well known there has been a grand gentrification of the area which has its ups and downsides.
Often there is a grave danger to the communities with gentrification with the destruction of culture.

The Cow is much more than just a pub/restaurant.
It is a major centre of a community.
Whenever I speak to people about my adopted home of Notting Hill the Cow is always at the forefront of that conversation.
As a permanent resident of London who grew up in the US, the Notting Hill community, with the Cow as a major social hub, has given me a sense of a home from home as all my family live abroad.
I regularly tell visitors not familiar with Notting Hill that the Cow is the best pub I've ever been to in the entire country.
The main reason as I often explain is, unlike most pubs, it is a place where everyone talks to everyone.
It is an eccentric mix of cultures, ages, classes and characters which I find unrivalled.
It is a place where a woman can go on their own for a drink (many female friends of mine often relate this) and not worry about being harassed as the regulars and staff create a safe, friendly atmosphere that is unrivalled imo.

I imagine that the majority of the concerns for this review arose solely to the environment created by Covid.
As there was a lack of social outlets last summer the Notting Hill area became a magnet for people looking for an outlet to connect socially.
It is well known the unusual scenes during last summer where abnormally hundreds of youths poured into the streets which was a concern for many residents I know and for the police as I had witnessed impromptu street gatherings that imo were a funneling of people towards any semblance of a social gathering.
There were scenes outside the Cow and the Westbourne pub (across the road) were highly unusual for what I had witnessed for over 20 years.
As I know the staff, security etc well at the Cow I knew intimately the measures they enacted and did their best to enforce which they did to the best of their ability but at times were beyond their remit or even responsibility.
Until these unusual happenings due to Covid the Cow never had to have a security presence like it undertook to observe distancing rules.
And I suspect that once Covid is behind us later in the summer this will be merely the unusual anomaly of a strained social situation.
A few days here and there, like the Portobello crowds, were not down to the customers of the Cow but merely young people gathering anywhere they could find a place outside their homes to congregate.
Often they had their own drinks and the Cow was merely collateral damage of this unusual situation we have all been faced with.
I was shocked to learn of this review because the concerns and unwanted events were not typical or the fault of the management themselves.
I could almost understand if it was new management and undesirable anti-social behaviour took residence as happens often with clubs I have witnessed over the years.
But it has been open for over 25 years and this has never been the case.

This review feels like a scapegoat witch hunt that unfairly targets the Cow and lays blame for events which were not of their own doing or even responsibility.

If you are reviewing the Cow then every place in the area would be deserve equal scrutiny and blame. Every supermarket, restaurant and establishment on Portobello would be culpable for the almost hundreds who gathered there during Covid. Notting Hill happens to be a popular area and as I mentioned sadly became a funnel for many who, but for Covid would not venture there. The only situation that should be under review is the handling of the pandemic. The closing of the Cow would be for one, unjust, but worse it would be destroying a valuable and indispenibile serivce,benefit and positive asset to the local community and to London itself. It would be akin to cutting down a beautiful street lined street and filling it with lifeless concrete that serves no-one. This review is an affront to the soul of Notting Hill and the soul of London. Its one of the very reasons a foreign immigrant like myself appreciates and desires to visit the magic of London, Its value is beyond any price that could ever be put on it. It is the definition of grassroots community values.

Sincerely

Dear Westminster Council,

The Cow Pub in West London is a fantastic asset to the community. There have been many occasions, get togethers, birthdays and delicious dinners where The Cow has served as a special place for friends and family to get together.

It is (in my opinion and many of my friends), one of the best pubs in west london, even London altogether.

I have never experienced any violence, disorder or any nuisance generally since going there to drink and eat in the 10 years that I've been visiting.

It remains a special landmark with great patrons, both famous and most ordinary down to earth locals, who seamlessly mix together, harmlessly and always full of cheer. It's a positive place for the community I feel. The food is fantastic and it's regularly recommended to visit for any of my friends who are visiting or moving to London.

It would be a great loss to the community and London as a whole for the Cow to lose its license. A travesty that should not happen.

[REDACTED] In that time I have been a regular patron of The cow. In that time I have never experienced anything that I would consider to shine anything near a bad light on The Cow. With its low key atmosphere I have never experience anything negative or anything associated with Crime and Disorder or safety issues. I love visiting The Cow for these exact reasons. I have always felt safe and relaxed.

In my time in Notting Hill the cow quickly become mine and my brothers favourite place and now means so much as it is a place I will regularly meet with him and spend time with him as and when we can. There is no other place I know of that has as much character and community associated with it.

I have been going to the Cow pub for over 20 years.

It's a London institution, with great food, great atmosphere and great staff.

Not once in 20 years have I seen any sort of trouble or commotion and feel very strongly that it must remain a pub and remain open.

Closing it would be a travesty for London AND most importantly for the local community it serves so well.

The Cow is a great local asset, it's one of the few pubs remaining that can provide a community atmosphere in a friendly environment with great food & drink. I look forward to spending afternoons there catching up with friends and making new friends - never once have I thought there were issues with public disorder, nuisance or issues with safety.

It really is Notting Hill institution providing Great British classics as well as influences from further a field, whilst remaining inclusive of all cultures/nationalities/race. I recommend trying the Pie or Chicken Kiev - they're both fantastic.

I look forward to returning when covid allows. Please do not close The Cow.

I wish to petition in regard to the licensing review of The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

The Cow is a cornerstone of cultural life in the Bayswater, Notting Hill, and Ladbroke Grove community and one of the most unique pubs in London. It is rare to find a public house where all customers are welcomed warmly, rub shoulders, and engage in lively conversation no matter what their social status. It is a unique establishment that holds a high reputation amongst public houses and restaurants in London.

As a regular customer over the past 26 years I have never witnessed public disorder, crime, or public nuisance at any time. It is a warm and convivial place to be.

In regard to its cultural service, The Cow celebrates the saints days of all nations in Great Britain, and Burns night is celebrated with poetry and music. Our city and community needs pubs like The Cow to be protected by Westminster council.

The council must not rescind the license of The Cow, its importance to the community can not be overstated.

, so very near The Cow. I wanted to write to express my utter dismay at the the fact that this pub's license is under review. The Cow has been, for as long as I can remember, an institution in this neighborhood. When visiting, the staff have only been professional and friendly. There have never been any disturbances or noise or safety issues. I really feel it is a pillar in our community and even the thought that is might not be there is truly a tragedy.

I have young children now and am not able to dine there or visit as often as i used to, but I like knowing it is there and that some of the traditions of our neighborhood are being upheld. Pre-COVID when it was open, I have often driven past and only seen people coming together to have friendly conversations, a bit of fun and connect - all things we are VERY much hoping to be able to go back to once this terrible pandemic is over. We need places like The Cow for this to happen.

I am happy to discuss this matter if you wish.

I write to you to show support for the beloved Cow Pub in Notting Hill who I read have been issued with a Review of their Premises Licence.

I was shocked and saddened to hear the pub has been issued the review into its license - it seems completely unjust.

I wanted to write to explain what The Cow means to locals and how important it is for the local community. I've been going there for over a decade and it remains an institution - as it has for over 26 years.

Whether it's a swift pint and catch up with a friend, a marvellous chicken kiev catching up with friends or just a summer pit stop - The Cow delivers two incredibly vital things...heart and soul.

In a world where venues up and down the country are being closed to make way for disastrous chains, fast food restaurants or developed into flats for people to buy (and hardly ever live in) The Cow is truly unique.

It's vital venues like these are protected and looked after and I'm quite shocked this infamous venue is under extra strain at a time when we should be supporting small business owners that have faced the most tragic of years thanks to the pandemic.

I feel extremely strongly that The Cow deserves to have this review withdrawn on the grounds of the fact it adds so much the community surrounding it, delivers an epic service and to be frank would change the landscape of an entire area if it were to be closed.

Please think about this case seriously if you can and I urge you to realise the simple fact that a place like The Cow doesn't deserve to be placed under any extra pressure right now or have a licence review. The Cow is a pub that needs to be allowed to thrive off the back of the pandemic and I hope it will be given the space to do that.

Food is amazing and unique, cheap also, which is an important feat these days - this crisis has killed so many local businesses.

The staff have become friends and are helpful and compassionate too, this place is very special and I couldn't bear to think of life without it.

*Never have I experienced any disorder or crime of any sort - just good banter, interesting characters and human nature at its loveliest - and that's it really. The Cow ties together an entire community. This establishment has integrity, which is fundamentally served and upheld by the wonderful people from all walks of life who frequent it. Locations to gather, share, enjoy, laugh and cry together are vanishing in London. The Cow is a rarity in an environment increasingly becoming devoid of character. Perhaps this is why The Cow is treasured by so many.

As a frequent local, I have never experienced any sort of disruptive or disorderly behaviour at The Cow. It is a well run and well respected establishment. The team is adored by the community, and ensures excellent professional standards in all respects.

It is outrageous that The Cow is under-review, particularly given the context of the struggle the hospitality sector has faced in the last year. I hope your review is carefully conducted with consideration for the wide reaching implications of closing an establishment that sits at the heart of our community. The implications for the staff (many of whom have worked there for decades) and the customers if you revoke the license is devastating and deeply saddening.

Dear Licensing Department of Westminster,

I understand The Cow of Westbourne Park Road, London has a License Review with you and I would like to make a few points of reference to be considered.

- 1. I had been a visitor to The Cow in the mid 90's and then even more frequent after moving into the local area in 1999.
- 2. I have always experienced a local, family atmosphere and I never experienced any type of criminal activity inside the premises or outside.
- 3. Patrons are respectful that the local surrounding area is a residential neighbourhood.
- 4. I have walked or driven past The Cow on my way home and have always enjoyed seeing the patrons on the outdoor seating or inside in happy and jovial moods.
- 5. The Cow is part of the character of Notting Hill and the locals have come to treasure it. It not only boasts a tourist patronage but also has many celebrities as customers.
It has been very difficult in the lockdown periods where you can not convene to meet old friends and make new ones in The Cow.
- 6. I am very proud to put my name amongst those who are regulars to The Cow and would love to see the owners, staff and patrons enjoy the safe and family environment that has been built up over the past 26 years.

Please allow The Cow to continue to trade in the Manner it has always done.

Thanking you,

As a local leaseholder of Westminster we were shocked to hear the news about The Cow.

In light of this, we would like to personally write to you to please grant them further licensing to stay open. Why?

It is by far the best pub in London, famously so. Not only is the food unbelievable good, I would go as far as saying they offer the best fish stew in the country, and that's coming from my father, a man who eats out most days and internationally.

It has also given us a place of refuge and community since we were much younger, with kind and loyal staff always offering a kind hand and ear.

Never have we experienced any form of violence or disorder while visiting the premises. We have always felt safe while dining there. It's a really respected establishment which welcomes everything and everyone from all walks of life. It would be so sad and devastating to lose such an iconic family style dining pub in our areas.

Please grant them permission to keep open to help serve the community as best they can and always have done.

In light of your decision to consider closing the Cow (which may I add is an iconic West London pub and real cornerstone of the community) I am writing to express my upset. This is one of the last remaining gems in the area which over the years is increasingly losing its culture to 'luxury flats' and corporate types, who probably vacate to their country pile on the weekends. Now more than ever places like this need our support, and this potential closure would be an absolute tragedy, especially for those who know and love this pub - this is a place of cheer, friendship and happy memories.

Please consider your decision wisely before it's final, and in good faith.

Further to my notice of support on your website I wanted to put into words my 100% support of the Cow Public house and their management team of the business they operate on Westbourne Park Road.

[REDACTED] and have never once seen a crime, public disorder or nuisance in those years, in fact I've seen quite the opposite. The Cow's management team have been a positive influence on the road and surrounding area, always engaged with the residents and their lives on the road. They have a low turn over of staff which means they have a team who have managed the pub responsibly for many many years and understand how to operate a safe, well run business.

The Cow has an outstanding reputation for being a positive influence in Notting Hill life and long may it continue.

To whom it may concern,

It has come to my attention that Westminster council has issued a license review for The Cow Pub and Dining Rooms. I am writing to express my deep concern at the thought that our council, which exists to service and contribute to the betterment of the area, is contemplating the closure of a pillar in the social life of our local community.

At a time where the hospitality sector is increasingly dominated by chains and driven by commercial profit, The Cow stands as one of the few surviving independent establishments committed to its customers above all else. The Cow is a family business, and this familial atmosphere is extended to each and every individual that comes through its doors. I cannot stress enough how precious this quality is, and what a valuable asset it is to the area. It is also what makes The Cow an invaluable contributor to social cohesion throughout the locality; everyone is welcome, creating a genuine sense of kinship between visitors from all walks of life.

Each day at the Cow brings passing visitors, in addition to the unusually large group of regulars testifying to the popularity and value of this establishment. For those in the latter category, The Cow is often the epicentre of sociability; it is where friends, family, work colleagues, romantic encounters and spontaneous meetings all blossom in unity. This is where the appeal of The Cow lies. I have never experienced crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues there. The staff are strict in directing customers to the exit at closing time, instruct people exiting to keep noise to a minimum so as not to disturb surrounding residents and implement a strict no-tolerance policy where any violence, inappropriate conduct or illegal substances are concerned. As a young woman, it is one of the places I feel safest to go, whatever day or time it is.

I hope you will take this in consideration as you review their license. Like all businesses in the hospitality sector this year, The Cow has been under massive financial strain and fought to survive the pandemic. Its customers have waited in anticipation to find one another again there after the interruption of normal human contact and the cessation of social enjoyment. Please do dash the efforts and hopes of the residents of your council.

Thank you for your consideration.

Best wishes,

Reflecting even more on the importance of a public house during the pandemic you realise what important part it has for us all but mainly all the single / lonely people in the local community.

Dear Sir,

I wish to write in support of The Cow at 89 Westbourne Park Road. I have over the years much enjoyed dining there and it has provided a safe, comfortable experience for me and my friends. As an older Westminster resident I have always found it not only a great dining experience but also a pleasant place for us to meet. It is a convenient neighbourhood gastropub where I can meet a girlfriend for supper and both can get home easily and indeed safely.

I recognise that any restaurant or pub in a residential area will give rise to some noise but without such facilities, those who wish to go out for a drink and a meal will have to travel much further afield. The presence of such establishments adds to local community and a sense of neighbourhood more than it detracts.

yours faithfully

I think the above premises should not lose their licence or see it further restricted. London is losing too many pubs. They are a vital part of local communities and provide refreshment and opportunities for people to socialise. They have been an element of English society for centuries. The management at The Cow provide excellent food, drink and hospitality. Pubs also provide jobs and pay significant amounts of tax, which helps fund public services like the NHS.

Please do not shut The Cow or prevent it from trading.

I live fairly nearby and it is a valuable amenity: closing it would detract from the choice and facilities in the area.

The Cow has been a huge asset to the neighbourhood for many many years. I work locally and go there at least once a week. The atmosphere, staff, drinks and food are all so unique and special to London as a whole - people travel all over to it so it brings a lot to the area. It creates a real neighbourhood feel due to its authenticity which you rarely get with pubs and restaurants in London anymore - we need to be saving places like this. London is becoming filled with cookie cutter, gentrified pubs and it needs this quality and genuine character to keep not only the area but London interesting and real. The quality is fantastic, it's a comforting atmosphere and we need places like this to go to for people's wellbeing, happiness and human connection and never have I ever experienced any disorder, crime or nuisance there. It's a relaxed and comfortable place to be.

I truly believe from the bottom of my heart this would create a negative effect not only for the local area but for

Westminster as a whole as people will travel elsewhere to gain what they get from there - it's not any old pub, its genuine and needs to last for as long as it can.

I urge you to please keep them open - for the sake for locals and beyond.

Dear Sir/Madame,

I am writing with reference to the recently announced review on the premises license for The Cow. I have been drinking in this delightful establishment for at least 8 years now and more regularly in the last 5 years since moving to ████████████████████. In this time I have not once experienced any crime or disturbance associated with the venue or witnessed any public nuisance. All I ever see is happy patrons enjoying the fine Guinness they serve alongside some fantastic sea food.

One thing that I will never understand and perhaps you could enlighten me to is the fascination with Westminster Council to pander to local residents with respect to pubs and bars. I have worked in the vicinity of Shepherds Market for the last 10 years and the residents have single handedly destroyed my local pub (The Market Tavern) with their incessant complaints. These establishment have been around for years, way before these residents moved in and if you don't want to hear the noises from people socialising with their friends then do not move next to a drinking establishment it really is that simple.

Given what the world has been through over the last year and the sacrifices the hospitality industry has been forced to endure I cannot for the life of me understand why this review is necessary. Once we are finally allowed to enjoy our personal freedoms my wife and I very much look forward to visiting The Cow and hopefully you will see sense and allow the proprietors to carry out the valuable service they provide to the local community.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir/madam,

I am writing to you to express my utter disbelief at hearing that The Cow's license may be in jeopardy ████████████████████
████████████████████ The Cow is really one of only two drinking Establishments in London I think worthy of drinking in. Why its license would be in question is beyond me as it's such an amazing little local pub renowned well beyond the boundaries of London. The food and the Guinness is amazing and the bar staff are so friendly and accommodating. Its been my home from home now for years now and to not have it would be a disaster to me and many many local people !!!... it's a place i feel more than comfortable to walk in on my own as a woman and chat to anyone, its safe, friendly and welcoming to everyone

Theres always a vibrant mixture of local folk mixing with people from just about anywhere in the country/world that have been told they cannot miss a visit to The Cow if in London.

I know friends that have moved areas in London just so The Cow is their local ! As well as the excellent food and beverages the live music they put on for special Occasions is second to none. They celebrate Burns Night, St Patricks day, St Davids and St Georges Day all with exactly the same amazing enthusiasm showing appropriate live music and food, for each night, its really unbeatable fin there for atmosphere on every one ! As well as this their carnival party is the only one i will bother going to as its such a fun well run night.

Since all my time in The Cow i have never seen any fights or aggravation, its really not that sort of pub. West London has had so many of its better bars taken away now its a dreadful state of affairs. No live music exists, and mostly now just dull posh members bars remain only to be frequented by a certain person with a certain amount of cash !

Dear Westminster City Council,

I believe British photographer, [REDACTED], has so eloquently said everything I have to say about the wonderful and unique West London pub - The Cow.

"The Cow in Westbourne Park, west London, is my favourite pub in all of the world. A place that truly represents the meaning and value of the words 'Public House'. You're as likely to find yourself partaking in conversation with a pop star as much as someone who sells melons on Portobello Market. Throw in to the mix the long serving bar staff and the house staples; Guinness, decent wine, fish stew, oysters, pint of prawns and tagliolini and you have everything you'll ever need. But unnerving news arrives with the announcement by Westminster Council that the pub's license is under review. For what good reason I have no idea. In over 20 years of frequenting The Cow I have never seen disorder, disturbance or troubling behaviour of any kind. It is a civilised house for civilised people and to deny it its right to exist is the removal of one more brick from the foundations of the greatest city in the world."

I can't imagine my beloved borough without this fine establishment, please, please do not rob us of guaranteed good times, delicious food, and excellent Guinness.

Many thanks,

To whom it may concern,

chances are that you have at least once in your life enjoyed yourself inside the Cow, so it is no coincidence that you agree with me when I say that this is the only pub, in London, with an unparalleled reputation for being friendly, filled with tossers, wannabes and locals that have made the Cow their pub 'au choix'. — [REDACTED]

May I draw to your attention the date of establishment, 26 years in operation in April 2021, as this without a shadow of a doubt means that most current locals, and your parents, have been and enjoyed the vibrancy of the pub. Closing it down serves nobody but Saddist Khan and his destructive passion of the hospitality industry.

Here are some examples of how the local community enjoys its presence, and as you can see, other services like the Metropolitan Police.

To whom it may concern

As a frequent visitor to London one of my most special and favourite destinations is The Cow Saloon Bar and Dining Rooms.

The Cow has an inviting, unpretentious ambience that epitomises the warmth and character that, as a foreigner, I have come to expect as a truly London welcome embrace back home from home after a lengthy absence.

Never in my visits over many years have I experienced any disorderly or criminal issues, only a sense of community, friendship and a shining example of what one of Londons finest pubs can offer, a pub that contributes to what makes London great.

Besides, the dining room serves the best Fish Stew that I have ever encountered in my many travels around the world.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to support The Cow Pub and its publican Tom Conran in their bid to renew their licence from Westminster City Council.

I have had the great pleasure of visiting The Cow since its opening in c.1995. [REDACTED] and was a regular customer throughout those years. I still enjoy visiting the pub when I am in the area.

In the many years that I have been a customer of The Cow I have always felt extremely secure in the pub. The staff, some of whom have been with the pub since the beginning, are extremely professional and make sure they preside over a safe and happy environment. Trouble-makers and anti-social elements are not tolerated and have always been dealt with swiftly and with great discretion. I have never witnessed any criminal acts in the pub, including any violent ones.

The Cow serves wonderful food and well-kept beer, and is a vital social hub for many people within the neighbourhood and beyond. To deprive The Cow of its licence would be to deprive the area of one of its greatest assets.

Therefore, please add me to long list of people writing in to support the renewal of the pub's licence.

Please do not hesitate to contact me by email or telephone if you require.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I'm writing to you all to express my concern and push my support with regards to The Cow remaining open.

Why is The Cow an asset?

In a City where by it is rare for staple places of drink and cuisine - are dwindling - the unique and wonderful asset and persona that The cow has always had in abundance, is an accepting and welcoming policy for all.

Why remove or not support a local establishment that over its tenure has only sought to bring people together within the community, mixing all classes of the W2 microcosm that it sits in

What does The Cow mean to me?

Of course The Cow has amazing memories for me. Introductions to new people and gathering of old friends. It brings a lovely unusual mix of people within the area and also further afield

For all the years that I have enjoyed leisure time at The Cow -spanning a decade - I have never experienced any crime or disorder.

Dear Sir / Madam ,

I would just like to put a word in to support The Cow pub . It has been my local Pub for 26 years , it excels as one of the very best Pubs in London for so many reasons firstly the variety of the customers is unique .... an incredible tapestry of amazing people from all walks of life .... intellectuals , actors , musicians, artists, sportsmen, surgeons, doctors ,chefs I could go on indefinitely....

Truly a wonderful melange of interesting and friendly , kind people.... civilised and very sociable .... as well of course a core of local regulars who I know all of for many many years ..... like a family.... trustworthy and fun people with a mutual spirit to eat and drink heartily and merrily . And literally no better place in London to randomly meet good folk with a story to tell ..... never a dull moment!

Also The Cow is a genuinely gastronomic Pub .. Tom Conran it's owner is a true gourmand and takes pride in a fantastic menu of delectable Anglo/ French cuisine that people travel far and wide to enjoy.... one of the best Oyster and Guinness spots in London Town and famous for it !

Ultimately it's a home away from home to many people .... it's ambiance is very cozy and friendly and it marks all the important days in the year like St George's , St Patrick's, St David's Days .... as well as all the great British and Global sporting events from Six nations Rugby to the World Cup and so on ....

Suffice as to say a great many people would literally be devastated should it's LISCENCE be revoked and it close ....

Also I have literally never witnessed any crime situations or unsavoury behaviour ever .... and I'm there a lot .... the worst you could say is utter enthusiasm and joy when there are certain days occur that everyone celebrates a sporting event or National Saints Day ....

I love this Pub , all the staff , especially Petro the main manager, who is brilliantly skilled at dealing with all customers....

And the Owner Tom Conran who is an old friend dedicated and proud overseer of all that goes on .... himself part of a legacy and great contribution to London generally....

please take this all into consideration when reviewing the situation.....

I trust that such a shining light in the Westminster community will not be extinguished!

It is distressing and perplexing that the council have issued a review of the licence on the grounds of public disorder. I have been a customer there for over 20 years, probably longer, and never experienced any such behaviour or felt any personal sense of threat.

By contrast, The Cow has been, and I hope will continue to be, a haven of good food, congenial company and represents an increasingly rare, working example of traditional hospitality and community.

I would ask the council to get behind a success story in the borough, and support The Cow during what have been crippling times for the hospitality industry as a whole.

To the licensor

I have been a regular at The Cow since it opened, for lunch or drinks in the evening. I can confirm that I have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the pub.

I have recently discovered to my horror that Westminster City Council have issued a Review of The Cow's Premises Licence. This seems to be extraordinary since it is not only a much loved institution that has served locals royally but is also world renowned as a modern version of the English pub, one of the original 'gastropubs' from before the word was devalued. It combines the qualities of a community pub with the exacting standards of a high class restaurant.

The only thing the Cow lacks is sunshine but that has a silver lining. Almost everyone who goes there is local. It's an allure that outweighs the sunny terrace over the road. It is the only place in the neighbourhood where you can drop in alone, safe in the knowledge that you'll bump into friend, neighbour or family member. This creates a delightful social cohesion and certainly furthers the sense of community. I know of a number of lonely elders who must be desperately missing their daily fix of social interaction at The Cow.

That alone would make it a community asset. It is not uncommon to see three generations of the same family dining together. It's the sort of place a well known footballer might be seen chatting to the staff all afternoon. Everyone is made welcome.

I would strongly urge you to extend the licence at The Cow. [REDACTED] and cycle to the pub.

Hello,

I am writing in regards to the review of The Cow's premise licence and why I believe that it is important that this wonderful pub remains open. The Cow has long been a place we go as a family to celebrate special occasions, in the December just gone I had the most perfect Sunday lunch there with my brother and dad on my 30th birthday, there is nowhere I would have rather eaten on that day. It is also somewhere we go together for a drink, for a quick catch up or because we have a particular craving for their pints of prawns and Guinness. It is a pub I have brought many of my friends too and it holds countless memories and I have been so looking forward to the many more that will be created once we are able to get back there. It is also a place I recommend anyone visiting London to go to for a quintessential British pub experience that actually serves good drinks, good food and brilliant atmosphere.

There are so few places left in London like The Cow and it is likely there will be even less when we find our way out of this pandemic and if they had to close their doors it would be a catastrophic loss to the community and to the London pub and gastro industry. The Cow is a proper local pub, it is almost impossible to go there and not run into someone you know or to leave without making a new friend. It is a place you can go to drink on your own and find company or with a group of your closest friends and enjoy your intimacy. At a time when we need to be protecting places like The Cow it seems mad to even be considering revoking its licence. I want to confirm that in my many visits there over the years I have never experienced any crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues. It is a safe and welcoming place, and it is absolutely essential it remains open.

Dear Westminster Council,

I am writing on behalf of The Cow as a loyal patron and keen admirer of many years. Having grown up a stones throw away, The Cow has long been a fixture in my life, and a wholly positive one at that. I can say with certainty that it stands above all pubs in the area, not simply for the quality of food and service but for the atmosphere of friendship and community that it engenders. The Cow is a pub of Old London, a truly public house where all ages and creeds can be together with respect and libation. It has long served as a solace for locals, and a place of great safety. I have taken refuge in The Cow when I did not feel safe elsewhere, and in my many years of patronage I have never experienced anything but respect, kindness and lawfulness from all who were there. The Cow is the centre of our community and has always taken that role seriously, so it fights to ensure that there is always order and goodness amongst its patrons. It is not a place for crime, nuisance or disorder but rather one for friendship, conversation and exceptional food. To lose this beating heart would be a devastating blow to the values that London has always stood for.

Yours, with hope,

To whom it may concern

Dear sir/madam please find hereafter my professional representation of the cow public house. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] The venue was known to myself and I was aware that it was a busy and vibrant local community hub providing a safe, friendly and wholesome environment for its patrons to enjoy the company of other locals whilst being served good food and good drink. I myself have been involved in the security sector for 19 years now working at places and marquees alike, dealing with multimillionaire car and art collectors through to post graduate students putting on their first show.

It really pains me to have heard that the cow's licence is up for review! I am shocked! I understand the venue is not perfect but, in my experience, dealing with local authorities they are normally much more interested in opening dialogue with a venue so that its issues can be rectified rather than depriving the community of what is clearly a very well-loved establishment.

I have been forwarded some images taken by some of your licencing officers. I am not able to comment fully as I believe I do not have all the associated images, but I will say that some of these images clearly show the before and after of when my team have arrived onsite and started clearing the overpopulated public footpath with no support from the authorities, I mention the support aspect as I believe its pertinent. Most of your complaints seem to be about the goings on over carnival weekend and associated days? This would have been the week before, the week during and the week after carnival. Portobello road? Police numbers? Approximately 40 officers!... Westbourne park road, opposite a well-known gang affiliated estate in an area known to have house parties over these weeks, Police numbers? Exactly 0. How is this providing support.

There were several occasions over these weeks when my security team tried for several hours to get support from local officers to assist clearing the outside area of the venue which is the only area (a public footpath) we were having difficulties controlling. I myself tried to contact the police for assistance with no avail on at least 2 occasions, This became more and more of a problem as the weeks went by as people became aware that our venue was being neglected by the authorities with a complete lack of any kind of police presence and the crowds grew and grew, the management and my team had to make the decision to close the venue on several occasions as it was clear to all involved it was the only way to reduce the numbers of people outside without the appropriate support from the police and without causing a breach of the peace.

As far as drinking after hours go I can only say that this does not take place while my staff are on site, they generally finish at 23:30, and are given a single drink which is provided by the venue at no cost to my staff and is prepared before the final bell. I would also like to add that I myself have witnessed Mr T Conran giving drinks away for free to his patrons while the venue is in an open period on numerous occasions, it is known by all Toms staff that he is to be kept away from "behind" the bar so he doesn't give away to many drinks. With this in mind, I am struggling to believe that one of your officers witnessed Tom charging for drinks while the venue was supposed to be closed and in fact believe the officer to be mistaken. Thomas Conran does not "cash handle" I feel very strongly that with the pandemic in play we all have had a lot to learn very quickly and not all lessons are easily learned. As the director of the company that provides the cows security, I would welcome any dialog that would help me improve my services.

The Cow Sallon Bar and Dining Rooms ,
89 Westbourne Park Road W2 5QH

To whom it may concern,

To describe the Cow as the hub of the community is selling it really most short. A hostelry that. not only proffers excellent food, wine , beer and spirits , it is also a massively important meeting place for the area's community most of whom have lived in the neighbourhood for 20 years or more. Perhaps the only true local in the area it is not, like many of the pubs nearby on Portobello, festooned with tourists and day trippers, it is a proper pub. Indeed, it is OUR pub. Our local . It is the only place where I, as a 60 something divorcee, can visit on a weekday afternoon and always find someone to talk to .It is the only place in the area that entertains a clientele that, aged 21 to 80 is totally multi-racial and absolutely classless - none of whom feel particularly young or old. We just feel comfortable .We simply feel at home.

I have been a regular customer since it opened in 1995 and would certainly say that, when I bought my flat, in 22 years ago, the fact that the Cow was nearby certainly influenced my decision to buy. This is because it is not a normal pub. People go there to eat and drink and talk. It is not a place where one sees folk falling over drunk or fighting. It is adult and sophisticated without being conscious of either. To add, the staff have been there for decades as have many patrons but, like a family pub in the middle of a village, the clientele is constantly reinvigorated by the adult offspring of the older regulars.

In truth, without the Cow many, me included, would be lost. We have seen ,in the last year over Covid, the mental devastation that enforced isolation can do to the vulnerable. One in every three UK women and one every five men in the UK admit to being depressed while suicide attempts have doubled in the last year in the London area.

We are social animals and need to meet our old friends and encounter new to survive and, as such, pubs like The Cow play a massively important role in the psychological well-being of their neighbourhoods.

Finally, this simple pub is integral to the well-being of a particular , albeit rather arty, West London resident for who there is no alternative. I think the theme song for the hit comedy series Cheers might have been written about the Cow :

"Sometimes you want to go, Where everybody knows your name,, And they're always glad you came, You want to be where you can see ,Our troubles are all the same ,You want to be where everybody knows your name"

The Cow is a great London institution that makes many ,many people happy. One can't ask more than that.

First of all, I am a regular at The Cow and have been since 2002 when I moved to Ladbrooke Grove. I have never seen any criminal activity there or anything untoward that has given me cause for concern.

In fact, even though I now live in Wiltshire, since a couple of years, I make a point of always going to the Cow whenever I'm in London (pre-covid), it makes me feel grounded and like I still belong. Dear Westminster City Council,

Re: 21/00981/LIREVP

I understand that there is a threat to the license of The Cow pub (Westbourne Park Road), and I would like to raise my concern in this matter.

This is an establishment I have frequented since it's development by Tom Conran over 25 years ago, it is a place I regularly visit because of the warmth and familiarity. Great Ambience, great food and great memories of my life. I hold this pub as a cornerstone to my time in London and in Westminster. I have lived permanently in West London since 1991 and have been resident in [REDACTED] for the last 13 years, The Cow is the key pub that I visit and luckily it very near to me. There are a dwindling number of real pubs left in walking distance and none that I think can compete with the support the Cow gives consistently to myself.

I have held important occasions here, engagement, birthdays, leaving jobs, all my celebrations and I can't think of this important establishment changing without a very heavy heart. Little remains of the London I first came to love and few of the places so this would truly be a great loss to me personally and I know the whole community many of which I meet at The Cow.

I would like to know how we can help to prevent the license being taken away and preserve the integrity of the Cow, it is important for me to do all I can in this matter.

Greetings,

I hope this email finds you in good health.

I write to the Westminster Council today to give my support for the continued operation of The Cow.

The Cow is a 'real' establishment with real people, not just another site for a huge chain of low-effort, high-volume pubs, but an authentic and histories place to enjoy good drink and excellent food served by people who care about the place.

Several times I have drank and dined with my parents at The Cow, celebrating special occasions or just wanting to enjoy the friendly atmosphere, and I fondly remember our visits.

Not once have I experienced any sort of crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety concerns in my several visits. The Cow is welcoming and full of character and I would consider it a great loss to the area of The Cow were to be unnecessarily closed in the name of public order.

Over the past year of hard times and lockdown, I have hoped that The Cow will be there when life is more normal and I look forward to visiting again.

Best wishes,

I have been going to The Cow since I moved to London over ten years ago. I was originally introduced by my Australian friends who lived nearby.

The Cow continues to be one of the best representations of what makes West London so unique. It is quirky and fun and full of people of all ages and backgrounds. Society tends to overuse the word "diversity" these days. Diversity is often something that has to be forced upon institutions and cultures. . However at The Cow, it just comes authentically. That is something Notting Hill should be proud of.

I am always made to feel welcome when I visit The Cow - whether by the fabulous bar staff or the other patrons. This is an important concept as not everyone has a pack of friends to go out with. As much as Notting Hill has changed over the years, The Cow remains one of the best the area has to offer - a true "local" that also welcomes visitors.

Please RENEW the license of The Cow!!!!

Best Regards,

The cow is a pillar of the community.

I have never known of it causing any harm or worry to the area. it is a place of joy, cheer, outstanding food and positive vibes.

I have never felt vulnerable or unsafe at the cow- i have some of my happiest memories there.

I am writing in connection with the current review of the license of The Cow in Westbourne Park, London.

I understand a question has been raised about the licensees' ability to keep the place in order and avoid public disturbance. I all my visits over the years I have been struck by the very civilised atmosphere within. At no time have I ever witnessed disorder or felt in any peril. Though not much of a drinker, I have spent many of my happiest hours in pubs; the Cow is, in my opinion, the best in West London.

We all dream of the return to normal life. For many of us that includes the reopening of the pub, one of our few noteworthy contributions to world culture. In my case, The Cow is the establishment I have in mind.

WCC went up in all our estimations when it demanded the reinstatement, brick-by-brick, of the illegally demolished Carlton Tavern. Any change to circumstances at the Cow would be a destruction of a much greater order.

I hope I join other voices in requesting that you leave this wonderful place as it is. Residents who demand it be changed will soon regret the decay of the something wonderful.

Sincerely

To Whom It May Concern,

I write in regard to the above reference number and recent news that the license of the Cow Dining Rooms are under review.

Though I am quite certain you will have received a large volume of support for the Cow since this review was announced, I should like to add my voice to that support. The Cow is not only a pub, it is an institution in the landscape that is Notting Hill and beyond - It was always a welcome sight on the advert for London that would play on the Heathrow Express! Having lived in the area for close to twenty years, the Cow has become somewhat of a landmark and always a welcome, safe place, where the community spirit can come together and thrive.

With two children at the local prep school I can also tell you, news of this review spread like wildfire. My conclusion to people's attitudes in the area is of overwhelming support for the Cow and even from those who rarely have the chance to go. Should the unimaginable happen, I am quite certain there would be outrage followed by outcry! Given the year our hospitality sector has had and how this pandemic has highlighted the importance of communal institutions, it is now, more than ever, we need places we can come together.

In nearly twenty years I have never seen or heard of any trouble at the Cow and have found the patrons to be a largely jovial bunch, whether local residents or passing Hollywood film stars, here everyone can mingle together, sharing their own stories, experiences and laughter, so that the area we live in, can be a richer place for everyone.

Long live the Cow,

The Cow Pub:

I have heard the news that the Cow is under threat from the council by not having its licence replaced. I would regard that as an outrage!

This superb establishment has been part of my life for over 20 years.

It is a huge asset to the local community in so many ways - as social meeting place - I myself have had business meetings there as well.

The food is fantastic and the staff always friendly and of course also part of the local community.

After the nightmare of Covid we are all going to need special places like the Cow to meet and rebuild our lives. I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues - The Cow is fabulous and MUST remain open for business!

Hello,

I am writing today as I have just seen The Cow pubs' license is under review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I work at Great Western Studios round the corner from The Cow, meaning I have spent many many hours at this pub, whether it's having an incredible lunch with my work colleagues, or enjoying a pint after work in the evening. In all the hours I've spent at this pub I have never witnessed public disorder or any crime.

What I have witnessed is an incredible community that love this pub and choose to spend their hours there. The Cow is also one of the best gastropubs in London, and I am very much looking forward to getting back in there once this lockdown is over!

Please do not take this away from all the people who enjoy The Cow.

Thank you,

Dear Sirs,

I am writing with regard to the review of The Cow's premise licences. Please find the pertinent points below. George Orwell wrote 'The Moon Under Water' in 1946 - it was his final contribution to The Evening Standard. At the end of the war, there was nowhere he'd rather be than his ideal public house.

But he was not alone in his thoughts. Many people eulogise about their local, a "special" place with a good atmosphere, where you meet people from different walks of life, expand your horizons, enjoy good food and drink good beer. And there is a reason for this: places with meaning are special, to be cherished and preserved. Sadly, in a world of instant gratification they are becoming a rare beast.

Rare, but not extinct - in my 30 years on this planet, never have I come across an establishment that gives such joy and meaning to its local community. For although the Guinness and chicken kiev are exceptional, it is the culture and atmosphere that gives The Cow its identity - truly, it is a melting pot of interesting people, with an atmosphere that warms the heart and enriches the soul, generating vibes for one and for all. It is not a cliché to say that it is - and Petro, Tom et. al are - very much the beating heart of the local community.

Having lived in Maida Vale for the past two years, I can honestly say that seeing The Cow back to its pre-pandemic self - rich with diversity, smiles, music, happiness and love - is an image that has got me through many dark nights. If there's a better chicken kiev or Guinness in London I'm yet to find it, and I know my desire to enjoy them once again, with good cheer and local people, and in support of a local business that has been through so much recently, is but one of many.

While I'm not entirely sure of the grounds on which the charge is levelled, I can confirm that I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues while on the premises. Like all hospitality venues, The Cow has had t

I am late to the game here I think but as soon as I learned the Cow's licence was under review I felt I had to say something.

I have lived in Notting Hill for nearly 20 years. The Cow is my favourite pub and a place I have consistently looked forward to visiting over the years. Whenever I have friends from out of town, I always recommend it. It invariably receives glowing reviews.

I have probably been to the Cow 50-100 times in my life. Not one bad experience. (Have had plenty in other pubs in Notting hill). I travel ALL over the world and the Cow is one of the few truly world class establishments I know in London. Great food, low key, lovely staff, an amazing duke box, cool vibe etc etc.

Now for lockdown ...

[REDACTED], and have been in london throughout COVID. I walk past often.

I have to say, I have been completely bemused as to what happened post the first lockdown. People I'd never seen before in Notting hill spilling out on the street. (Was it social media attracting that crowd to the pub?) They certainly weren't your typical Cow clientele! And I can completely see why people would take issue with the numbers of people etc. I won't defend this, but whenever I walked past it was genial and well meaning. (Though not my scene).

I very much hope/expect 'normal service' to be resumed at the Cow post lockdown. There will inevitably be merriment etc immediately post lockdown (but that will be the same the country over) and we expect our local pubs to behave responsibly and strike the right balance - which the Cow and our other pubs will I'm sure.

It will be such a shame if the Cow goes. For what it's worth I ask that you both do everything to find a solution. (Am sure you are). It's an amazing place. An institution. The best.

It is one of the few remaining pubs in London that has not sold its soul to become 'all about the money'. Indeed, this is the key to its loyal following. I know so many that travel from all parts of London to enjoy a good pint and some excellent food.*

I have never witnessed any sort of misdemeanour on (or outside) the premises. I would be heartbroken if The Cow were to change in any way. Indeed, establishments like this should be cherished as part of London's rich culture, which has for years been under attack from large chains - which no one would miss if they were gone tomorrow.

I'm writing with reference to The Cow and the question of whether its license should be renewed. I think that you should have no doubt that it should. The Cow is a landmark in our neighbourhood, I live very close by, and needs to be preserved as an institution. Places like The Cow, whether you frequent or not, make London the rich and diverse place that one wants to live in. Independent pubs are so rare these days. Ones that offer oysters or a place to have a divorce party or a wake, even rarer. What would New Years Eve be like if like me, you usually are at home but for a little outing to The Cow for one final drink before crawling into bed? Please don't take the license away. We would lose something more than just a pub, a destination and a hip joint. What that is I can't actually express in words. It's a feeling of a place, a neighbourhood, an aspiration of a community.

Dear Westminster licensing department,

I'm writing you today to express my deepest dissatisfaction, anger, and fear regarding your decision to review The Cow's premises license.

Having lived in London for the past 11 years, moving here in 2010 from Stockholm, Sweden, I can safely say that my introduction to this city wouldn't have been as great if it wasn't for The Cow. It is a place where people from all walks of life can get together and enjoy each other's company, great food, and a safe atmosphere that is welcoming in this large city.

Not only has The Cow brought me and my family a great deal of joy, but it is also an institution to which I bring any visitor from abroad so that they too can have the opportunity of visiting what is arguably one of the greatest establishments in London.

To suspend The Cow's operating license wouldn't be a shame, it would be outright criminal to rob the neighbourhood, the city, and residents of the world of this one-of-a-kind home away from home.

I urge you to dismiss your review and to allow The Cow to continue to bring joy, happiness, and a sense of belonging to our neighbourhood and members of the world.

Sincerely,

I understand that The Cow's license is now under review. This local pub is such a landmark in our local community and neighbourhood. It has been there for 26 years which is slightly longer than we have lived within a 5 minute walk from the pub, but we visited it regularly when living in Kensington & Chelsea borough too. I have so many fond memories of great evenings there. The restaurant is always a treat with delicious food and welcoming staff, but it's the pub and casual diner that I am so fond of. Always a great atmosphere and such an eclectic crowd of people, young and old. It has real atmosphere, it is unique and such an asset to the neighbourhood

The summer months attract a friendly crowd to gather with the doors open to the street and the atmosphere is great. There has never been a bad time or incident there. It's a small, friendly local pub and I would be greatly saddened to think there would ever be the possibility of The Cow having to close. All neighbourhoods in London have their local pub and this is part of our London culture. The Cow is our local pub and it is loved by it's patrons.

Please consider the loss to us if the pub was to close. I can't imagine not having it there. It is one of the few pubs I would meet my family in to have a good chat and a catch up, before enjoying their delicious fish dish of the day.

To Westminster City Council,

I have been a customer of The Cow Saloon Bar and Dining Rooms since it was first opened over twenty years ago.

It is an asset to the local community and the borough itself. It is an independent stand alone eatery that celebrates quality produce and good cooking and drinks to match.

To me it is an asset as it is a place where all stratas of the community are welcomed and valued.

It is a public house that performs its function admirably. A place where the local community can enjoy the company and conversation of others in a safe and warm environment, take on the of good cooking

It regularly celebrates local events.

I don't live locally but its core values of great customer service and excellence make it worth the journey.

I am a restaurateur and publican with forty years experience in the industry. I have been at The Cow at its busiest times and whilst it may be full of customers it is jolly not raucous and I have never experienced or felt concerned for my own or the public's safety. I have never been the victim of crime or witnessed any public disorder or nuisance. The management of The Cow are diligent at closing time in moving us customers out and away from the neighbourhood and where necessary advising us to be mindful that we are in a residential neighbourhood. There is nowhere to the congregate outside The Cow so people move on naturally. Conversely there are other pubs and bars nearby with a greater outdoor square footage where one can witness this as a problem. The Westbourne pub on the opposing corner is such a pub and it would be easy to attribute their greater customer numbers who are harder to disperse as emanating for The Cow and it would be incorrect to attribute noise and nuisance emanating form The Westbourne to The Cow.

There has been a pub at 89 Westbourne Park Road for 170 years now. It is a historic establishment and needs to be protected and secured for the future as a historic public house by Westminster City Council so it can continue to be an integral part of the local area.

Your review of the pubs licence must result in its confirmation and its licensed status be secured. Please do not allow its future to be threatened or to contribute to removing a community asset from the local community. Neighbourhoods need these places and should not be allowed to convert into retail shops or residential housing when the building is designed and designated for a different function.

To Whom It May Concern,

It is with enormous shock and sadness that such a social and cultural institution as The Cow in Westbourne Grove can possibly be up for a consideration of its license. This establishment is quite literally the beating heart of West London's creative and bohemian culture and without it, so goes one of the landmarks of the area. It has not only survived generations and decades, but it has helped to form them. It has always been a melting pot of fascinating people, eating fantastic food, served by wonderfully warm people. It's the antithesis of the sanitized corporate environments of chain restaurants or bars and West London desperately needs to protect this venue.

If there are issues around disorder and genuine concerns of safety, let's deal with those first as a community that want to support this venue.

Dear Licensing Team,

I am shocked and saddened to hear that the Cow's Premise License is under review.

As a personal license holder, I am fully aware of all the rules and regulations around having a premise license and from what I have seen, the Cow has always had the highest standards in how a public house should be run. I have visited this great establishment many times and never have I seen or been part of any failing of the four licensing objectives. I have never even heard of any complainants through the grapevine either which is why I am so shocked.

The Cow is a valuable asset to the local community as it has great variety in what most competitors offer. Not only does the Cow have incredible michelin-star esque food, but the choice of beverage behind the bar is second to none; a particular highlight has to be the Guinness - perhaps the best within the M25. The public house has a fantastic, cosy, safe 'vibe' unlike many soulless pubs in Westminster.

It would be a complete travesty should this great public house be closed, particularly with what's happened over the past 12 months for this industry and I hope you continue to let the Cow live on in their own words: "eat heartily and give the house a good name."

Kind regards,

To Whom it may Concern,

I am writing in relation to the Westminster Council Review of Premises License for The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH.

I am shocked and saddened to see that the license is under review on the grounds of public nuisance - as a member of the brewing industry with vast knowledge of the rich variety of licenced premises around the UK I can attest that this is far from the role it serves the public. Quite simply The Cow is one of the finest premises in terms of operation, offering and importance not just in the borough, but I would argue in the whole City of London and indeed the country.

I have been a proud patron of The Cow for over 15 years and it's a special unique place. Not many establishments still have the same people operating the premises for that amount of time and is always a sure sign of a quality operation when staff stay on for that long. The Cow plays a vital role in providing a hub for the community, it's a welcoming place with a diverse and enriching clientele who are all grateful to be there for the fantastic food and beverage offering alongside the amazing hospitality. It's a rare place where everyone is welcome, diversity is celebrated and conversations flow. The very essence of what a licensed premises offers a community. I always make a point of taking friends or colleagues visiting London from other countries there to experience it. They all wish they had somewhere like it to visit when they go home.

In the midst of such a testing time for the community, The Cow have been at the forefront of letting their patrons know they will do what they can to support and most recently been actively fundraising for the Mental Health Foundation. They understand the toll that this pandemic has had on people's mental health and are trying to be a support to make things better.

That is what The Cow is all about, a place that brings people together, all kinds of people regardless of race, gender, belief or background. It is the epitome of the positive force that an exceptional licensed premises can bring to the community - it makes the World a better place. Its laughable to think this could be considered a nuisance and anyone suggesting this should take a long hard look at why they live in Westminster and why they live in one of the Worlds greatest cities. London is a great city because of places like the Cow and if the people that run London do not realise that then it is going to lose a lot of its tax paying residents even quicker than they already are when we come out of the pandemic.

Please do the right thing and uphold the premises licence for The Cow and let them keep making the world a better place.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to dissuade you from your review of The Cow's premise license.

The Cow is an iconic London pub which is a huge asset to the community. It is full of charm and is an amazing establishment that has stood the test of time. It would be devastating to see it go.

As we come out of the pandemic it's more important than ever for people to have places they love where they can go to meet friends etc.

I have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting the cow. Quite the opposite. It is always full of a warm, friendly local crowd.

I really hope this will dissuade you from reviewing their license.

Best Wishes,

Dear Sir or Madam,

I have been alerted to the news that The Cow, an extraordinary pub and part of the heart of the Notting Hill community, is having its licence reviewed. I wanted to write to you to voice how important it is that this pub does not get closed down. I know that this would be a huge loss to the neighbourhood, it's the lodestar pub - where everyone goes to catch up with old friends, drink a pint of Guinness and eat delicious seafood. Other pubs have come and gone - way too many have closed and been turned into houses - but this place has always remained a genuine centre of community. If all the pubs get closed down then it will tear the heart out of the neighbourhood.

I have been going to the Cow pretty much since it opened in the 90s, it has always been friendly, welcoming and filled to the brim with locals from across the borough, from both Westminster and Kensington & Chelsea. I have lived in various different spots around the area over the last 30 years, from tLadbroke Grove to Maida Vale, Kensington to Knightsbridge, Westbourne Grove to Latimer Road and it has remained my most regularly visited local. My first date with my husband was a meal in the Cow ten years ago. Everyone is unfailingly friendly and professional, the Guinness is the best in London and the food is delicious.

I would really ask you to put some hard thought into this decision - the pubs are our community living rooms and, when we finally emerge from this exhausting year, we will more than ever need places to come together and celebrate our shared connections and history.

To Whom It May Concern

I have been a resident of Notting Hill pretty much since 2007/08. During the time since then, I have come to build a life that I cherish and one the critical pieces of ghat life is The Cow.

The Cow is an institution for Notting Hill life. It is a place where dear friends get together after a tough day at work, a sunny bank holiday afternoon, or a cold rainy Sunday for a cozy meal with our urban family.

The Cow is not just a restaurant or just a pub. It helps build a social fabric, a community, that has been highlighted particularly during these covid times as an important ingredient in our wellbeing as people. Further to that, in doing so, it build a life and wealth to a neighbourhood to make it 'lived', instead of having a soul-less stream of storefronts street after street.

The Cow has always been mindful of its surroundings and encouraged its patrons to behave responsibly towards the neighbourhood and other people. As a resident I have never felt unsafe when walking past it or living close by.

It is because of this, that I urge you to renew/confirm its license.

Thank you for your time

Hello,

I'm shocked to hear the Westminster Council is reviewing the Premises License of The Cow. I can think of no place in Notting Hill that better encapsulates the diversity, community and creativity of our neighbourhood. It is a fantastic intersection of people from all walks of life. Closing this establishment would be a punishment to the people of Notting Hill and unjust to the owners of this establishment, who have maintained one of the best, if not THE best pub in London.

In the past nine years of living in the neighbourhood, The Cow has been a constant source of phenomenal food and a cosy place to enjoy the company of my friends and family. There are few things we look forward to more than a Guinness and some oysters at The Cow, when the madness of this pandemic eases and our lives return to normalcy.

Please don't take this away from us.

Dear Westminster Council,

The cow is my favourite place to drink with friends in the world and you would be robbing an already deprived public of four walls of publican bliss if it's license was suspended.

I loved it so much as a 19 year old that despite working at the Westbourne opposite I would still drink at the Cow.

Here are a few reasons:

It's rare in an area like Notting Hill that a place can unify all kinds of different folks under a shared banner. Many proudly call the cow a second home. It has an amusing take on pub food, it's a little bit french and in an almost ironically stuck up fashion they serve oysters. They're one of those kinds of familial places that has photographs of memories over the years plastered on the staircase down towards the toilet. The atmosphere is hard to quantify but there is a charm and authenticity that can only develop when somewhere has stood and evolved over decades and the sweat of their staff and customers has seeped into the walls. Intimacy is inevitable because of its size and rubbing shoulders like that with other people promotes empathy in a capitalistic culture that definitely needs more of that. I think i've sung more songs in there than anywhere else and the same for unexpected conversations with strangers. If I'm ever feeling a bit lost the Cow combined with the face of a friend is the first thing that jumps into my head. If a bit down I often deliberately walk by just to catch a whiff of merry people having a good time.

If you were able to calculate the sum of all the stress the cow has helped ease and then add up sum of all the experiences and stories that begun at 89 Westbourne Park road and then add up the joy of fulfilment felt by the staff who work there, the weight would sink any opposing argument to its existence on a utilitarian level alone.

I'm not sure why their license is up for review but if there any safety concerns, fortunately you have nothing to worry about. I have never seen anyth

Dear Sirs

I am writing to you with reference to the review of The Cow's Premise's Licence.

When I first learned of this review and the reasons it was being initiated I was shocked as my experience of The Cow is only positive. I have been a patron since the year that it opened. In the early years I was almost literally a neighbour as I lived just around the corner and I found it a welcoming, community focused pub that also happened to sell excellent drinks and superb food. 26 years later, even though I no longer live quite so locally and visit slightly less, I still find it a welcoming, community focused pub with the same superb food and drink offering.

I'd like to share these thoughts and memories with you:

- o Through visiting The Cow I met people who are some of my closest friends in the world, decent, law-abiding professionals one and all.
- o No visit to London by my late father was complete without a lunch of The Cow's sausage & mash washed down with a couple of halves of London Pride
- o Being Welsh born the fact that The Cow celebrates St David's Day with the same passion that it celebrates the Saints Days of George, Andrew and Patrick is indicative of their approach towards inclusivity
- o As a former professional in the music industry The Cow has often been my venue of choice to entertain clients and associates either over drinks or dinner. Whether those clients were well known international rock and pop stars or powerful managers/agents/lawyers from the USA, I've never ended a visit without my guests wanting to come back
- o As a current senior executive with a leading UK broadcaster I continue to use The Cow for business entertainment purposes but absolutely would not do so if I thought that the premises were in any way disreputable as to do so would reflect poorly on my own professional reputation.

The Cow represents much that is good about the locale in which it is situated - inclusive, community spirited and a fine example of the modern tradition of a Pub that provides fine food and drink in a friendly, professional manner. The loss of such a venue would reflect poorly on the licensing authorities and represent a significant loss to the area and I urge you to look favourably at such a fine institution.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing in support of the license renewal of The Cow Pub and Restaurant.

The Cow has accomplished a remarkable feat - it has remained relevant for over 20 years, both as a vibrant hub for the local community and as an aspirational destination venue.

It is also a truly inclusive and transgenerational place; our own experiences there include our own wedding lunch, taking Japanese clients for dinner, treating our builders to a pint, and a stylish 70th birthday party; my 88-year-old mother-in-law finds nothing more exciting than a seafood lunch in the Cow pub.

The quality of the offerings is consistently outstanding, and the (mostly long-standing and loyal) staff are warm, welcoming and personable.

In my view, The Cow provides a vital service to the Westbourne Park community; it is a colourful and unique place of encounter with a soul, and without it, this area would be much diminished.

I sincerely hope that The Cow will be allowed to continue providing its services to the fullest extent.

Dear Council,

I am writing in reference to The Cow: 21/00981/LIREVP. I am sad and concerned to hear that a review is underway of The Cow's license. I sincerely hope the council decides to uphold The Cow's license and am writing to plead for this outcome.

The Cow is my favourite place to meet friends, eat great (and reasonably priced) food and drink London's finest pint of Guinness. I've lived in the area for many years and while the community around is changing, The Cow is part of the fabric that ties old and new together. People from a cross section of the community gather, speak to each other and rub shoulders with each other at the bustling bar.

The notion that I or anyone in or near to The Cow would experience crime, disorder, nuisance or a lack of safety is completely inconsistent with my experience. I have never experienced a single incident of this nature and would consider The Cow, if anything, a safe zone. A warm place of companionship that is a vital feature of the community's soul. A place where problems are unpicked, stories are told and joy is found.

It may seem "over the top" to talk about a pub in these terms, but I am not alone. The evidence is well recorded - Rick Muir, 2012, The Social Value of Community Pubs. Interpreting this report and the overall beneficial role The Cow in the community, I believe that if the council removes The Cow's license it will be doing a disservice to the community.

After a year of social isolation, I sincerely hope to be able to rediscover normality with a trip to The Cow.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]

Dear Westminster Council,

It is with concern that I write you regarding your review of The Cow Pub on Westbourne Park Road. My concern is twofold: 1) surely there is better use of council taxes and your time than causing administrative headaches and uncertainty for a business? It seems that if a pub has been in business for 26 years there should be a confidence and support from the council in which it sits.

Secondly, The Cow is such a tremendous asset to Notting Hill, one of my favourite pubs, and the place to go for amazing oysters and the perfect Guinness. It is hardly a 'divey boozer', so it is shocking to me that there would be complaints that you take seriously. The Cow is a charming, well-tended pub, with an excellent staff. It brings life to what otherwise is a bit of a dead end corner of Notting Hill, and even though I no longer live in Notting Hill, it is one of the few reasons I return to my old neighbourhood. I have been going to the pub from when I grew up in Chelsea, to when I moved to Notting Hill and lived a few streets away, to when I moved to East London, and it is near the top of my list of places to go when we can go to places again. It has never been a pub I have had any concerns about visiting alone as a woman, quite the contrary! The staff do a top notch job of looking after all their patron. I remember once visiting and whilst minding my own business a customer started bugging me (as is often the case when a woman just wants to go somewhere, read a book, and enjoy a nice pint). The staff were immediately on top of this person, politely but firmly ceasing to serve him and escorting him out. I didn't ask for this, as again, these things happen, but I always remember the bartender replying when I said 'you didn't have to go to all that trouble' 'yes I did'. North Notting Hill has problems as all residents know, especially with some of the 'bike gangs' that seem to congregate in the Kensal Rise/North Notting Hill area.

To penalise The Cow for this is ridiculous. From their door staff to their bartenders they are actively engaged in creating a safe and enjoyable environment. The Cow is a real gem, have you ever been? It is the place to hopefully get one of the tables in the back and chat with friends, and it is loved by everyone I know in the area.

I would be happy to offer any more feedback on this matter, and I do hope, for all of your sakes, that this is resolved soon.

Kind Regards,

This cow brings joy to locals, it is one of the most authentic pubs we have here in Notting Hill. The staff are great, the atmosphere is the best.

What does The Cow mean to you? A lot of celebratory drinks have been held here. A lot of memories with friends that will remain with me for a long time. Eating here is always great, the food is so different compared to other pubs.

What are all the great things about The Cow does Westminster Council need to hear from you? all of the above, and I cant vouch enough how great the atmosphere is in that pub, there really is no other.

Importantly, can you confirm that you have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow? I have experienced, or heard of any crime linked to this one of a kind pub.

I just found about the review of the Cow's premises license and I would like to assure you that there are no issues related to noise, safety or crime.

I strongly believe that a pub like Cow is part of the DNA's neighbourhood and what place like this brings to the local community far outweighs any goodbyes when the pub closes.

This is a true example of what actually truly matters in a neighbourhood and what makes an area (or London in general) very special. The local community feels safer when its members have a place where then can socialize and get to know each other.

The place, the staff and the role that a place like that plays in a community are key factors that create an area that is attractive, full of life and pleasant.

It is considered by those who know it, as the best pub in London, somewhere always welcoming, where you can meet interesting locals, and have a fantastic time. In many ways it typifies the best of what London has to offer. Indeed I always take people visiting the city from abroad, to show them this quintessentially English institution. I, and those I bring, always admire the way it has an old world charm and a modern crowd. Something I hope it continues to maintain and nurture for years to come.

Dear to whom it may concern at Westminster City Council,

I'm writing to you in regards to the recent concerning news regarding your Review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

The coronavirus pandemic has been an incredibly tough period so many. When it struck, I very swiftly realised that happiness in my life depends on two important things: the ability to watch live sport and the freedom to go to the pub with my friends. Concerning the latter, the Cow has been the single biggest part of that element of my life. Perhaps it's sad that I rely on such simple pleasures, perhaps not. Since the pandemic, I've learned to enjoy all the cliched things like going on long runs, baking bread, and drinking by myself in the flat. But there has been a large Cow shaped hole in my life ever since 16 March and I have been dreaming of the day when I can return there with all my friends, unencumbered by the clutches of this evil virus.

I am 30 years old and have lived in Notting Hill for 25 of those years. Since I returned to London in July 2018 (I lived in Asia (Hong Kong and Singapore) for 5 years after leaving university), it's not an exaggeration to say that I would go to the Cow at least once or twice a week when it was open. Sometimes for just a quick pint mid-week evening pint of Guinness with a friend, sometimes for lunch on a Sunday, sometimes for the entire evening on a Friday and sometimes for the whole day on a Saturday. You will I'm sure be aware that there is no place in the whole of London that serves Guinness of comparable quality. I have also not, in my 25 years of living in this great city, found a pub that serves such exceptional food. But most of all, what this pub has, which cannot accurately be described in words, is a feeling of freedom, community and spirit that is simply not possible to be replicated anywhere else.

Luckily, many of my friends live in or around Notting Hill, so I'm never short of people to go to the Cow with, but that's not stopped me from meeting dozens of new interesting and lively people in there, as well as constantly bumping into old acquaintances and friends. When I have a friend visiting London who has never been before, I always recommend that they go to the Cow. It's a truly remarkable place, and the thought of it not being there when we emerge from this pandemic, honestly, breaks my heart. It's a melting pot of pure vibes.

In there, I've seen a whole host of celebrities, including Ian Wright (who famously told a captive national audience on I'm a Celebrity Get Me Out of Here that he met his future wife in the Cow), Nasser Hussain and Ian Ward, Rita Ora and Stella McCartney, and many more. But it's not just a celebrity hotspot, it's a community meeting spot for people of all walks of life. I even bumped into the handy man (turns out he's a local) who built my bed in there for God's sake! None of this has any relevance whatsoever to the License Review of course, which I have no doubt has been undertaken for good reason, but I suppose what I'm trying to clumsily articulate is that I love this place, I have many memories of it, and I hope to god that I can make many more of them starting from 12 April.

I can't claim to have been a patron of the place over the 26 years it has been there, but I know that it takes a lot of hard work and special people to create what they have at the Cow. It's quite simply my favourite place in the whole of London and I ask that you please carefully consider what it means to so many people before you take it's licence away. It goes without saying, but for good order, I suppose I should also add that never have I ever once witnessed or experienced any crime, disorder or issues of safety when I have been at the Cow. On the contrary, the place is very much my safe haven.

The sun is shining in London today and it is Friday. I have not felt so positive about things in many weeks. However there is a dark cloud hovering over me, which I can only hope will be removed after this process has been completed.

Regarding The Cow pub, Westbourne Park Road.

The Cow is the most special pub in West London, full of history and genuine locals who frequent not only for the excellent Guinness and Oysters, but also for the warm, cosy, fireside atmosphere. The ready smiles of the friendly bar staff, excellent music, and the intimate friendliness of a proper local pub.

There are people I know who live in LA as well as some who live in Australia that very much consider The Cow 'their pub' when they are back in London. It is a huge benefit to the local area and all the other businesses in the neighbourhood.

I have frequented the Cow for the last 15 years and have come to think of it as a home from home.

I have always felt completely safe at The Cow, it is one of the few pubs which doesn't seem to attract bad vibes or serious drunks. Even when I was a single woman I never felt uncomfortable arriving at the Cow before my friends got there or leaving on my own to find a taxi home again.

Along with many many others, I would be very sorry if this iconic West London landmark had to close.

The food and atmosphere are both terrific in equal measure and I can say with confidence that I have never been a victim of or witnessed any anti social behaviour or behaviour that may constitute public nuisance in any way by patrons of The Cow.

I would consider it a tragedy if this highlight of the British culinary, social and cultural scene were to be taken away from us.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

[REDACTED] for 16 years and continue to own the property and run it as a rental. I cannot stress how much The Cow means to us and what a fantastic establishment it is. The staff are second the none, the atmosphere is incredible and it has something so hard to define or replicate. We absolutely love it and continue to visit regularly even though we no longer live opposite.

In all our time [REDACTED] and frequenting The Cow I have never seen or heard anything troubling. I have always felt extremely safe and have never found the patrons to be a nuisance. Since moving out of [REDACTED] 4 years ago we have had tenants in our house and they all say that the pub is one of the reasons they love the house. It is an asset to the area in every sense.

The Cow pub and restaurant is a pillar of Notting Hill within Westminster council. I moved to the area 8 years ago and it quickly became a place to go for a variety of occasions.

There is always friendly faces, from the bar staff to the patrons. It's a place where I take my partner Charlotte to enjoy their food, with probably one of the best pints of Guinness in London. Equally I have been with a group of friends, parents and grandparents (on sperate occasions). It's got a very civilised and rustic feel. Somewhat home from home, where you can throw your coat on a peg and relax in the environment.

Not ever have I experienced (in my many hundred's of visits) or seen any form of disturbance, nuisance, crime or any equivalent issue that would be deemed unsafe. This includes most visits on relatively busy Friday evenings and weekends. If anything I believe the patrons and owners to be sympathetic to people in the area less fortunate, whom frequently pass the doors. I hope Westminster is doing everything to assist these people!

This place deserves to be kept as is and allowed to thrive. We (as a community) need positive places to congregate with other local people, share a storey of the week and buy a drink. Not to mention the chicken Kiev and Fish stew, I would urge anyone reviewing this license to go and try it. I'm sure it will be clear as day the social and gastronomic wonders that this place is doing for our community and our own families and friends.

I would like to be contacted on updates and would happily be contacted if you require any further support.

I am writing as a resident and business owner in Westminster to advocate my complete and utter support for 'The Cow' on Westbourne park road. This pub has been an institution in West London for as long as I can remember. It is a social hub for the community at large and a purveyor of excellent British produce. Supporting local producers in the process.

For me personally the pub has been the scene of many a happy gathering and celebration and hold a special place in my families heart. The pub is an amazing advertisement for the importance of local restaurant and bar, showing the community that a pub can be authentic, inspiring and nourishing for both body and soul. The Cow i believe holds the title for me as one of London's very best pubs and dining rooms and should be protected at all costs. The city is losing so many of its great pubs, it would be a travesty if we lost another in the means that are happening with the cow.

Please consider this a vote of unconditional support for the Cow pub.

I understand that you are considering revoking the licence for the THE COW.

THE COW represents the only proper restaurant and drinking establishment left in Notting Hill Gate. An establishment that has been a cultural melting pot for like minded creative individuals from music art and media. These people have helped put Notting Hill Gate on the Global map and after 25 years, attracting many tourists and foreign nationals who have chosen to live in the area as well as attracting the likes of Tom Cruise, Madonna, Keanu Reeves and too many other names to mention. Why would you want to throw that away. If you revoke it's license all that good PR will have been a waste.

People come to THE COW for its friendliness, its sense of home cooking and low fi comfort. Unlike many other establishments in the area, it has still retained it's original remit...to provide a space to eat and drink and remain as a truly authentic British pub without becoming just another high end restaurant or shop, for which there are already plenty within the area.

On a final note, I have never experienced any crime, disorder or safety issues while being a patron of THE COW over the last 25 years and have lived round the corner for the best part of 20 of those years.

I trust you will do the right thing and enable THE COW to continue to function as one of the last cultural meeting places left in the area.

If you revoke it's licence, you will rip the heart out of the area and that would be a very sad day.

I wanted to write to express my deep concern in learning of a license review at The Cow on Westbourne Park road.

The Cow is my local pub and has been the cornerstone of local social interaction and an incredible place supporting locals and Notting hills individual personality since I moved to the area some 17 years ago.

It is truly one of the unique parts of the area. A place that allows creativity, personality and individuality to roam freely. It's a place that's shares diversity, loves everyone equally and promotes raw spirit.

People travel from all corners of the world to visit it for its amazing food, charismatic warm staff, and it's desire to stay as traditional a English pub as possible these days.

The Cow sucks the marrow from life, and before you consider taking that away, why don t you head down and see for yourself, I guarantee you will leave well fed and watered with a warm satisfying glow.

London is in danger of losing its spirit and is being suppressed into conformity, and it would break my heart to see this magical place bleed into mediocrity. We must live deliberately and protect our heritage.

Eat heartily and give the house a good name.

I'm writing in support of The Cow pub. I've lived in the area for over 30 years and have been a regular visitor to The Cow with friends and family. It provides food at an incredibly high standard, (the fish stew is second to none and the Guinness is just perfect. To think that it's in danger of survival is unthinkable, I've never experienced any issues with crime, only a convivial atmosphere and a welcoming, caring staff who care about their clientele. I'm saddened that after all this time Westminster council could contemplate it's closure, the British pub forms an important part of our culture where communities talk, listen and shake off the rigours of life.

I have been a long time visitor at The Cow and never once experienced any kind of crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues. In fact, I used to frequent The Cow because it was such a homely, friendly environment vs many of the alternative venues in the area. While the surrounding streets are not necessarily the safest or most pleasant, The Cow provides a safe haven to catch up with friends and meet other friendly locals from the community.

A notable example of their commitment to public safety was the way in which they repeatedly turned down my business due to overcrowding amidst the Covid pandemic - despite my being a regular and other venues being much more relaxed regarding the rules and regulations.

Fundamentally I believe The Cow to be one of the diamonds in the rough of the area, perhaps the best public venue in the region, and an essential staple of community life. It was genuinely a motivating factor in my purchasing a home nearby.

I hope my perspective can add value to your decision making and that the right choice is made - to allow an extremely high quality, safe and friendly social environment to continue to provide a rare and high quality service to local residents.

It is with a heavy heart that I write this email as I see that the licence of the beloved Cow is under review.

I've always lived in Notting Hill and the Cow represents one of my area's great beating hearts. It offers our community so much in the form of a safe, cosy, joyful environment to get together and share food and stories. The Cow represents a bastion of what a hospitality establishment should be - it is a standard setter which other like establishments should follow.

In all my years of going to the Cow I have never been witness to any antisocial or criminal behaviour. Quite to the contrary in fact - the Door Staff are an asset and perform their task with aplomb whilst also sharing a smile. I've been witness to the bar staff adhering to their licencing obligations (I myself am an alcohol licence holder) by challenging those under 25 and not serving those who are intoxicated. The safety of the staff and clientele is at the forefront of the Cow's mind - it is evident to see.

To revoke the Cow's licence would be to strike at the heart of an already fragile community. What we need now is hope and optimism and for that reason, I heartily believe the Cow should keep its licence and continue to be a servant to our community as the wonderful hospitality establishment it is.

During normal circumstances when London hospitality venues are open, we both frequent The Cow often to enjoy the fantastic food, drinks and the atmosphere. We regularly take out of town visitors with us to the Cow as our number 1 pick for a friendly neighbourhood pub option.

The Cow offers excellent service and amenities for all walks of life to enjoy the restaurant quality food and beverage .

At NO point in the many years of being patrons of the Cow have we ever experienced or witnessed any form of crime, disorder, public nuisance or felt worried for our safety during our time at the Cow.

I am writing to support the continuation of The Cow Public House license in your forthcoming review.

The Cow is part of the social heritage in the area. At a time like now... when we will soon be coming out of isolation and lockdown, we more than ever need such welcoming places as part of the social fabric that keeps us linked together.

In particular The Cow holds a special place in the hearts of locals - having a rich history - a fine West London heritage and the place so many of us remember as central to our experience of growing up in the area.

I have never been disturbed by crime or public disorder matters related to The Cow.

Please keep the licence going.

It has come to my attention that The Cow's license is being reviewed, therefore I wanted to write to you to explain what The Cow means not only to me but also to the Notting Hill Community.

I have lived in Notting Hill for over ten years and I am a regular weekly customer of The Cow. Not once in my entire time I have lived in Notting Hill and been to The Cow have I ever experienced crime, disorder, safety issues or public nuisance. The Cow is a wonderful establishment, The Cow creates a friendly and loving environment for the community. The staff are amazing, they are professional but also very welcoming and they are on top of everything. The cow means so much to me and to so many people, it is absolutely devastating to hear these false accusations against them. We need more places like it that look after the people in their community, showing the support they do for the locals. I have held everything from business meetings, to christmas lunches, meetups with friends or taken family when in the area. I am always welcomed like family, their food, etiquette, professionalism, care and general standards are exceptional. Please please consider what I have to say, The Cow is an institution in Notting Hill and loved by all.

If you have any further questions please let me know.

The Cow is a key cultural centre for the area, it's patrons are typically those involved in the arts and they somewhat define Notting Hill culture.

I have often visited the Cow and believe that it uplifts the area and makes the area feel safe and inviting. I have never come across any negative aspects and certainly no crime, but if the COw was not there then I would think twice about travelling in that area on foot.

I strongly believe you are at risk of downgrading the area should you remove their licence, and the knock on effect on the surrounding businesses and restaurants will be very detrimental.

I would like to begin by sharing that in the last week, most of the conversations I've had in the neighbourhood have included the topic of The Cow - how amazing it is and how tragic it were it to be shut down.

The Cow is more than an institution. It has added so much value to my experience of living in London. As I am sure you will read in the many support letter that you are receiving, the Cow is so important to so many people. People feel welcome there, people feel at home there. I definitely do.

The Cow is such an asset to the community. It is a place where people come together on equal grounds to share ideas, connect and make bonds with other members of the community. I've met the most incredible people in this establishment. Everybody gets along, everyone can strike up a conversation - it is a place with a real sense of community. I cannot overstate how rare and precious that is in a city as big as London - in any city really.

Whenever someone has visited me from abroad (be it friends or my 70 year old father), the Cow is the first place I take them to make them experience the vibe of this very special community. They usually ask me to go back the next day - not only because is it the best (sea)food for miles... but because it has that special magic that makes every visit to The Cow unforgettable.

I have never felt unsafe and have never witnessed anyone fearing for their safety at the Cow. It is not a place for crime and disorder, but a place for community and culture.

I would be very sad to see the Cow close its doors. I wish I could better express how important the Cow is to the community. I for one cannot wait to be able to go back to The Cow to feel this sense of community and sense of home that we have been longing for all these months of lockdown.

It is a place that serves the community and allows people to come together from all walks of life to meet, enjoy, connect and befriend.

The Cow has a very special blend of good food, kindness, local friendship which is all underpinned with a lovely energy that welcomes and makes its customers feel incredibly at ease.

The staff have always been quick to ask customers to leave in a quiet fashion (when necessary).. not that I have ever seen any issues.

Alongside, I have never seen any unruly behaviour nor have I ever witnesses any problems in all my 8 years frequenting.

As a very nearby resident and business/shop owner I would like to express my heartfelt dismay at the thought of The Cow being denied its license. When I moved to the area 9 years ago I knew that it would be busy with its two pubs and then the café and gym [REDACTED]. Both café and gym disappeared and with them some of the life of the area has disappeared. I hear on the grapevine that some of the recent behaviour has been undesirable and I absolutely don't condone that; but I do hope you can allow them off with a serious warning and hope that they are very aware of the need to keep the peace in the future.

At The Cow the food and ambience are wonderful. We have often taken our artists and best clients to dinner there after our gallery openings and we are made to feel welcome and we thoroughly value the rare feeling of enjoying our local characterful pub. Too much of the wealthier areas of London are being made bland and characterless and The Cow plays a huge role as a venue for ordinary people enjoying a drink and food after work as well as a wonderful tourist destination; I've often seen people from all over the world eating upstairs and have felt happy that they've tracked down one of the less obvious venues.

I am writing to express my support for The Cow in the Council's review of its premises license.

The Cow has been an asset to the area and to those from further afield throughout my adult life, and long before it. Most importantly, I have never experienced crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety issues while visiting the Cow. Its staff are hard working and polite, I feel safe when visiting and the variety of people who visit The Cow reflects an incredible, hallmark diversity that should be celebrated. London has its problems but The Cow is not one of them. Famous for its good food and service, for the energy of the people involved and for the cross-section of characters and backgrounds present, it would be an enormous sadness to people from all walks of life in the area.

I met the love of my life at The Cow; I have celebrated highs and consoled lows; it remains the best pub in the area and showcases British values and hospitality in so many, inexplicable ways.

I wholeheartedly support it as an institution and know that whatever trouble it finds itself in, it will be supported to the hilt by those who know it.

I have been going to the Cow every so often for a number of year and am disappointed to see that its licence is up for renal especially on the grounds stated. I have never witnessed any public nuisance or disorder in all my visits. Quite the opposite, one of the things I love about the Cow is that (like so many pubs in the UK) it feels that it is a real asset to the local community where people come together to eat and socialise. As we come out of lockdown pubs like the Cow will be crucial in getting us back to our social selves and reversing some of the damage that has been done to so many after such a long lockdown.

I implore the council to continue the cows licence so it can continue to bring people of the local community together.

This pub has been a landmark pub for around 25 years. I have used it for at least 20 years and still meet friends there, and now it is enjoyed by my grown-up children (24 & 26) who also enjoy meeting their friends there. There are not many local pubs that happily mix generations while offering excellent food and good value for money. The excessive gentrification of Notting Hill killing traditional venues with lease competition being overrun by faceless chains of garbage food and bottled beer, this is one of the last bastions that has existed and thrived rather than be consumed by this trend. Most of those poorly-run chains will not be able to trade out of their problems post-lockdown, and goodness knows what pubs and bars in this area can survive.

Considering what they have had to try to absorb with government flip-flopping their policies on opening in the last year, to serve notice on them now is utterly outrageous and heartless. On what basis? If you are bothered about noise, try living near Powys Sq at night...Illegal flat-parties abound. I have never in 20 years seen any acts of violence inside or outside the venue. My wife has been robbed twice near the bus depot on Westbourne Park and on the Tavistock road in the last 5 years, and on both occasions the robbers went back into the estates behind Tavistock Crescent NOT back into the Cow. Maybe the council could use its resources better to deal with lighting issues and policing the streets for robberies than taking pernicious actions like this.

Under my "public interest discovery rights" I look forward to receiving a full response detailing number of complaints, type of complaints, frequency of complaints.

I am writing to support The Cow's license. It is an iconic establishment that is a mainstay of Notting Hill. It has an excellent kitchen and bar. To consider revoking its license during a global pandemic is heartless and unfair. It supports jobs in the bar and restaurant. Local residents are the main customers. The Cow is one of the best local pubs and should have its license renewed. It provides a high quality of service and food and is one of our local favourites. I am writing to express concern over the review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

The Cow is a local institution and it is appalling that such a venue is being brought into a question at a time when hospitality is already on its knees.

Through all my years of visits to this venue I have never once witnessed crime or disorder and the staff are always respectful and polite within the local community.

Whilst it is clear that within the world of pubs, there are always going to be a few bad apple customers that take things too far - The Cow works hard at maintaining its reputation of being an upstanding, neighbourhood venue. They aren't plugging cheap booze and encouraging binge-drinking - they serve high quality food and beverage to people who appreciate it and of whom 99.9% behave perfectly responsibly.

What seems to be being overlooked here is that a great pub (like The Cow) is part of what makes a local community so special. Westbourne Grove, and London as a whole, benefits from the vibrancy and sociality that pubs provide. They make this big city feel a little bit more neighbourly... I, for one, would put a 'good local pub within 5 minutes' as being a major priority in choosing where I live and I would say there are probably many more out there like me.

Westminster council will be doing the vast majority of residents in the area a major disservice by revoking this venue's license, not to mention the many thousands of others who happily travel from much further afield to visit the team here and enjoy their delicious food!

I hope you make the right decision and don't choose to kill one of the few pubs still standing after 12 months of battling tooth and nail to stay alive!

The Cow is a special place for many reasons - most importantly because it draws in interesting people. It is a pub I am very happy to go to on my own - because people speak to each other - something unusual in London. The people who come there are varied - there are well off and less well off locals and also international people and people like me - who used to live nearby and now return when we get back to The Big Smoke.

I never felt intimidated, could have an easy chat with the waiter/waitresses without feeling uncomfortable and I think The Cow plays an important part in the surrounding community. Its friendly but not a pick up joint, the food is good home cooking without being fancy or pricey and the staff have a wonderful attitude in the Pub's cosy environment. I now live further away, but when working in the area, I always return for "a cuddle" from the Cow Pub and there are not many places that can offer that. I use it as my office away from home. I can go there to think quietly alone or to meet with colleagues to discuss various projects.*

*Please think very carefully about taking away places like this from the community. What are you going to replace it with that is better? I have been a frequent visitor to The Cow now for many years, since I was introduced to it by a french friend of mine who happens to be a top sommelier. He discovered it whilst working in London during the 1990's, and living just a couple of hundreds yards away. In turn, I have introduced many of my friend to this gem of a pub, one of the few left in London that have not succumbed to the blandness of a 'chain', nor dolled up for the Business/Tourist trade. The Cow has retained it's character and independent feel, whilst offering some of the most excellent food available in London, both upstairs in the 'restaurant', as well as downstairs in the bar area. At the same time, the experience of visiting simply to enjoy the beer and company is a rare one these days, as this is one of the few pubs I have visited in London, or in the countryside, that still feels like a proper pub, not some tarted up, characterless hostelry offering third rate food.

Not once, in all those years, have I ever experienced rowdiness or bad behaviour at The Cow. Quite the contrary. The locals, if that is what they are, have always been extremely friendly and I have enjoyed many conversations with a multitude of people from all walks of life, whilst enjoying a pint or two. It would be heartbreaking if this wonderful place was closed, or changed, for any reason. Covid has wrought enough damage and inflicted more than enough misery on the restaurant/leisure sector as it is, without this plucky little independent establishment being closed down for some petty reason.

I have no idea if this 'review' is a standard affair or has been instigated following complaints, but what I can say is that noise levels, if that is an issue, have never been excessive, and I have always enjoyed being able to hold a normal conversation in the bar, at all times. I daresay there will be some locals who find this pub, or any pub for that matter, a source of annoyance, but I can honestly say, hand on heart, that the staff running The Cow have always acted responsibly and with due consideration to all those living nearby, ensuring those visitors who might have had one too many, are helped to a taxi, or gently and kindly asked whether now might be the time to head home and have a good sleep. I have NEVER seen any trouble at this pub.

I live [REDACTED]. As you can see, I travel a fair distance to The Cow. There is a reason for that. One reason is that there is not a single pub in [REDACTED] that gets anywhere near to the convivial atmosphere of The Cow, and none can hold a candle to the excellent food on offer.

[REDACTED], my road has always been busy with visitors, but during Lockdown it has resembled [REDACTED] from the good old days', when London actually had a population! I have endured parking problems, early morning and late evening noise problems, more dog mess than one could imagine, blaring music systems, social distancing issues. You name it, my little cul-de-sac road has endured it, yet even though the vast majority of the people walking up and down my road are NOT local, it was my choice to live near an entry gate and I have to learn to live with all that goes with it. The vast majority are well behaved and considerate, but a few are not. HOWEVER it would not cross my mind to have a barbed wire fence put up at the entrance to my road to keep these people out, simply because I might prefer peace and quiet. We live on a crowded island, noise goes with the territory and we simply need to learn a little tolerance, allow people to let off some steam and enjoy themselves whilst they can, always provided they do so in a considerate and responsible manner. I have to make that call where I live, and I daresay those living near The Cow will on occasion need to do the same, but as I have stated many times already, I have never seen trouble or endured excessive noise at this lovely pub.

Please, please grant the licence to keep this absolute treasure open.... as is....unchanged...I would not be the only one who would be devastated if it were to close, in fact it will be the first place I head for hen lockdown ends!.

I'm writing to you as a resident of [REDACTED] In relation to "The Cow" licensing review.

I was shocked and saddened to hear the news regarding the licensing of the pub.

A pub that has been central to the community surrounding it, as well as far and wide. A local place to meet, catch up and make new friends. Many residents live alone, The Cow is somewhere that the community come together.

It's a rare gem of a pub that manages to stay inclusive of all and retain a loyal local following built over many years.

Covid presented all pubs with serious challenges and some coped better than others with the pent up demand for people to meet and gather. I agree at times it was overwhelming but this was down to the circumstances effecting us all. In all the years of frequenting, I've never seen any antisocial behaviour or witnessed any of the alleged issues regarding safety.

To loose "The Cow" would tear the heart out of our community. Many of who have lived in the area and frequented for 25 years.

People come and go but you can always guarantee a familiar face at the Cow a proudly independent establishment selling great seafood and encouraging conviviality!

Looking forward to seeing friends and locals soon !

The Cow is the heart and soul of the community. By closing it, you are denying many thousands of people a place that they call home. This includes their amazing staff.

I have been going to The Cow for over 20 years and have never experienced any issues. And I can wholeheartedly say that Cow is a hub that brings everyone together harmoniously.

I never felt threatened or unsafe going to The Cow, on the opposite side, it provides a sense of community where people help each other.

This is a shocking act, coming from the same system which is highly promoting outdoor social gatherings.

With this, I truly hope that you will reconsider and allow "The Cow" to keep its doors open.

Please allow The Cow to remain in business.*

I'm writing on behalf of The Cow pub on Westbourne Park Road, after hearing that their licence was under review by Westminster Council. The idea of potentially losing a pub that has been a melting pot for the area for nearly 30 years, not through the significant losses that most hospitality venues have suffered but through a council decision, is astounding; especially after such an incredibly hard time for London and Londoners. Hopefully, the summer will be a time we can reconnect our loved ones and our community as a whole, and The Cow will and should play a significant part in this joyful celebration.

Outside of being a brilliant pub, it's a wonderful restaurant, and home to some of my happiest memories with family and friends.

Lastly as a woman, The Cow, unlike many other pubs, is a place you always feel safe, and looked after, by fellow guests and staff alike. I've never experienced anything other than an easy camaraderie with everyone there and hope to do so again once we're finally allowed to.

I hope you remember my words when considering The Cow's licence, we've all lost so much through this pandemic - to actively consider getting rid of this happy icon, is unthinkable.

As a resident in the neighbourhood, I would like to take this opportunity to share with you my experiences of the Cow as a patron for the past 20 years.

In brief, The Cow is my favourite pub in London. And there's a lot of competition out there. The Cow brings together all the ingredients needed for a great time: wonderful, fresh food, cooked on the premises; fabulous Guinness (one of the best in London!) with a perfect texture that clings to the side of the glass all the way down; a friendly convivial atmosphere with a wonderful blend of local characters and visitors from pretty much everywhere.

In all of my visits over a 20 year period I have never experienced or seen any trouble or risks to public safety, nor the commission of any crimes either on or near the premises.

I encourage you to consider the real positives that the Cow brings to the neighbourhood in reviewing the premises license.

I have today seen that 'The Cow' in Westbourne Terrace is facing a Premises Licence Review and although I would not normally get involved with such things I feel compelled on this occasion to reach out and have my voice heard.

I have frequented 'The Cow' for more than 20 years, I do not live in London but I have worked all around London for the past 35 years and visited probably more than a hundred different pubs in that time. I can confidently say that I have returned to 'The Cow' many, many more times than any of the others. I simply love it! Pubs have been forced to diversify and mutate in order to appeal to new trends and ever changing customer experience demands but 'The Cow' manages to diversify without losing any of its traditional charm or eclectic charisma. It is a jewel in the Notting Hill crown, that is an opinion held locally and I have found it to be an opinion shared very far afield. There is always a warm welcome and I genuinely feel that I am recognised and greeted back by the friendly staff, (who have been there for many years themselves) even after I may have been absent for months.

I feel safe at 'The Cow' I have never witnessed any crime or bad behavior, it's just not that sort of place. It attracts the kind of patronage that is seeking good times, laughter, and quality. These are the qualities that I am looking for and I always feel in kindred company. I felt safe too when I visited towards the end of last year and found that social distancing and sanitation was being rigidly adhered to.

'The Cow' is one heck of a great pub. We are losing too many of our local pubs on an epic scale and we should all be trying to protect this greatest of British traditions. The owners of 'The Cow' spare no effort in their part to maintain this tradition and they should be supported in this cause. We need our pubs and we most certainly need pubs like 'The Cow'

Notting Hill is a very special part of London. It oozes a community spirit and is made special by the people who live there and the hospitality that you feel when you visit. I am especially drawn to the area but without 'The Cow' I would feel like I'd lost an old friendly relative that I'd call in and visit when passing.

I cannot think of a single reasons why the local council would not want to support and indeed encourage businesses like 'The Cow'.

I hope that someone reads my message and feels my sincerity.

I understand that you are in the process of reviewing the Premises License for The Cow.

We are a firm of local architects based just up the road in Westminster. Over the last 15 years we have witnessed a huge decline in the number of pubs in our area. The Cow has been a public house for decades, in fact before the current owner re- opened it some 25 years ago, it was a far less attractive hostelry.

I would urge you to think very carefully about this, even before Covid our few remaining licensed premises were under threat from greedy landlords that saw better value in getting rid of them and changing uses. In the coming months that pressure will be even greater.

The Cow is a Notting Hill institution and it needs to be nurtured not closed down.

[REDACTED] ,I have lived in the Notting Hill area for over 20 years and most definitely consider myself a Notting hill resident.

THE COW public house has played an invaluable part of the Tapestry to my life and i would consider it an " asset of community value". The best way to describe it as a true anchor for the community. It provides an essential meeting point for all members of the unique and diverse Notting Hill community. It is one of the few establishments remaining in the community that provides a wholesome meal ,a good drink to all in a safe and welcoming environment.

The Cow embraces , promotes and celebrates many Cultural events representing the diverse local culture. Notting Hill Carnival/St Patricks day and multiple charitable causes to name a few It is a well run and thriving establishment that defies the national trend whereby community pubs are struggling and are closing down. It provides employment not just to its workforce but to all its suppliers of food and Alcohol at a time when the community needs to bounce back from the Pandemic..It probably is one of the few local establishments that can meet its Business rates demand.

In over 20 years of visiting and enjoying The Cow i have never experienced any Crime ,Disorder, public nuisance or safety concerns. It has been a great place to take many girlfriends on "first dates" and was instrumental in me meeting my now wife. Often the first place visiting friends from all over the world want to go is 'The cow'..

Im really concerned that licensing reviews are often generated by opportunistic residents who move into an area even though the "pub "has existed long before they arrived. They then seek to close the pub down in order to increase the value of their property . This occurrence is becoming way too familiar and must be resisted. Please support the continuation of The cows license....

What does the Cow mean to us?—a place to meet friends- somewhere to relax on a summer evening— somewhere to walk to, socialise and then walk home.

Clearly this is a congested area in that the pavement here is narrow—does the Cow disrupt the neighbourhood?—NO. Is it a source of disturbance to the neighbourhood?—not in our opinion.

Does the Cow generate noise?—is it a threat to public safety?—NO. Is it responsible for generating crime and disorder ?—categorically NO. Should it be closed on grounds of public safety?—ABSOLUTELY NOT.

Is there sufficient evidence to warrant the closure of an established and valuable and popular neighbourhood venue?—in our 20 years of regular use we have NEVER seen any suggestion that this should be the case.

The Government is trying to support hospitality venues—to ensure that neighbourhoods can be revitalised. Your suggestion that The Cow should be closed is absolutely contrary to this strategy, goes against the wishes of the large majority of local residents (including us) and is anti-democratic in the broadest sense of the word.

I live within walking distance of the Cow. It has been a favourite local of mine for many years, combining that rare mix of great food, friendly service and a safe, convivial atmosphere that secures a dedicated local following. I particularly love its appeal across age groups-this is a pub which suits whether you are twenty or eighty! Its presence on Westbourne Park Road is familiar, comforting and adds immensely to the community feel of this area. Its closure during lockdown has highlighted, for me, how our London streets become less appealing, and feel less safe, when there is no social buzz of activity and people from places like the Cow.

I understand Westminster council is reviewing The Cow's Premises License - I wanted to share my thoughts on the establishment.

The Cow is not just another ordinary London pub, of which there are thousands, soulless and commercialised, with no affiliation to the local residents. The Cow is everything they are not and what a pub should be - charming, quirky, fun, great beer and delicious food - a true local that local people are very proud of. It is these types of establishments that make London great, the individual restaurants, bars and pubs that symbolise the melting pot of cultures that produces such feel & character that few cities can emulate. London does not carry this aura because of weatherspoons, pretts & spaghetti house, it carries it because of places like this.

When I lived near the Cow it was the only reason people who resided in other areas of London would come to Westbourne Grove. When talking to people of all ages, in and outside London, If I mentioned the area it was always followed with "oh yes, is that where that pub The Cow is?" - it is the focal point of the area, a true institution. I can guarantee, few pubs will command the support like you will receive for The Cow.

The last year has made us realise the value in supporting local business, supporting small businesses, supporting frontline workers, but most importantly it's highlighted the importance of seeing your friends, meeting your family, having fun, having a drink, going out for dinner, socialising. We took all that for granted until it was taken away, now we hope to have it back shortly, and I for one cannot think of any establishment in London where I would rather have that first special moment than The Cow.

If anyone wanted to make a decision on the future license for The Cow, may I suggest that when permitted, that individual and a mate goes down to the Cow on a Thursday evening, has a pint of Timmy Taylors Landlord and shares some food, soak's up the buzz - you will see no disorder, no crime or public nuisance, rather you will see people having a laugh and enjoying the place they are in and the people they are with - tell me that's not what it's all about, what we have all been missing for so long.

Please don't take it away from people.

To whom it may concern.

For decades, I have visited this pub, whether with friends or family. What draws me to this pub, over and over again, is the fantastic and refreshing diversity of the customers and the staff, covering every aspect of the area.

Moreover, the completely welcoming and warm environment, entirely lacking aggression or silly behaviour. It is an institution, just a lovely place to watch people, socialise and enjoy a relaxing drink or some special food.

I have never experienced or witnessed any form of violence or aggression at The Cow. At all. It just isn't the type of institution that attracts that type of behaviour, or people interested in being anti social. The staff are also extraordinarily good at managing the pub in an entirely welcoming, considerate and responsible manner.

I would implore you not to seek to close this pub, it is one of Notting Hill's absolute gems. The most interesting, well run and managed, diverse and special pub in West London. Just a great place and the type of place society needs more of, not less of.

Please do not take it away from my neighbourhood.

Feel free to contact me if you would like to discuss anything.

Dear Sir Madam

I have been attending the Cow since 1996 about the same time I managed my own Premises Licence [REDACTED]. Which I did for 17 years . I personally have a pretty experienced view of evidence of crime , disorder , public nuisance and safety issues In running a licensed premises and in near on weekly visits to the Cow have never borne witness to any of the above . Whilst in any licensed premises where a team is employed there can be occasional moments when one thinks something could have been done better I believe that the way in which a premises responds to any problem to ensure it doesn't happen again is how it should be judged . Licenses are hard to get and easy to lose and an establishment as good as the Cow would be a huge loss of amenity of the area and to London . Fabled food and atmosphere and much skill in its execution. I am hoping there will be suitable sense in dealing with this case .

I am writing in support of Tom Conran and his bar and dining room, The Cow, at 89 Westbourne Park Road W2 5QH.

In 1999 I met my future wife at The Cow and so from that day on, the 16th of October, has been for us "Cow Day". We try to revisit every anniversary to celebrate our marriage and for having the good fortune to have such a great destination to celebrate it in.

We revisit to enjoy the atmosphere, the convivial welcome, the warm, attentive and friendly service. To take a tiny table at the back (we have celebrated in the dining room upstairs but it's the cosy tables at the back that's for us). We enjoy a pint of prawns with a pint Guinness, fish stew and steak... simple pleasures elevated to rare heights.

Tom Conran has created such a fine establishment. This is where the small things are done so well. Every detail has been considered (although you may never realise). It has been built from the ground up on the quality of that effort.

It's heartbreaking that the Cow should be fighting for it's licence. The Cow should be celebrated, if anything The Cow should be protected.

In all my visits I have never witnessed any criminal behaviour, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues.

Thank you for your time.

We have been frequenting The Cow ever since it opened 26 years ago. It has brought a sense of community and bonhomie to the area. It's a great place to visit with friends and family to drink and eat in friendly, convivial surroundings.

It is a wonderful hostelry with good food, good Guinness / drinks, and a lovely, friendly atmosphere. It is a welcoming place with friendly staff and customers.

The idea that The Cow might have to close down because of disorderly conduct or public nuisance is truly heart-breaking. The Cow means the world to me; it is my favourite pub in all of London and I have spent many memorable evenings there.

I've grown up round the corner from The Cow for nearly my whole life and I have watched so many fantastic places nearby have to shut their doors. It is beyond sad to see these once thriving institutions close down and it is ruining the once vibrant area. The Cow is not just a friendly place to get a pint or a crab linguine, it is so much more than that. It is a place with such history, such energy and soul that is so often hard to come by in this city that is being taken over by vacuous chains.

I have been to The Cow probably about 500 times and I have never once experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst I have been there. The idea that this wonderful institution would close its doors for this reason after the year we've all had is nothing short of disastrous and it must not happen.

The thought that The Cow might have to shut its doors is devastating and would truly be catastrophic for the neighborhood. We need The Cow to stay. It is a huge part of, our neighbourhood, our history and our lives.

I look forward to hearing back from you.

Best,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I'm writing re. the license renewal of the Cow pub in Notting hill.

I've been lucky to be a patron of this amazing place since my twenties and now aged 41, it still holds a massive place in my heart and I cherish every moment I'm there.

This pub is a great asset to the community and is genuinely one of the only creative and inclusive establishments in west London.

I've never experienced any social nuisance or aggravation there...to the contrary, it's always a lovely crowd and a great place to make new friends.

Many thanks for your time.

I heard that you have issued a review of The Cow's Premises Licence and I wish to add my personal statement to your proceedings.

I have been a regular visitor to The Cow pub and restaurant since it was first opened 26 years ago.

I now live on with my children and own a contemporary art gallery
I am an active member of my community and especially like to participate in all the aspects which affect the cultural and social issues in our local environment.

The Cow is one of the prime assets in the Westminster area and its border with K&C. It has been a key meeting place for all ages - providing a welcoming and safe place to eat and drink for decades. I heard that you have issued a review of The Cow's Premises Licence and I wish to add my personal statement to your proceedings.

I am a 54 year old business woman who has lived in the Borough of Kensington and Chelsea and on the edge of Westminster Borough my entire life.

I have been a regular visitor to The Cow pub and restaurant since it was first opened 26 years ago.

The Cow is one of the prime assets in the Westminster area and its border with K&C. It has been a key meeting place for all ages - providing a welcoming and safe place to eat and drink for decades.

I have NEVER experienced any trouble there. I have Never seen the police turn up or witnessed any violent incident. I have Never seen or experienced any crime and I believe that the presence of The Cow on that strip of Westbourne Park Road has in fact reduced crime by operating a venue that is well managed, classless and friendly to ALL local people in the extended neighbourhood.

The Cow has trained many excellent chefs and restaurant staff. A significant number of young people, who I know, have worked there and been given an invaluable training. I have heard only praise for the whole management team.

Perhaps you should sample the food, if you have not already. It is delicious and well known for its quality and with a range of fare and prices that can be reached by most budgets.

If you take away the license from The Cow you would remove one of the best loved and outstanding places to visit in Westminster. A safe and welcoming haven for all ages and a centre for wonderful food and very importantly the provider of a high number of jobs.

Covid has been devastating to our restaurants and venues and I would urge you to give your support and not seek to undermine such a famously well loved Public House.

The whole neighbourhood is watching these proceedings and wish to show their support for The Cow.

Please do contact me if you would like to interview me further? I would be happy to give further reassurances.

I was disappointed to learn today that Westminster City Council are reviewing The Cow's Premises Licence.

Amidst increased pub closures across London, The Cow has remained a pillar of our local community, and welcomes people of all creeds, colours and persuasions through its doors. During this pandemic, while open they have provided a safe haven to me and my family, among no doubt many others. This institution is run by good, kind-hearted people, and the area would be far poorer for its absence.

I urge you to take this into consideration and protect this historic establishment accordingly.

The Cow, in Westbourne Gardens, and I frankly can't believe that someone is considering to suspend the licence of this historical Pub, so important among among people of THIS Community, especially after over a year where SOCIALISING with other people became illegal.

This pub and restaurant is dear to our community and it's an asset for so many people who live alone and meet up with friends and family in that place, since decades.

I never, in over 7 years, experienced any issue related to safety and crime, which actually is something related to many other crime hubs nearby which need further and deeper monitoring (Brunel, The area next to Lord Bridge off Royal Oak station).

About the noise level, which is not more concerning than any other local and not local pub, I feel there are other ways to control it and contain it.

But depriving the Notting hill community of such an important, precious and valuable place where to gather, where to have fun, where to enjoy a great meal and drinks, would not be only a huge mistake but also a unjust action toward a community that struggle for an entire year and now it looks very much forward to flourish and be (finally) human again.

It serves delicious fresh sea food and many other delicious dishes. I love everyone who goes everybody without exception is friendly helpful chatty.

It would be a devastating loss to our local community if it were to go. For many it is a perfect place to meet up with friends who all near by. To catch them for a quick drink.

I always feel at home, cosy and safe when sitting in The Cow enjoying a great meal and a drink. I have personally never witnessed any kind of crime or disorder or any safety issues while spending time at The Cow.*

I've celebrated my birthday here, brought my parents for dinner, would take my grandparents if they were still alive and will hopefully also one day take my kids. I've never experienced any safety issues or nuisance or anything criminal happening there. It's just a good restaurant with friendly staff, that adds significantly to the living quality around here. Neighborhoods need places like this in order to create a sense of home and community and not just become soulless and anonymous urban settlements.*

I am writing in reference to your current review of the licence of The Cow Public House, Ref: 21/00981/LIREVP

Before talking about The Cow, I would like to try and put the Great British Pub in context.

Firstly, a Great British Pub stands at the heart of a community. Whether you've just entered in, or you have lived in the community for years. You go to a Great British Pub and you're made to feel welcome as soon as you step through the door.

A Great British Pub is Social. You meet friends there, but you also interact with new people. It's a place full of different personalities, it is diverse. It is a place where you feel comfortable, whether you're considered an A-Lister or on the fringes of society. A place full of character.

A Great British Pub is Comforting. You go to relax after a hard day's work, be it from home, in an office or on the frontline as a key worker. It is a place designed to allow you to de-stress, forget about the challenges of daily life and immerse yourself into a state of contentment, where all that matters is who is getting the next round in!

A Great British Pub is Lively. You go to a pub to have fun. A place where lively music meets lively debate, eruptions of song meet eruptions of laughter.

A Great British Pub is Safe. A place where a lone woman can walk in and feel secure and confident. A place where strangers can meet, interact and enjoy each other's company.

A Great British Pub is Unique. It means something different to each individual. But overall, it is held in the same stature to everyone. An important fixture in each community, that proves as an asset to enriching lives. A Great British Pub is what each and every British person should be able to identify in every town, village or city.

All of the above attributes, are what I think about my local pub... The Cow, Notting Hill.

Eight years ago, on a sunny Sunday Afternoon walking home to Maida Vale we came across The Cow, a pub we had already heard of and decided to go in. On entering, we were welcomed by the most amazing barman we had ever met (and I've been to a fair few pubs!). The barman, noticing that we were slightly nervous of our new surroundings quickly found us a great table and asked us what our favourite drinks were. He recommended that I have a Guinness (which I later found out that The Cow is famous for and I confirm is the best outside of Ireland!) Once we had received our drinks, the barman then spent ten minutes getting to know us, asking where we were from, what we did and our likes and dislikes. We found out that this barman was called Petro and immediately we knew that this pub was going to be our new local.

As a local businessman, I understand the importance of embracing your local community and this is something that The Cow achieves in abundance. Our local community is diverse, and The Cow enjoys such fantastic regulars from all walks of life, some of whom we've lost and some of whom are still very much part of the family. Robbie and Max the dog, Tom, Paddy, Sadler, The Prof, The Lord, Ian 'Wrighty', 'Garth' Crooks, 'Stella' McCartney, 'David' Beckham, I name these people, not to 'name drop', but to indicate the diverse personalities that mix together and not only enjoy but endorse The Cow. Surely, this indicates that The Cow is not a place of crime and disorder, public nuisance or a place that is unsafe, all things that Westminster Council are questioning in their current review of the license. But in fact, The Cow is a pub that holds all of the great attributes that a Great British Pub should have.

Personally, in the eight years that I have been a proud member of The Cow Family, I have very rarely experienced anything that could be deemed to be crime and disorderly, public nuisance or pointing to an unsafe environment. If liveliness, laughter, fun and frien

I felt I needed to communicate the gaping hole that would be left without 'The Cow'. I understand their license is currently under review. I can only stress my own experience but would suggest it cannot be isolated.

Over the years I have gone to Portobello Market most weekends and as a single female or with friends always found a welcoming and friendly environment at The Cow. Faces became familiar and the atmosphere was always convivial. There were many places I wouldn't go and experiences I had over the years which I will not dwell on but at The Cow I always felt reassured that everyone was genuine, not there for a 'scene' or to create an issue.

More recently I returned, now with a daughter in tow! Reassuringly still a great venue and what an asset to the area.

I have never witnessed anything untoward, menacing or violent there and more importantly only have fun memories. A proper hub to any community is invaluable, there is a sense of history here and certainly, for me, only good times to be had (with a proper pint of Guinness and oysters!)

I was astonished to read recently that Westminster Council is reviewing the Cow's license on grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I have been a regular customer of this pub for the past three years and I rate it very highly indeed. It is probably the best pub I know anywhere, not just in London. On each and every occasion I have been there, I have never witnessed or heard of anything that could qualify as a public nuisance, much less a crime. It frankly baffles me how the present situation has come about.

However, rather than speculate as to why this might be, I would like to impress on you what a special place this is and what a disaster it would be, in my opinion, were it to close. This pub is very popular and much loved. As an oyster enthusiast, I was delighted to discover there was a drinking establishment nearby that offered native oysters and seafood. I love it for that reason, and not only that, but because it is exceptionally civilised and welcoming. I've never had a bad experience here, not just in terms of food and drink, but atmosphere and fun too.

As I'm sure you're aware, the Cow is a bona fide local legend. Notting Hill is not short of attractive destinations, but the Cow stands out even among a plethora of high quality pubs and restaurants. It would undoubtedly be a hammer blow to local culture if it were no longer there. Personally speaking I would find it devastating. It is unique, and the people who run it and work there are wonderful.

I therefore ask you in all possible earnestness not to withdraw its licence.

I have the fondest memories of catching-up with friends at the Cow during university holidays and recently it was the first pub I went to when the first Covid-19 lockdown was lifted. I celebrated getting my first job at The Cow when I finished law school and it is the place where I met my boyfriend.*

When I am excited about an idea or something new happening in my life, The Cow is the place I go to nut out the details and devise a plan. When life is tough and feels all a bit much, going to The Cow for a glass of wine makes everything feel better and as though it is doable. To take The Cow away from the neighbourhood would be a disservice as there is nowhere else that provides what The Cow can. It is a home away from home and know this is true for many people.

Putting my own attachments aside, I can confirm I have never experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. I have always felt safe and as though I am surrounded by friends, even if surrounded by people I have never met. The Cow is everything a pub is meant to be, it is a pub for everyone and welcoming to all.

I am concerned to hear that the Cow's license is under review. I moved into the area a year before it opened and have to say it was a rundown and slightly rough environment. When the Cow opened it provided quality food in true Conran style and a professional bar staff serving the best Guinness in the area and the news travelled fast. Within a few months the venue became Nottinghill central and attracted a diverse international clientele as well as transforming the area into an vibrant and interesting place to live. 26 years later it has the same bar staff and is a flourishing business. I have been a grateful customer all this time and have never seen any trouble. Among the regular faces are Stella and Sir Paul McCartney, David Beckham and Tom Cruise among many other well known characters, Ian Wright even gave a shoutout of appreciation to the bar staff at halftime during an England international football match on BBC1 television live. Considering the number of Public houses closing down over the years it would be a tragedy if the Cow met the same fate it provides a vital public service and is a unique institution. I am sure any problems that there are can be sorted out and very much looking forward to resuming my patronage of a very special place in our community

Westminster Licensing have issued a review of the Cow's Premise license on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I would like to place on record the following; that I have lived in many areas of London, from [REDACTED] and now [REDACTED] and I have regularly gone to the Cow since its inception. It is a neighbourly, friendly, warm Pub that looks after its locals and many first comers. I have regularly met people from South Africa, LA, NYC, Iceland who have been told to go to the Cow because of it's perfect food, atmosphere and its the perfect London pub. So for Westminster council to consider closing its door is appalling and frankly typical of the kind of council Westminster is fast becoming.

You are without doubt pulling all the fun and joy out of the borough and getting a reputation for killing of local shops, places that you should try and keep going and more importantly celebrate. To consider taking the licence away is a shocking indictment, in my view of an increasingly poorly run council. In 20 years of dropping by the Cow I have never seen any violence, any raised voices and no disagreement and you should be championing this pub not condoning it. It is considered a gem. One of the really special places in London and you want to close it down.

I would kindly urge you to reconsider this and really do your home work and proper fact checking

I heard about Westminster City Council's review of The Cow's premises licence through the local community.

I am a westbourne park local and former employee of The Cow. There is so much to be said about this wonderful establishment but I will try to keep it brief. The current employees, especially Petro, Luti and Yavor are absolute professionals and living legends. To take away their jobs and community is heart breaking to me, and devastating for them. When I worked at The Cow from 2017-2018, I noticed how much crucial employment and friendship it provided to those new to London. This for me is the most valuable thing about The Cow, especially in this current climate, and the thought of another pub being closed down which has the ability to provide employment for many people is not morally right.

I never experienced any crime or disorder during my time at The Cow, and had only positive experiences. To close this establishment would be devastating to many people in the local community, socially and otherwise.

I urge you to revoke the review and save The Cow!

I would like to offer my support to the owners of the Cow regarding the renewal of there license. I have been a customer of the Cow for well over 20 years and have never been affected by or even seen any anti social behaviour by the patrons of this establishment.

It is an important hub for the local community. A second home for businessmen and builders and creatives and all manners of people who can all congregate together safely.

The Cow has to be one of the only businesses in Westminster for people to visit on their own and actually be made to feel as if they are part of the local community.

All the staff and managers have always been very aware of the local neighbours and encourage patrons to leave the premises quietly.

It has always been well managed and I am sure that the local residents that live in the area who have recently spent millions of pounds on moving to the area may complain about the noise. The people who have grown up in the area feel very differently.

Not only this I would comment that this establishment is one of the safest places in the borough for ladies to frequent. As evidenced by the mix of Patrons.

The Cow is not strictly speaking a traditional pub as the food served here is of some of the highest quality in the borough and should not be compared to other hospitality businesses.

Surely during these incredibly difficult times the council should be supporting these businesses that have suffered like no other industry with Rates reductions not trying to close them.

I write with regard to the objections to the licence renewal for The Cow public house, Westbourne Park Road.

I find it extraordinary that any objections could be levied on the grounds of noise and disorder. I have been visiting The Cow for many years and have always found that the running of it was exemplary. It is far from a cheap establishment and most unlikely to attract the more rowdy element.

To refuse this licence would result in a loss of amenity for the area and remove the influx of money coming from outside the immediate area.

Received: 28 Feb 2021 by
OBJECTION

I am writing with regards to the current license review of The Cow on Westbourne Park Road (reference as above). I am utterly dismayed at the thought of The Cow being negatively impacted in anyway during a Premises Review.

Pubs are a dying breed in London, so many are being turned into apartments, estate agents and even supermarkets. So called transformations which serve only those with a vested interest in profiteering and the gentrification of the local area, whilst vital community hubs are lost forever.

The Cow serves the community, from the friendly local staff whom it employs to the locals who frequent it. I don't drink there very often but will never forget the day I popped in with my toddler and asked if we could quickly use their toilet - of which they obliged, giving my son a bowl of ice cream afterwards. Pubs aren't just places where people go to have a drink. They are places filled with memories - friendships, romances, marriages and even some divorces. They are the places where you met your wife, where you heard that joke for the first time, where you said goodbye to a loved one at a wake. In our community they hold warmth and joy in our hearts and give somewhere for you to belong. So when you review a place like this and simply see it as a pub, a space, a business. I urge you to look behind and beyond. The Cow and many others like it aren't just businesses.

Finally (whilst I take my emotional hat off) I am gutted to see licensing at Westminster reviewing when they should be doing their utmost to support particularly at this very difficult time when the hospitality industry is on its knees!?

I look forward to hearing from you and hope that you will take my words into account when reviewing the premises license of The Cow.

[REDACTED] and would like to confirm that the Cow is under no circumstances a public nuisance. Living in the area I have never experienced crime, disorder, or excessive noise coming from the venue.

Instead, it is part of the fabric of the local community, a wonderful home from home where people from all walks of life are able to meet and enjoy themselves.

Surely in this time, after all that the country has been through institutions such as this should be celebrated and supported?

As a local council tax payer, [REDACTED] I find it absolutely flabbergasting that you would be considering revoking the license at this time. This is a poor use of taxpayers money and will lead to: less tax revenue from the large amounts of tax the business pays (VAT, business rates, alcohol duty etc.); less local employment, ultimately leading to a less vibrant and interesting community, with poorer public services as a result. I assume that is not an outcome Westminster council would like to see.

As a concerned, directly affected local resident, I urge you to reconsider the license review and let the Cow's license remain.

These are hard times and it is very difficult to believe that the Cow Restaurant license is under review now. Local business are under pressure and we have seen a significant reduction in businesses in this part of the Westminster borough and in the adjacent Kensington and Chelsea borough.

The Cow is one of the few remaining high quality pubs and restaurants in the area. It is clean, well maintained, peaceful and popular. I'm sure it's popularity can generate some noise - but communities need places like this. A bit of a hubbub should not be confused with disorder - of which there is very little.

The purpose of this note is to lobby for the Cow to retain its license. It is an essential part of the local community. If the likes of the Cow is closed the area will become a sleeper suburb with no character and no joy. Please do not create a joyless suburb by revoking or diminishing this license.

I am writing to you today, under quite incredible circumstances. I have recently learnt that Westminster Council is reviewing the license of The Cow, saloon bar and dining rooms.

The Cow is my favourite pub in London, it is an integral part of the community, purveyor of quality food and drink, provider of amazing service and facilitator of fond memories.

The Cow is an asset to this community, a sacred place to put stresses of life to one side and surround yourself with positivity and comradeship. The staff are always so welcoming, thoughtful, attentive and engaging. In terms of the patrons, well, you will find all types of people in The Cow, from various backgrounds and upbringings, but once you step foot inside, you are one in the same. Everyone gets along, has a good time, laughs/cry's and jokes with one another. The Cow isn't somewhere to get drunk, it's a venue of positivity and good vibes. It's where you take family, to eat fantastic food, meet people and celebrate.

The Cow adds value to Westminster and the local community, not just by being there but by interacting and supporting it. Whether its Carnival, St Patricks or St Georges Day or even a Jubilee, the Cow will be the place where people flock to celebrate.

Now there is no doubt that you can experience disorder in and around a Pub, I've certainly witnessed it, but I can 1,000,000% tell you that I never have in The Cow. I am not embellishing anything when I say, I feel safer outside The Cow than on my own road.

Please don't take away one of the biggest and best reasons to live in this area. I love The Cow and you should too!!

Dear Sir/Madam

As a local resident of over 30 years standing, my family and I have enjoyed going to The Cow in Westbourne Park Road for most of that time. It is not only a vital local landmark and amenity but also a source of attraction from far beyond this parish. I am not aware of any disturbance to us locals from patrons of the pub and restaurant. Please renew its licence and ensure this precious local gem continues to serve us all in perpetuity.

I am very upset and worried hearing about the Cow's licence coming into question. It is a wonderful pub with wonderful seafood and there is nowhere else you can go that does food like they do, not just in the immediate area but I don't know of any other place that does affordable but perfect seafood for affordable prices in a personal, cosy, traditional atmospheric space, rather than exclusive, expensive seafood restaurants in central London.

I have celebrated many occasions there for this reason, date nights, anniversaries, family visiting from abroad, birthdays etc. and of course St. Patrick's and St David's Days. Carnival. Football World Cups. And it is one of the few dog friendly pubs so I can bring my little doggie too. They even give them water. Always a great atmosphere and friendly spirit, friendly bar staff who know and recognise you as a local, never have I seen any trouble, violence, crime or fighting. I have been going for eleven years.

It is the only real pub left in the area, the only pub with a soul and a community. The others have been closed down, such as the Gold, Power's KPH and Mau Mau, and left is only soulless chain pubs without any atmosphere catering for Saturday tourists, tacky shops, chains and needless endless coffee shops. After this incredibly long and torturous lockdown people's mental health have suffered terribly and for many people the community is all they have, they don't have friends who meet at home but they go to their local pub to see people. The community is our mental health support network/safety net. As a relatively woman The Cow is the only place I'm confident going for a pint on my own in, as I know there will always be people there that I know from the local community so I won't be on my own. I would be absolutely devastated if come the end of lockdown it would not reopen as I would have nowhere to go to meet friends and have food and drink to see people and have a great time! It would be hard

I am writing in regards to the license review for the Cow Pub on Westbourne Park Road (21/00981/LIREVP). This is one of the best pubs in London and taking away their license will create a void in the community.

They have an exceptional restaurant and dining room, and serve some of the best seafood I've had in London.

It feels like a family pub and one of the last few spots in London that hasn't been taken over by a chain. I have been going here for years with my friends and people visiting London and have never experienced any kind of disorder, public nuisance, or safety issues when visiting the cow. It is a true gem.

Please do not take away their license. It would be a huge loss to the city.

Thank you.

Dear Friends at Westminster City Hall Licensing Service,

I refer to your letter of 10 February 2021 regarding Notice of Review of A Premises Licence addressed to the

The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road, London W2 5QH, on the ground and basement levels, whose license is the subject of your review.

so about 15 years. There is another pub across the street, the Westbourne Pub.

Your letter states that my representations should relate to Prevention of Crime and Disorder and Public Nuisance, Protection of Children from Harm and Public Safety. So, in that order:

Crime and Disorder

In the last 15 years the only material Crime and Disorder I have witnessed are as follows:

Every Notting Hill Carnival has involved some Crime and Disorder in our neighbourhood, quite a bit in 2006, but far more effectively controlled in recent years.

For many years there has been a recurring problem of youths living in the estate across the street throwing eggs at people in front of The Cow from a balcony or their bikes and once one threatened to throw acid in my face when I rebuked him. I reported this twice to police but never followed up as it seemed pointless.

Last year, on a night just before or after a lockdown, a young man who according to my acquaintances apparently was then or had been an employee of The Westbourne assaulted and knocked out a man on my doorstep. I only know because when I arrived home the police had blocked my door. Other than that in 15 years as the next door neighbour at ground level of the Cow I have never wit

I have never witnessed Crime or Disorder at The Cow that would have justified me making a complaint.

Public Nuisance

Every pub in London involves some nuisance to its neighbours, balanced by the vitality and energy it brings to the neighbourhood. At the time I moved in to the Cow in 2006 I was a partner in a City law firm working very long hours and knew that choosing to live between two pubs was a risk. In fact, I was not bothered by living to The Cow from then until I retired in 2010. Or since. In general the Cow has not been a nuisance more than any other pub would be in the last 15 years, and mostly less.

I have often held Quaker meetings in my house, in the evening or on a Sunday afternoon. As you perhaps know, we worship together in silence and stillness. We have never been bothered by noise from The Cow.

The only nuisances have been annual Carnival and a few short periods last year when the water mains on both ends of our street burst one after another and the street was closed by Thames Water at the same time that pubs were restricted from serving inside. That led to an empty piece of blocked off road between two pubs in front of my flat which attracted hordes of partying young people I had never seen before, who were buying alcohol at the corner shop down the road as the pubs were too expensive.

Protection of Children

The Cow and its predecessors have been located next to St Stephens School for literally decades. The parents park all over the place to pick up their kids. I have never seen a child drinking at The Cow.

Public Safety

No comment beyond the above - though there is a family of foxes living behind the Westbourne Pub that occasionally rips open garbage bags left out by The Cow and myself.

Finally

The Cow has been a wonderful neighbour and a great pleasure to me over the last 15 years. It is a real London institution and attracts people from all over the world, including the many delightful young people who work there. At a time when pubs have been closing for years and now the entire UK hospitality sector is on its knees due to pandemic, I think it would be a serious moral crime, disorder and public detriment to revoke or suspend the Cow's licence, throw people out of work and deprive the neighbourhood of The Cow's wonderful buzz,

I'm writing as I've learned there is a premises license review pending for The Cow, in Notting Hill. I couldn't help but write this letter, to express how devastating the notion of this pub closing is for the locals, devoted regulars, and community members alike.

When I first arrived in London, a friend I hadn't seen in a few years invited me to meet him for a drink. He said, "do you want to meet me at the best pub in the world?" A compelling offer. I showed up, not sure what to expect (half expecting that he was teasing me with the description). With those first steps through the door, on that first evening in the Cow, my life changed. Though it was in a small, imperceptible way in that exact moment, the shift became very tangible over the last few years; it was my arrival as a Londoner, my first sense of belonging in this city.

The Cow is where I go when I feel happy, when I feel stressed, or when I need to feel like I'm amongst family. As an expat, that carries no small significance. There is no pub I've frequented in London that accomplishes the same. The staff and regulars alike are friendly and welcoming, the music is invigorating, the food amazing, and the atmosphere is always upbeat. I've never witnessed bad behaviour, and nothing feels as close to the safety of home.

I lost my father to Covid a few months ago, and when Petro, the extraordinary barman at the Cow, learned about his death, he met me with more kindness and empathy than I can possibly express. That's an unusual gift to find at your local pub - and just one example of the spirit of the Cow.

I can confidently say that the closure of this pub would be one of the worst losses I could think of, as someone who has personally endured great loss during this pandemic year. It would be a tragedy in its own form, and one that I don't think Notting Hill would recover from.

Many thanks,

As someone who doesn't drink alcohol, I have always felt welcomed and been able to enjoy socialising with others without feeling that I needed to be drinking to enjoy the atmosphere.*

The Cow is a place of great cheer and happiness serving wonderful food: it is a haven full of life giving and life affirming customers and staff. At a time like this, the Covid era, we all desperately need places of sanctuary like The Cow.*

That its licence might be in any way in question, I find troubling, and would respectfully urge you do your utmost in order to allow this wonderful public house, this bastion of the local community, to flourish in peace as it always has. I would like to stress that in the 20 or so years that I have been a customer at The Cow, I have never, on any occasion, experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues.

This email represents the views of my parents-[REDACTED] and I. [REDACTED], never in that 52 year period has the Cow Pub been anything but an asset to the road and community.

Context

As you know, pubs are a British institution much like the government, schools, places of worship and have always been located in thriving residential communities.

The Cow is an important and additive local institution.

Community

It is a true community hub and promotes many of the best aspects of an integrated open society, its success in welcoming all and providing a place to socialise has perhaps been cause for the review in question. But like other institutions such as schools, sports events, the NHS or indeed the Notting Hill Carnival, the fact that like them the Cow is popular is not a reason to curtail its activities.

The Area

By and large we have chosen to live in the area, a residential area with a rich tapestry of pubs, bars, restaurants and even clubs such as the Globe. Residents such as myself stay in the area for this bustle, energy and community spirit. There are plenty of boring areas devoid of fantastic and increasingly rare institutions like the Cow. Westbourne Park Road has never been such a place, it has energy and vibrancy. This has significant public and economic benefits for the area. A fantastic local pub like the Cow embodies and enhances the area. If anything, it's success and the fact it is busy means they should be able to extend their premises. Preserve the character of the area by allowing the Cow and other hospitality businesses to operate as they have. I ask for your assurance that The Cow will be able to remain a pillar of our community in the manner it has done so well and continue in its service of residents and visitors alike.

Thank you for taking the time to engage with residents on this important issue.

It is deeply concerning to hear that such a review is being contemplated. Over the years I have witnessed the conversion of a number of pubs / restaurants to expensive residential dwellings. Now, that is a loss for the public and for our neighbourhood! Please don't allow it to continue.

It has been a warm, wonderful, cosy, delightful, fun, SAFE and friendly refuge ever since. I cannot recommend this pub highly enough. Be it the incredible food, the roaring fire cheering us all up in Winter or the warm, personal welcome we all receive when we walk in.*

*I have never seen any evidence of violence, social disturbance or nuisance during my 20 years of being a patron here. To whom it may concern,

I'm writing in support of The Cow Pub.

I've lived in the area my whole life, and its places like The Cow that make the neighbourhood what it is. The neighbourhood has changed a lot over the years, and the few places remaining, such as The Cow, are a cornerstone of the community here.

I've only ever had a great time at The Cow. In all the years I've been going I've never witnessed anything untoward happen there. It's somewhere that locals and visitors across all generations, old and new to the neighbourhood, come to enjoy themselves as well as the great food and atmosphere.

Places like The Cow are the heart of our rapidly atrophying community establishments, and without them we're going to be left with nothing but Pret and Starbucks.

It has come to my attention that you are seeking to review the premise license of The Cow on Westbourne Park Road.

This review is apparently sought on the basis of public nuisance and safety.

I am strong in favor of the attention the council are now paying towards this matter. The Cow all through last year when they were allowed to open, shown absolutely no regard for public safety. Patrons would often be sprawled out on the road, beer glass in hand with no regard for traffic, social distancing and pedestrians using the footpath to which they are perfectly entitled to do so without hindrance of pub goers

Furthermore, visitors often park directly outside causing issues for passing motorists as they attempt to pass through the width restriction gate. Located on a fairly sharp corner, stationary cars appear suddenly prompting a sudden veer into the middle of the road to avoid. Drink driving should be discouraged. I would be in strong favor of double yellow lines outside the premises.

Additionally, living within close proximity of the establishment, the premises have not sought our opinion on the running of the premises but rather sent out a message on Facebook for support from their customers. They've failed to engage with their local community until it puts their deep pockets in jeopardy.

Lastly, I often hear the loud voices of revelers exiting the venue, down the road past my flat, inhibited and urinating into my basement. I don't think they take antisocial noise seriously.

I am writing as a concerned local resident in Westminster regarding the review of The Cow's licence. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] I have been a regular at the pub over a number of years along with numerous of my friends both in the fantastic restaurant upstairs and the pub downstairs.

The Cow has always been a friendly pub where both the patrons and staff have always been amazing. It is clear how valued The Cow is to locals by the number of regulars who swear by the pub and it has become an institution in the area. What is more, it is clearly evident that they treat their patrons well and value them. You only have to look at the mural that they have painted inside the pub with faces of their local regulars.

I personally would be devastated if the licence was revoked and I couldn't even count the number of my friends and colleagues who would feel the same. I have never seen any problems at the pub and am shocked to hear the reasons for the review. As I have said, the staff are extremely welcoming and I have only experienced a relaxed and jovial atmosphere.

With everything going on with the pandemic, where the staff and owners of The Cow have had to deal with uncertainty and local residents have not had the opportunity to frequent and interact with their friends, this is the last thing that is needed. I hope that the review was a lack of judgement and that The Cow will remain an institution in the area for years to come.

I am more than happy to make any further representations that are required but hopefully it will not be needed!

The staff at The Cow are always friendly and approachable. It's great to be able to support a pub that isn't a large chain and is independent (not many left!)

I have never seen or witnessed fights, arguments, overcrowding, uncleanliness or drug taking at The Cow. Things that have stopped me going to other pubs in the area.

I hope Westminster Council acknowledge the importance in preserving a place like The Cow. A place I'm excited to show off to people as a great representation of the area: Inclusive, honest and fun.

I would like to voice my concerns about the review of The Cow's Premises Licence. I am close resident living in Holland Park for over 40 years and I have been going to the pub for a long time... it has been a big part of social evenings, with intimate dinners with my husband enjoying a delicious steak and chicken kiev in the back, to larger social tables of close friends upstairs, to a pint with friends on the benches outside. We have had many wonderful conversations and evening at the Cow, which has become synonymous with "community hang out". I cannot find the words to say that the review is unfounded and for my husband and I, losing the Cow would be a big loss.

Please reconsider any action - I have never seen any public disorder or crime in any of my evenings.

I am concerned to hear that The Cow's premises licence is under review. The Cow is a crucial and historic feature of Westbourne Park, and the area would be severely compromised by a revision of its licence. I am a property owner on Westbourne Park Villas and feel that the Cow is a major asset to the local community in a time when many pubs and restaurants are facing closure and local amenities are slowly being removed.

I have never experienced a public nuisance, crime or disorder while frequenting The Cow. Indeed, having the Cow and the Westbourne pub at the junction with Westbourne Park Road has always made me feel safer when walking home in the evening (in case I need to seek help urgently). The area can feel quiet once the shops are shut, and a former flatmate was robbed at knife point on Westbourne Park Road after hours, and the perpetrator ran across the railway line. From my perspective the pub is a deterrent, rather than compounder, of disorderly behaviour in the area.

I am sad to hear that you seem to have some issues with The Cow, Westbourne Grove. The pub is a great favourite of mine because of the food, friendly atmosphere and Guinness. The prices are fair and as far as I can see, this is one of the best pub businesses in the area. I've been visiting since it opened and always thought The Cow would be there for me when I want to commune quietly with a pint, or meet up with friends. Inside the bar can be very busy but outside I've only ever experienced bar staff keeping an eye on their customers, and asking them to pipe down if necessary and not to hog all the pavement area. I understand that crowding outside the pub may sometimes have caused some people some annoyance and therefore suggest that as a compromise the pub undertakes to make sure that staff are available to check outside every ten minutes on the predictable busy nights and sunny days. Perhaps the pub should consider also having a camera link between bar and pavement to, so that it is easy to spot any silliness?

In terms of the Council's economic policies, it would seem crazy to threaten the continuation of a business which employs people, feeds people, is a part of the Notting Hill restaurant scene and very well liked when the continuation of pubs plural is under threat after Covid. Please don't underestimate The Cow as a local resource and resource for locals!

*The Cow is an iconic institution that my friends and family have been congregating at for over a decade now. The staff are incredibly loyal and have been serving the place for as long as I can remember - that really says something for the way it is run and managed. Whilst at the cow I have never experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or any safety issues as it is a very well ironed ship attracting Notting Hills eclectic eccentric, creative clientele which make it stand out amongst other places in the area. In my eyes and all my peers who enjoy the Cow very much it would be a great shame for the neighbourhood if the cow was not granted a new premises license as we are all very fond of it and want it to stay. Notting Hill is getting more and more sterilised and looking like any other high street area with fewer and fewer independent shops, bars, pubs and restaurants.

The area still manages to attract tourists which is good for the local economy but for how long? Why go to Notting hill if you are going to drink in a Weatherspoon pub or eat in a Nandos.

The Cow is one of the last remaining establishments in Notting Hill that has some character and individuality and is extremely popular with tourists and locals alike.

It is a champion of British produce and is widely regarded as one of the top eateries and pubs in the UK.

I left London a few years ago having living in Notting Hill for 10 years and the ONE thing I miss about London is The Cow.

As a 30 year old woman and local resident, I have been a regular at The Cow for the past 5 years and not ever have I questioned my safety nor have I witnessed or experienced any crime or public nuisance.

The Cow is a precious hub in our Notting Hill community, a melting pot of wonderful people from all walks of life who value connection, conversation, enjoyment of watching sports in a small collective, laughter and music from a juke box.

The Cow is a safe place where the staff know your name, or that your mother has been ill, they remind you there is a new pop-up shop round the corner to stand behind a local business owner, they bring a community of people together, a family; and they do this all whilst serving you the best food in London.

I am yet to find a Premises that rivals, or even comes close, to attracting such a diverse community across age, gender, ethnicity and socioeconomic backgrounds. The collision of which are the foundation for safe, respectful, inclusive and thriving communities.

We have all spent the last 12 months isolated, the knock on effect of removing a cultured community haven like this is bleak and frankly suggests you are misinformed about your constituents, rate and tax payers, visitors alike.

I note the council has ambitious plans in the borough to "reinforce its status as a world class, global exemplar and cultural, leisure and economic powerhouse". Perhaps standing behind this local business, The Cow, will reinforce that position and stop residents fleeing in the hoards to the countryside having lost the last good pub in London!

We once held a staff Christmas lunch in their small upstairs private room about 10 years ago and we had a brilliant time. The food is delicious and the staff always friendly. It is, without question, a destination. To sit at the back of the main bar and eat their fish stew with half a pint of prawns and a glass of wine is an absolute treat!*

Dear Westminster Licensing Members

I am absolutely shocked to learn of the plight of this wonderful public house.

Whilst I live in Regents Park and work in Marylebone it was The Cow that brought me to Notting Hill some 15 years ago. Since being immediately attracted to the charm and the community spirit in the pub I immediately became attached to the area in general. This is a place of subtle class which is famous for incredible food, gastronomic Guinness and great people. It's very rare in these days to come across a business that genuinely cares about bringing local people together with accommodating visitors from across the globe. I strongly support this business both as a customer and the owner of quite a few residential buildings in the immediate area.

At the heart of this pub are the people who run it and it's loyal and longstanding customer base and I am struggling to think of better in London. Whilst other areas create fractious groups The Cow and Notting Hill do the opposite. In all the years I have been visiting the pub I have been blessed to meet a variety of interesting, mostly creative and wonderful people. I have never heard an argument, I have never seen aggression as it is just not the energy of this business, if it were I would not be going there as I am a quiet 55 year old man. I implore the licence department or the local authority to do whatever they do need to do to keep this wonderful business and quasi community centre open to those who love it and to others who are always welcome. It would be a great loss if things were to change at The Cow and I sincerely hope that the council or the licensing department will not have to spoil things for the vast majority.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to object in the strongest terms to The Cow Saloon Bar & Dining Room's license being reviewed (21/00981/LIREVP). As a local resident, I also want to offer my view that they are a vital asset to the community.

I was shocked to hear about this license review. The timing of such a review, after a year when all publicans' livelihoods have been most viciously affected by the COVID 19 pandemic, seems wantonly cruel. I would have thought that Westminster Council would be doing more to support pubs & their landlords, an integral part of our national and local heritage, at a time when 2 pubs are closing every 24hrs.

The Cow has been a stalwart of the community since its inception. I cannot think of an institution that has brought more life and joy to this area. Being half Irish, I feel it is a particularly important part of the fabric of my community. Pubs, historically are part of communities, they cannot be silenced and put out on the fringes. That is not how our towns, and cities have evolved. Pubs were always built at the heart of residential communities. The Cow is charmingly managed and respectful, so I cannot imagine what grounds there are for this review?

The Cow has also been part of putting this area on the map. It is countlessly ranked among the "top 10 pubs" in London and draws in tourists and visitors from a far. It was the first pub on its street, and supports all the pubs, restaurants that bring prosperity to that locality. And without the Cow, I am sure they would not exist.

As someone brought up in the area Tom Conran's restaurants and bars were part of the transformation of this neighborhood, from one that felt at times a bit unsafe to a vibrant, creative and wealth producing area. I am sure that he has been rewarded for this from Westminster Council by increased rents and these sorts of reviews. I would encourage Westminster Council to take more of a long-term view, or a retrospective view, and support the specific individuals who have brought much prosperity to the area that the council, I'm sure, has benefited from.

I live round the corner from The Cow pub and am horrified by the idea it might lose its licence. It is a lovely place and part of the fabric of the area. As more and more places suffer from the long pandemic closure and may not be able to return, long standing and individual (ie non chain) places are to be treasured not attacked.

Along with the pub opposite (the Westbourne) it does get busy on summer evenings but that is not a reason to close it down. That area of shops has been suffering from impact of high rents and is slowly but surely becoming 'dark' so please don't add to it with The Cow.

Unlike The Westbourne, The Cow attracts locals and is an important meeting place. I've never had any problems either when frequenting it or passing by which I do on a regular basis on foot and by car. I'm not sure what the review is referring to in terms of crime and disorder as neither of these issues have come to my attention with reference to The Cow so why are you focusing on this venue in particular? I'm sure a few of its neighbours would prefer not to have a popular pub next door to them but I'm guessing the pub predates them moving there rather than the other way round.

If Westminster Council is aiming to strip out all the character and local feel of this area, this would be another great way to do it. After the virtual demolition of Whiteleys and further plans for the other side of that street, we do feel that WCC has no interest in preserving what makes this area special and treasured by locals. Westbourne Grove is losing more and more shops due to rent levels. We need to preserve the area and all that is the best of it - including The Cow - and let it thrive not demolish, develop and shut down. WCC needs to support businesses and amenities for residents.

So I would strongly object to any attack on The Cow's licence and any attempts to close it down.

Dear Sirs

We are local residents [REDACTED] [REDACTED] and are alarmed to hear that the Cow's licence is under review.

The Cow is a much loved west London institution, and for us an essential local pub and restaurant. It is an invaluable part of the local life for residents of this part of W2, offering refreshment, nourishment and conviviality, as well as adding colour and footfall to the commercial neighbourhood hub that is establishing itself in that section of Westbourne Park Road.

We cannot even begin to comprehend what grounds of either nuisance, public safety or crime could possibly apply to the Cow. It is lively and well-frequented, as are all the establishments in that corner of Westbourne Park Road and I have never felt unsafe in its vicinity or that it posed any level of nuisance to the neighbourhood. As London reopens, we need places to meet, to socialise, to recover and all those businesses need each other in order to thrive.

Revoking the Cow's licence would be an unjustifiable and unwarranted act of overreach on the part of Westminster and as a council tax payer and local resident I urge you not to take that action.

Best wishes

To whom it may concern,

I was shocked and saddened to learn that Westminster City Council have taken it upon themselves to issue a review of The Cow's Premises Licence.

Whilst to the ill-informed The Cow might be thought of as just another pub, for those who have ever stepped through its doors it is an institution of increasing scarcity - one where ego is left at the door and people from all walks of life are invited to come together and harmonise in a societal melting pot with no agenda or bias.

At a time when covid-19 forces people to be kept apart, where social distancing is enshrined in law, I think we can all agree that it is the establishments that will bring people back together that are needed the most right now. The Cow will do exactly this.

In addition to being a venue for socialising, I must pay homage to the many other strings that The Cow has to its bow.

It offers food from the highest order yet not in a stuffy restaurant setting. It offers a selection of drinks from a bar that shows variety and quality but is not pretentious. It has a seafood menu that could step into the ring, go 'glove to glove' with any fish monger from the Isles of Orkney and still probably come out on top.

The Cow exists in the rarefied atmosphere of being something so unique it is endangered. After all, how many pubs do we see these days offering merely another pint of Carling, Burger and Chips for a tenner...

It begs the question as to whether an asset like The Cow doth even exist elsewhere in London at all, let alone in the City of Westminster? I am not sure it does...

I therefore have no hesitation in saying that it would be a travesty of the highest order if the shackles of the licensing system were to rip this institution out of the heart of West London.

I do not know the grounds on which the Premises Licence has come under review, but I feel it important to add that in all of my many visits to The Cow not once have I ever experienced any crime, any disorder, any public nuisance or any safety issues. To the contrary, I find The Cow takes extensive measures to ensure the safety and comfort of its patrons and also takes consideration for its neighbourhood environment.

I am sure the committee will come to the right conclusion.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Licensing Department of Westminster,

I understand The Cow of Westbourne Park Road, London has a License Review with you and I would like to make a few points of reference to be considered.

1. I had been a visitor to The Cow in the mid 90's and then even more frequent after moving into the local area in 1999.
2. I have always experienced a local, family atmosphere and I never experienced any type of criminal activity inside the premises or outside.
3. Patrons are respectful that the local surrounding area is a residential neighbourhood.
4. I have walked or driven past The Cow on my way home and have always enjoyed seeing the patrons on the outdoor seating or inside in happy and jovial moods.
5. The Cow is part of the character of Notting Hill and the locals have come to treasure it. It not only boasts a tourist patronage but also has many celebrities as customers.
It has been very difficult in the lockdown periods where you can not convene to meet old friends and make new ones in The Cow.
6. I am very proud to put my name amongst those who are regulars to The Cow and would love to see the owners, staff and patrons enjoy the safe and family environment that has been built up over the past 26 years.

Please allow The Cow to continue to trade in the Manner it has always done.

Thanking you,
Respectfully yours,

As a long-time local resident and customer, I write to offer my support for the Cow Saloon Bar & Dining rooms as an outstanding institution of the locale.

During a time when the hospitality sector has been taking the brunt of the pandemic it is vital that a charismatic entity such as the Cow continues to be a unique beacon of excellence and an asset to the area; the Cow is also a popular tourist destination noted in most guides to the area and a favourite hostelry to local residents - it is 'our local'.

I have never heard any negative feedback with regard to this establishment in relation to crime or safety, therefore I am very surprised that Westminster City Council is proposing a review of The Cow's Premises Licence - it would be egregious if it were to be revoked on account of its enviable popularity.

To whom it may concern,

My name is [REDACTED] and I'm writing to confirm my support for the Cow.

Why do you believe The Cow is an asset?

I'm a resident in Notting Hill, [REDACTED]. To me, the Cow provides a very unique experience compared to other pubs in London. The atmosphere is always great, you are always greeted by friendly staff who have a real passion for wanting to help customers. Over the previous 6 years that I've lived in Notting Hill, I have never experienced any untoward activity at the Cow. They've always been extremely professional in how they manage the pub. With Covid-19 coming to an end, Notting Hill and London need places like the Cow to reconnect and get back to how life used to be. If the Cow were to lose it's license it would be losing a beacon of the Notting Hill community and that, in today's current world of isolation, would be an absolute travesty.

What does The Cow mean to you?

As previously mentioned, in todays world, with technology creating further isolation and real-world interaction, there needs to be places where you can go to meet like-minded and like-mannered people to converse and speak with. For me, the Cow is a place where I can go either on my own, or with friends, to have a nice, relaxed evening experience. If I'm ever at a loose end, the Cow is where I will go, without a doubt. The food is incredible, there aren't many places in London where you can get Oysters and Guinness in a deal. And that is why the pub is so unique, for its quirky offerings and old-school seating areas. It has far more character than any other pub I've been to in London and that's why it draws me back there every time. Since introducing my Mum there last year, we go there every time when she comes to London as she loves it so much. So, it's now become a place where I can reconnect with my family.

What are all the great things about The Cow does Westminster Council need to hear from you?

That it's a unique place which is unrivalled in the London pub scene. London is losing its character and its places like the Cow which keep London's night life going. First it's noise complaints with nightclubs, now its pubs. What's next? Weekend Markets? Evening sports events? Like I said before, with Covid-19 hopefully coming to an end, residents of Notting Hill will need the Cow to reconnect and get back to how life used to be like. Taking these places away doesn't help anyone.

Importantly, can you confirm that you have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow?

Never, there hasn't been a single occasion where I have experienced Crime or public nuisance. I haven't experienced anything negative in the 6 years of going to the Cow.

Yours sincerely,

On the contrary, The Cow has always felt like a welcoming, SAFE space.

Safe enough to be the chosen location for many office lunches and dinners.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to show my undivided support in the institution that is The Cow.

In all honesty, I am totally surprised that the Westminster City Council has issued a review of their license.

The Cow is a little cauldron of British culture that I think is simply unrivalled in West London. Whilst being possibly the coolest pub around, the staff are incredibly welcoming and inclusive to all patrons. It is constantly on my shortlist of places to go, that I send to foreign friends visiting London.

I hold fairly unique data regarding the popularity of pubs. I am an artist who draws pubs and sells prints of them. And I can tell you that The Cow is the second most popular of all the prints that I have sold. That tells you that it is more than just a pub. It is so dear to people's hearts that they want a picture of it hanging at home!

I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

All the very best,

Long Live the Cow.

Dear Sir / Madam,

I have been a resident of Bayswater all of my life and currently live within two minutes walk of The Cow.

It is not only a local treasure but also a national institution and global icon.

It is a unique pub which sums up the best in London, with customers from a range of different cultures, wealth and backgrounds all blending in together in a warm and happy environment.

I have met people across the globe who when I have told them where I live say they have been to The Cow.

I have read in depth the current submissions on the Westminster website and in particular the police reports.

While I cannot condone the behaviour that led to the penalty notice, and while I have also seen the crowds outside the pub sometimes causing traffic problems, I think the close the venue down would be a massive and outrageous over-reaction.

And that is before we consider the impact of covid on the hospitality industry.

Surely the only course of action is for the Council to ensure that The Cow ensures that there are no further shortcomings and tackles the problems which you have identified.

Finally, on the noise and local residents, let's be honest, The Cow has now been there longer than most of the people who live nearby, if you move in near a pub you know what comes with the territory. Equally, if you have owned a property in the neighbourhood since before the pub opened you would have seen such an appreciation in value that selling up would be a shrewd financial move if you found the The Cow such an irritation.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am so concerned that the Cow has come under scrutiny for public nuisance and crime etc. I have lived in this area for nearly 25yrs and have never experienced any such thing.

I do believe that people who have moved into this area of late, have done so because of the things that are quintessential to Portobello; such as the Market, the Antiques stores, the Independent shops, the restaurants and the bars.. then they realise that there is an element of noise and disruption that comes with these things and so become hellbent on closing them down.

Please do not take the opinions of people who have only just moved into the area and prefer Starbucks, Nero's and Juice bars, to the locals who have grown up with pubs like the Cow!

We cherish the few real pubs left, the ones that have not been turned into Tescos, residential pads or offices. Please don't let another one, especially this one, close!

Kindest regards,

The Cow is the heart and soul of the community. By closing it, you are denying many thousands of people a place that they call home. This includes their amazing staff.

I have been going to The Cow for over 20 years and have never experienced any issues. And I can wholeheartedly say that Cow is a hub that brings everyone together harmoniously.

I never felt threatened or unsafe going to The Cow, on the opposite side, it provides a sense of community where people help each other.

This is a shocking act, coming from the same system which is highly promoting outdoor social gatherings.

With this, I truly hope that you will reconsider and allow "The Cow" to keep its doors open.

Dear Sirs

We are regulars at the Cow and visit every time we are in London. In our opinion it is the most welcoming, egalitarian and authentic pub in Notting Hill.

Special watering holes like The Cow are so important as they are part of the very essence and identity of this vibrant neighbourhood.

Without places as warm and welcoming like the Cow, then neighbourhoods often become homogenous and bland as so many other areas on Notting Hill have become during the past 25 years or so

Every time we have visited there has never been a sense of unrest, public nuisance or underlying sense of feeling unsafe.

This is a jewel and should most definitely STAY just as it perfectly is! We Love it!

Dear Sir/Madam representing Westminster City Council,

Having lived in my mother's pub in Notting Hill between the ages of 5-7 - what is now [REDACTED] - and for much of my life since, I can safely say that what Notting Hill is built on are local pubs, places where the local community and their friends can meet and bond with one another. The neighbourhood is changing every year with new restaurants, bars and shops and in many cases, not for the better.

Do you believe the neighbourhood should lose its authentic feeling, a feeling of community and belonging? What I know from having lived in Notting Hill for much of my life is that places like The Cow keep the community together, places like The Cow give a grounding to those who have lived in the area for many years, also embracing those who have recently moved close by.

I have spent many occasions at The Cow, many peaceful, many fun and many bonding evenings at this pub. I have never, in 20 years of being at the pub, seen any violence, harm, theft, or altercations.

I am filled with sadness that my old neighbourhood is changing, brought on by the greed of many landlords and the misguidance of a council who clearly misunderstands community. I am sure if you asked the team who are reviewing The Cow about their own community, they would not be able to describe one that is as warm and open as those who have continued to look after their patrons as those at The Cow have over the past 26 years.

I urge you to fully investigate why this review has arisen and who exactly is behind the decision. I am sure the reasons would be eye-opening and questionable.

Hi,

I've just heard that Westminster Council is considering revoking the Cow's license.

In short, I find this news absolutely appalling.

Even before Covid-19 there has been an ever-shrinking number of venues for people to meet, to laugh, and to mingle. Covid-19 has been an absolute disaster for the pub / restaurant trade AND many people are missing social interactions; in fact, the newspapers are full of stories on the mental health impact of Covid-19.

How this potential revoking of license for one of the best established and most loved local pubs against the background of the above can even be considered is beyond me.

And as a council tax payer in Westminster for > 20 years, I'm appalled at such a frivolous waste of tax payers' money.

The Cow - Westbourne Park Road

I would like to support the The Cow on Westbourne Park Road and it's licence renewal. It is a local institution and as locals we would be very sad to see it lose its licence.

We have never experienced any issues with disturbances or similar from its customers who are mostly locals so respect the neighbours & neighbourhood. The stretch of road that it is on has already lost quite a few restaurants and eateries over the past couple of years and they still remain empty. Should the Cow lose its licence and therefore close it would be to the detriment of the local community and in turn probably remain empty like the other premises near it leaving a parade of empty and fast decaying venues which do nothing for the area but bring it down.

Yours faithfully

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to you in response to the news that the licence for The Cow public house is under review on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I find it extraordinary and sad that a long-standing local institution is under such threat, if indeed it is so. For over a quarter of a century I have been a regular patron of the establishment. They have continually brought great quality food, beer and bonhomie to the area, transforming the whole corner of Westminster, encouraging other shops, restaurants and services. They employ around thirty people and have maintained very high quality in everything that they do.

I have never seen any evidence of public nuisance, public disorder or crime in or outside The Cow and I would strongly disagree with charges or accusations that have led to this review. I am a local, living [REDACTED] [REDACTED] where I have been for 33 years, and I have witnessed local pubs and cafes being closed down, priced out or simply giving up, thus depriving our area of a sense of locale.

To whom it may concern,

I recently heard of the news that Westminster City Council were reviewing The Cows licence on the ground of prevention of public nuisance, safety and prevention of crime and disorder and I wanted to send you a note at my disapproval of such a review.

My company have been working with Mr Conran at the Cow for over 20 years. Both [REDACTED] and The Cow are independent family run business that look out for the local community and Mr Conran has worked tirelessly over the years to create a space for both local and individuals to travel to, enjoying excellent food, a drink and a sense of community which, in my eyes is the definition of a Public House. He has had the same team work with him for all the years we have worked with him, which is nothing short of outstanding and a testament to how the business is ran. I look after over 200 pubs in the greater London area and see how high the staff turnover is in the hospitality industry. I believe putting the Cows licence under threat is not only effecting Mr Conran, but his loyal team, business like mine that have worked with him for so long and the community he has built around the pub.

To even suggest that the Cow is a place of crime, disorder and public nuisance could not be further from the truth. The Cow is an independent public house that welcomes the community from all walks of life and I honestly feel Westminster council should be looking at Mr Conran's business a source of inspiration. I would suggest putting you efforts into finding ways to encourage independent business who give back to the community rather than this licence review or trying to sell off any piece of space under your control to multinational cooperation's with questionable morals.

re: The Cow Saloon Bar and Dining Rooms Licence: 21/00981/LIREVP

I am writing to express my support for the extension of The Cow's Premises' License. I live nearby and my family and neighbours are great fans of this wonderful establishment.

Whenever we go for a quick lunch or dinner upstairs or down, the place is always full of local residents. The quality of the food and drink is superb. It was my late husband's favourite place for seafood.

It is hospitable to families at lunchtime, offers more sophisticated eating upstairs and we have never had a poor meal or bad service. We have never witnessed any problem with noise or disorder when there. I have never witnessed any bad behaviour or felt that our safety was threatened in any way coming or going. It is very different from other pubs in the area where great gatherings spill into the street and make lots of noise. The Cow is a lovely, neighbourhood pub whose loss would be greatly felt by me, my family and loads of friends and neighbours.

The Cow is exactly the kind of high quality, unpretentious restaurant/pub that we need in London.

Please extend the Premises Licence and keep a very good, local business thriving. Given the pandemic, we need to support all our local businesses, not put them out of work.

With kind regards,

Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing in relation to your forthcoming licensing review: 21/00981/LIREVP

The Cow is a longstanding neighbourhood institution - if not a London institution. I have lived in the area for 30 years and have been going to the Cow for most of these. It is a meeting place, a delicious restaurant, somewhere that encapsulates the character of the local area, a cultural melting pot.

I understand that the Cow's license may be under review. If it were to lose its license I believe it would be a very great loss to the local community. It would be the end of an era and a retrograde step in terms of diversity of local hospitality options. The site is clearly ideal for a pub/restaurant. The Cow is one of the few institutions in the area that has survived steady gentrification and increasing monoculture of mass-market, chain bars and restaurants.

I have never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues during the whole time of The Cow. I currently live about 100 yards from it. There is far more disturbance and environmental impact from traffic, vans, taxis and delivery vehicles parking in and transiting through the local area, none of which have anything to do with the Cow.

I very much hope you will continue to offer The Cow its well deserved License to operate. It would be great mistake not to do so.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am very concerned to hear of there being a license review for The Cow.

The Cow is an asset to Notting Hill in so many ways. It attracts visitors from around the world due it being named in numerous travel and hospitality guides as one of the great pubs. It did not just arrive as a great pub - it has been carefully and lovingly nurtured over a long period of time by its conscientious and enthusiastic owner, Tom Conran.

To me, The Cow is a second home. It is all I have dreamt about returning to since lockdown began. It is a safe place, warm and welcoming, with regulars, locals, friends, familiar faces, new, interesting people, young, old, rich, poor and the occasional celebrity mingling, looked after and made to feel loved by senior staff who have been there for as long as I have been going there. It is one of those pubs where regulars hold their seats at the bar, a family pub, a happy place.

Over recent years, pubs have been homogenised with character stripped away from them, whereas the owner of The Cow continues to add more detail and character as the years go on, investing time and money into elements like the painting of its favoured patrons, the original jukebox playing hand-picked 45s by the owner, the signage, (in its signage it is keeping a dying trade alive, employing a skilled signwriter to produce beautiful lettering inside and out). Whilst having a famously good kitchen, The Cow is also a spot to come to prior to visiting the other myriad restaurants in the area, driving trade.

I have never felt unsafe at The Cow in 20 years. Its staff are always on high alert due to it being opposite flats - patrons are politely asked to keep their voices down and to not spill out onto the street. You can see from the dedication of the staff and management that protecting their name in the community is of utmost importance.

Without The Cow there will be no reason to come to Notting Hill for many people, no reason to visit Westbourne

To whom it may concern,

This is to implore you to consider my opinions regarding the threat to the licence at The Cow, in Westbourne Park Road, W2.

I am a 51 year old father of three, the CEO of an international marketing agency and consider myself as having been a responsible member of the W2 community for more than twenty years.

The Cow is without any doubt one of the cornerstones of our local culture. Since I can remember it has welcomed a diverse community full of wonderful, eclectic, respectful and appreciative customers with open arms. In two decades I have never viewed a fight, seen a smashed bottle, heard a loud argument, viewed a dispute, or experienced anything other than laughter and goodwill to all guests.

The Cow has featured in films, television, documentaries and a wide range of magazines and newspapers for the very reason that it is a glorious environment of good food, excellent service in a stunningly traditional and beautifully curated environment. It has the high accolade of four and a half stars on OpenTable, TripAdvisor and many more review sites, thousands of followers on Instagram and Twitter, and is a beacon for tourists not just visiting Notting Hill and London, but for England itself by definition of the international reviews and comments.

This is not a grimy, poorly managed tourist trap selling over priced warm beer and terrible food to unsuspecting travellers. This is a primary destination for visitors from all corners of the neighbourhood and all corners of the earth! This is Guinness and oysters and fresh shellfish, prepared by experienced chefs and served by members of the local community, to the local community.

This is where we have celebrated marriages, the birth of our children, or a new exciting venture, as well as consoled ourselves on the various sadnesses and disappointments of life. All in the knowledge that we are in a place of shared values and interests among decent hard working people, who have a deep se

To whom it may concern,

I was greatly upset to hear recently that Westminster Council are reviewing The Cow's premises license. I think to no longer have this landmark independent pub/ restaurant would be a great shame and an unmeasurable loss to the local community, members of whom have been enjoying the Cow for so many years. I have never visited an establishment with such a diverse and friendly atmosphere. Having lived literally a stones throw away from the Cow on Westbourne Park Road [REDACTED] for 8 years I can hand on heart say that during that time I have never experienced or witnessed any anti social or disturbing behavior or noise either during its opening hours or possibly more importantly after its closing. I would implore those involved in this decision making process to seriously consider the options. The Cow is part of the lifeblood of the W2 and to lose it would be a travesty and the local area would be none the better for it.
Kind Regards

I have been a regular at the Cow Public House for the past 15 years, and have found it to be one of the few pubs in the area that one would describe as for the local community as regulars. There is always a warm, welcoming atmosphere and a sense of camaraderie that is rarely seen in pubs these days.

I was shocked to hear that Westminster has chosen to review the license, for an establishment that I know only to be of the friendliest and most approachable of London pubs.

At a time when so very many pubs are closing, I am utterly dismayed that a cornerstone of the community such as the Cow has been threatened with sanctions. I would hope that whatever transgressions may or may not have occurred that these would not be held against such an important local establishment.

To whom it may concern,

I was dismayed to hear the news that there is to be a review of the premises licence for The Cow for several reasons, not least of which because it is one of the primary charms of the area and a reason my friends and I currently visit and have chosen to live on adjoining streets previously. It offers the feel of a country local in a city that can at times feel relentlessly impersonal. It is very much a favourite in the area with a sense of community - a rarity.

Furthermore, as anyone who's frequented it will know, the staff are helpful and welcoming so, if anything, I have always felt it a place of safety in the area. I've never experienced any crime or public nuisance issues.

If anything, I'd suggest the council turn their attention to encouraging businesses like the Cow to thrive given that we are now living in a time where we will all need community and a sense of safe escapism that comes with a well-run and long established spot like The Cow, and I think the very fact that such a review is taking place suggests a severe myopia within the council that is worrying as someone who is currently a resident.

*I understand that there is a review of the licence of "The Cow" ...reference 21/00981/LIREVP
I have been a very regular customer at The Cow for the past ten years both in the restaurant and in the pub. I have eaten there at least once a week either on my own or with my wife and grown up children on numerous occasions and have used the first floor for family functions numerous times.
I have had nothing but good experiences at The Cow and while often being busy the atmosphere is always friendly, welcoming and very safe. There has not been a single occasion when I have witnessed any trouble of any sort.
The staff are so helpful, professional, kind and courteous and The Cow is undoubtedly an extremely important part of the local community in which I live and it has been greatly missed during lockdown.
If I can give any further details do please let me know,
all the best*

I am writing to you to voice my support for the Cow pub on Westbourne Grove. It would be a great shame to close The Cow pub. The food is fantastic as is the community of locals and visitors to the pub. I have had numerous memorable visits to The Cow with both friends and family.

I can confirm that I have not experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance or public safety issues on any of my visits to The Cow.

I am writing to show my support of The Cow pub on Westbourne Grove which I understand is under threat - a real shame.

I've lived in London since 2001 and, despite not living locally, I have always returned to The Cow a few times a year. I think of it as my favourite pub ; Different to other pubs, it's always full of interesting people, incredible food and, of course, the Guinness! When I think of The Cow, I think of relaxed, friendly times where staff and clientele mix on a level.

I now work in Notting Hill and, truthfully, a week never passes where The Cow is not positively referenced. I am lucky to interact with the some if the most interesting, successful people in the area and they always have a twinkle in their eye when the pub is referenced - that in itself is a huge show of support and, indirectly, of huge value to the wider area.

My times at The Cow have ranged from a 'quick pint of prawns and Guinness' to 'full' evenings (Burns Night 2016 is forever in my memory!), however, I have never seen any trouble, any crime and/or thought of it as a particularly noisy/boisterous place. Conversely, I think one of the reasons I've probably seen more celebs in there than any other venue in London is for that very reason - it is discreet, stylish and fun.

I sincerely hope that the grumbles of a few individuals (probably with an eye on their property values...I should know!) doesn't spoil the enjoyment of many.

I'm writing regarding the sad news that there is a review of The Cow's premises licence. I understand that it is to do with prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

These descriptions are about as far as you can get based on my experience of this amazing pub. Having lived near to The Cow on and off for almost a decade I can only say that I have only ever experienced an inviting, friendly and welcoming place - somewhere I have many fond memories of and hope that I will continue to have the chance to create new ones there too.

In a world of sanitised and identikit bars, restaurants and pubs The Cow stands out as somewhere with character, heart and soul - somewhere that strangers actually talk to each other (in London!!!) and friends can be made. Particularly in a part of London where so many homes are left empty for half the year by their uber-wealthy owners and the risk of a dying community is real, the Cow acts as a hub and a heart of Notting Hill.

London is known for a number of things around the world, and one of them is its amazing pubs - The Cow is without doubt one of those - an institution that welcomes all, whether locals or a tourist who has done their homework on which places are really worth a visit.

And if none of the above is enough to convince you that this is a pub that must continue, then you have to try the fish stew!

I note that the Council is reviewing the licensing of The Cow. As a local Westminster resident, living 5 minutes away from the establishment, I would like to suggest that the establishment is of enormous importance to the local community. It has for many years served as an important meeting place for many groups of people, allowing the fostering of community spirit in what can be a somewhat divided community, characterised by enormous income and racial inequality.

As an occasional patron, I have not witnessed antisocial behaviour or nuisance, and am very surprised to learn that there may be objections on these grounds. My experience has invariably been of an extremely friendly atmosphere, and I cannot help but think that there must be ulterior motives to the complaints. We have seen so often establishments, which for many are centerpieces of their cultural enjoyment of London, closed down in favour of developments which take away from the cultural vibrancy of the community.

I would like to offer my full support to The Cow.

I saw the area gentrify again and again- relentlessly pushing higher and higher. That was an amazing ride in one way but I also saw the desire this gentrification had on trying to clear up what went before. Erase the unwanted past. The constant persecution of the pub on Alexander street - whatever incarnation it took from Tom and Dicks to Harrys. I was always being asked in the mid-nineties to sign petitions trying to close down the Walmer or that big pub on Chepstow road.

Anyway to get to the point, I can't see what the motive for closing down the Cow would be unless there was an ulterior motive. Apart from the Cock and Bottle, I can't think of a better behaved pub in the area. It's just an innocent bystander meaning no harm to anyone.

The Cow will always have a place in my heart, as it was there on a cold October night in 2002, that I first kissed the girl who was to become my wife. In fact, to be precise she suddenly kissed me as I was finishing my sausage and mash ( I highly recommend if you've never tried it - the sausage and mash, not kissing my wife). It was there that I went for a drink 3 years later the night before I got married with my best man and bumped into Ian Wright and being an Arsenal fan, I took this as some sort of sign from God.

*I could go on with the 'it was there's..' but suffice to say it's that type of place. The type of place that helps build the community and brings a focus. Reduces crime and brings order.
The fireplace we can all gather around.
The friend that can be relied on.
Not the type of place that should be put down.*

- food is always a great standard*
- my small dog is allowed in the bar*
- Most importantly this pub has an atmosphere like no other where it almost feels like family. I have met so many amazing people in this place which doesn't happen anywhere in London.*

I read with great sadness that apparently the Westminster Council is reviewing the Cow's Premises Licence, on the ground of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I came to London ten years ago and found a small cute flat in Notting Hill. My landlords, a kind French couple with three little kids, left a little guide to the area.

The first pub they recommended was "The Cow". It was also the first pub I went to in my exploration of this beautiful neighbourhood.

I remember still today that the one thing I absolutely wanted to have at the Cow was oysters and a pint of Guinness, which my landlords highly recommended.

It is one of those food combinations you read about in old English books, I felt I was in a Dickens novel for one evening. It is one of those experiences that are simple, yet create great memories and remind us of where Britain came from.

Taking away a charming, old fashioned pub like the Cow from an area where bars are starting to look all the same and serving complicated food and cocktails is not going to do much good to the heritage of the area. We want Notting Hill to retain some of its traditions, some of the reasons why we all like this area and especially some of its historical places accessible to every walk of people.

If a family of 5 like my landlords thought that the Cow was a place worth going to and if i went there multiple times as a group of girls, I am sure you can see that there is no ground to say there are risks to public safety. I felt safe every single time I went to the Cow, I enjoyed the mixture of people, I had simple, tasteful food and I do not want this to be taken away from me, or my neighbours.

I worked at the cow for almost 2 and a half years and consider this pub a home away from home and hold it dear to my heart.

I have never experienced any crime or disorder at this pub, quite the opposite. I have had many happy memories and made many friends whilst eating, drinking and working at the cow. I've had the pleasure of meeting the regulars who have been frequenting The Cow for more than 20 years and hearing their tales, for a lot of people The Cow is a family and to take this away would be detrimental to many.

I can vouch for The Cow and all it has to offer to the surrounding community. I would be heartbroken to see it go as would many others including all that it employs. The employees of The Cow are my dearest friends. The infamous managers and barmen of The Cow, Luti and Petro, have worked here for over 20 years and have shown loyal and committed service to this establishment, to take the pub away would destroy the community they have built.

Please reconsider and don't take away one of the best, vibrant, welcoming pubs in all of London.

It's especially shocking that you would try to do this at a time that every small business in the UK is hanging on by a thread after Corona. Not to mention Notting Hill has become almost devoid of personality with rent prices having got so ridiculous it's mostly only chains that can survive. Why destroy the remains of culture?

I would rather you use your time to try to become more efficient than you currently are with planning permissions in the area - your delay with those causes such delay to the property market, which isn't what we need. I've had friends have to pull out of building and buying because it takes so long.

It promotes a positive and progressive image of West London and its community, and is celebrated not only in the UK, but also recognised worldwide as one of Britain's best independent pubs.

The pub has played an important part in the regeneration of Westbourne Park Road, and has long survived all of the other local drinking establishments by many years. Incredibly, the pub has employed some members of staff for 25 years straight.

The Cow is synonymous with the simple pleasures of food, drink, friendship and good company. For many years, The Cow has celebrated key calendar dates, which have become cherished moments for their customers and for their neighbours, from St Patrick's Day, to Notting Hill Carnival and New Year's Eve.

In my many visits to The Cow, I have not at any time experienced issues with crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety. I would say it's an incredibly welcoming place. The Cow's clientele is genuinely reflective of the area's diversity. There aren't many pubs left in London where you can take a seat at the bar and strike up a friendly conversation with a stranger.

Although I now live in South East London, when the opportunity arrives (and particularly when I have friends or family visiting from overseas) I love to bring them to The Cow. It is a place that hosts fantastic memories for myself and my friends.

I feel strongly that The Cow deserves its rightful place as an outstanding drinking and eating establishment, and removing the licence of The Cow would result in a terrible loss in London's social, cultural and culinary scenes, and frankly, a deeply embarrassing misstep by the City of Westminster.

To Whom it May Concern

I understand that Westminster City Council has issued a Review of the The Cow's Premises License on the ground of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I have to say that I am completely shocked as to the reasons why the License is being reviewed. As resident and homeowner [REDACTED] for many years, I have never once had any kind of problem with the Cow and/or its customers - it is completely surprising to read the reasoning behind the review and, over the many years I have lived here I can say that there has never been an occasion that the pub or its customers have been a public nuisance, a threat to public safety or a crime and disorder risk.

In fact, the opposite is true - as a woman it is actually reassuring to have the Cow [REDACTED]. I feel a whole lot safer walking down the road at night knowing that customers at the Cow will be sitting outside and there are people about. I would say the presence of customers sitting outside or going into the Cow actually reduces the risk of crime and disorder - the area is mainly residential and if we didn't have people coming and going the area would feel a whole lot less safe and frankly be more of a target for crime.

I almost feel like the review is being issued against the wrong Cow - these concerns raised by the Council are so far from anything that goes on in connection to the Cow.

Aside from objecting completely to the reasoning for the review - it should be acknowledged that the Cow is absolutely integral to the life, soul and community of the area and has been for many many years. There is so much history wrapped up in the Cow.

In normal times, a visit to the Cow on any day reveals a complete mix of people (and dogs) mostly from the local area and community, people of all ages and of all backgrounds enjoying one another's company, it is and always has been a warm and welcoming place with the most wonderfully interesting customers.

It would be an absolute disgrace for the Cow to have its license revoked, and it is particularly disturbing that this action is being initiated during a National Lockdown when you know it will be much harder to rally support amongst the locals and customers as they are unable to go there. Furthermore, is there no thought or consideration or care for local independent businesses particularly those in the hospitality industry after they year they have had???

Please take into consideration my comments and I would like a response to my email.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to you in regard to The Cow (89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH) which is currently up for a licensing review (reference number: 21/00981/LIREVP).

I can only speak from my personal experience, but in my case that is extensive when it comes to The Cow on Westbourne Park Road. Over the last 13 years I have been a regular at The Cow. I have moved house and borough and sometimes lived too far away to just stroll there or call it my local, but even when I lived further away I returned there regularly as it is a true gem. Their rare combination of great music, phenomenal food and convivial atmosphere is sadly exactly that, rare. And now with this pending review, endangered. Sure there are many places to eat and drink and there will be some sort of music playing, but to have the stars align in such a way that a place where you eat, drink and meet friends still feels like a home away from home is worth maintaining and protecting.

I have celebrated my birthday there. Took my fiancée on our first date there, now eight years ago. Was best man at my friends wedding at The Cow and read my speech to family and friends. When my family, be it parents, my sister, my cousins or even my second cousin come into town we always also go to The Cow as it has become exactly that, a home away from home, a place for celebration, friends and family. It is the beating heart of the community in so many ways that it seems incomprehensible to question its many merits.

I have had some of the best times, some key moments of my life at The Cow and I have never seen any crimes except, perhaps against fashion.

Please, I implore you to consider The Cow as more than a pub or a restaurant, but as a vital ingredient to the wellbeing of a community that could reluctantly go elsewhere, but would not feel as at home there as they do at The Cow.

Hi there,

I recently came across the news that Westminster Council is planning on revoking the license for the aforementioned pub.

Firstly, I'm a little baffled by the Council's motion, in particular because the situation at the moment for hospitality businesses is dire to say the least, with locations closing on an almost daily basis. As such, the last thing we need is the council bringing the hammer down on another.

Beyond this though, The Cow is a much loved local institution that not only brings life and character to a corner of town that is fast becoming quite staid but has also been a safe and quiet place to have dinner with loved ones.

Indeed, in my many years as a customer I have never witnessed any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues as a result of the pub's actions or involvement.

I'd therefore like to see this motion reconsidered.

For further comment please do not hesitate to get in touch.

they're in London. It's part of the fabric of our London. Lose it, and you damage the fabric of the entire ecosystem.

There are places that, just by dint of existing, elevate their area. This is one of them. It is for all ages, for all groups, a haven for coming together. Depending on the time of day, it's a place to sit quietly but in good natured surrounds, a place to celebrate, a place to eat and drink with friends. The Cow is an increasingly rare gem, and should be cherished as such.

Good Morning,

It came to our attention that a review of The Cow's Premises Licence is underway, therefore we are contacting you to support our local pub.

We have been regulars for many years and never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

The day when we discovered The Cow for the 1st time it instantly became our favourite. It's a place where you feel good and welcomed. The team is fantastic, the clientele is great and friendly - you feel like at home. On the top of that, the food is extraordinary, probably the best pub meals in London.

It's a place with history, taste and passion. It's also more than just a regular pub, in fact it's a local necessity, it's a community and moreover it's definitely one of the best pub in London.

We love The Cow , please don't take it away from us!

Many thanks.
Kind regards,

RE: The Cow Pub 21/00981/LIREVP

Hello.

I'm a customer of The Cow pub at 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2

I was most shocked to hear of the council's current licensing review and am writing to add my strong support for this beautiful, friendly and most vital local establishment.

Indeed, in the years that I've enjoyed having The Cow nearby I've never once found the atmosphere to be anything other than convivial, inviting and warm. I certainly haven't experienced or witnessed any crime or disorder, in fact, I'd say it's the particularly positive sense of community and togetherness that gives The Cow its absolute charm.

The Cow is an integral and long-standing part of this unique corner of London, as place for locals to connect whether that's celebrating a sporting event, enjoying St Patricks day, enjoying the build up to Carnival or just a cosy winter's evening by the fire - and to lose all this would be terrible.

With best regards

To whom it may concern,

It is with great sadness that we hear of the review of The Cow's license. This establishment brings people of all areas of life together with traditional ethics, good food, drinks and always friendly and accommodating staff. The heart of London is being stripped out by redevelopment of old pubs and we are losing our right to enjoy time away from our homes and in pubs like this. It is where I go with my family for Christmas get togethers and everyone from my son, father, grandmother (and our dog) all hold it close to our hearts as one of the few genuine, enjoyable and friendly remaining public establishments in London - one which welcomes ALL. I have never experienced any crime and disorder, public nuisance, bad behaviour or safety issues when at The Cow and am a regular customer. Please do not close what brings so many people together. We have all been through enough. Kind regards, have been a customer of both the restaurant upstairs and the downstairs pub bar for over 20 years. It is without question one of my, and many others', favourite pubs and restaurants not just in our local area but in the world. Places are too easily described as "an institution" but without doubt The Cow is one and has given back to the neighbourhood for 25 years. Tom and all of his staff provide a beacon of warmth and welcome as well as delicious food and drink at fair prices. Without question the world and Westbourne Park in particular is far better with The Cow in it. I haven't personally experienced any behaviour that would lead me to believe the license should be questioned and, if there have been any incidents when I wasn't there, I am convinced that Tom and his staff would care and ensure they put in place procedures to prevent reoccurrence. Please don't make any decisions that could lead to The Cow no longer being open, particularly in these current times when we need a 'friendly home' to visit with friends and family that makes us feel richer, happier and more optimistic about our lives.

A letter to Westminster Council in support of The Cow, our local pub - I write in support of the continuing operation of The Cow, our local pub. This establishment represents the best of such institutions, bringing together as it does just about every walk of life in this quite diverse community in which we live. I see the man who upholstered my sofa, the woman who is involved with social housing buys me a drink and the individual of uncertain orientation always wants to have a chat. I attend dinners and fundraising events for the community, like the Grenfell situation, and stumble into informal neighborhood gatherings. The Cow is the proud sponsor and host of all this neighborhood activity. It is a significant asset to this community. While The Cow is a lively gathering spot, I have never experienced any disorder, noise, public nuisance or crime associated with the pub - to the contrary, staff there take an active interest in ensuring the overall levels of noise are low, the outside presence is under control at all times and that people are protected. I can speak with authority on this matter because I live very close by, and am constantly out and about in the immediate neighborhood at all hours, walking my dogs or doing errands. Diverse places like Notting Hill and Bayswater are always in danger of fracturing into their constituent parts - organisations, places and people which bring the community together deserve our support and also the protection of local government. Please ensure that The Cow is able to continue to act in this role, as a valued community and social asset for the area.

I love their delicious food, the quality is really high and always delivers. I bring my family for dinner and drinks regularly. The staff are always so accommodating, professional and helpful. All my friends love to meet at the Cow. I have made great friends through the Cow, I visit it weekly for my amazing Cow fish stew and the fun atmosphere. The Cow has been part of the community for 25 years, and is a landmark, an institution that Notting Hill could NOT do without.

As a woman visiting the Cow, I feel safe and secure, I have never felt threatened or experienced anything untoward.

It is my favourite place, and I consider myself a regular.

To Whom It May Concern,

I take this opportunity after hearing about The Cow's licensing review to highlight my dining experience over the years and the absolute need to keep this Gastro pub open.

The Cow has been an institution for many years in the Notting Hill community and also a destination restaurant for many who come to dine and experience the high quality of dining - for myself, The Cow equals the best Fish Soup in London and I have continued to order this for delivery from The Cow over lockdown. To say the possible closing of The Cow is a shock is an understatement. The Cow has a long legacy in Notting Hill and keeping this gastro institution serving the community should be a serious priority. Gastro pubs of this quality and tradition should not be in jeopardy and the neighbourhood would not be the same without The Cow.

During every visit (dozens upon dozens) over the years, the atmosphere has been both civilized and without event. In fact, I would go as far as stating that, as compared to the majority of London pubs, The Cow is one of the most low-key ones we have in our city. Its aim is to serve excellent food and create a space that is both friendly and safe for its patrons.

I very much hope my email today helps to weigh in favour of The Cow's licensing renewal.

Dear Sir/Madam,

Being a long term customer of The Cow I find it very distressing to hear that you are reviewing their license. In all the years I've visited this pub I have never witnessed any crime or nuisance behaviour. All I have witnessed is people having a lot of fun and relaxing. It's hard to put into words how important this pub is and what it gives to the community. Maybe it's the characters that run it or the wonderful restaurant, maybe it's the Guinness and oysters or the fact that everyone is met with a warm welcome like old friends. Whatever the attributes are, The Cow is part of London's rich tapestry and show remain so for many many years. I can only presume it's a bunch of rich sour pusses that have made complaints about this wonderful establishment. If they want peace and quiet may I suggest they move to the country where peace and quiet can be assumed. This is a lively london pub and the area is all the better for it. It beggars belief that people's tolerance level has become so poor they can't tolerate a bit of noise and will immediately complain as a default setting. Shame on you if you don't renew this establishments license. It will just go to prove that we are now a society that has no tolerance for anything that doesn't fit a slim criteria and that alone is slowing chipping away at the heart of this city and robbing it of all personality. Live and let live.....Please.

Dear Westminster City Council, or to whom this personally concerns,
I write to you personally begging for you to listen carefully to the few things I'm about to say. Having been born in [REDACTED] in 1985 and growing up in Westminster on [REDACTED] The Cow has served as a beacon of hope, love and safety to me for many reasons throughout the years.
My first experience of the cow was when I'd walk home from school aged 10 over the footbridge from the [REDACTED] Gangs of boys would gather around me and try to rob or even on one occasion beat me up! Sometimes they succeeded, however I new that if I passed by The Cow pub there would be grown ups outside who would tell the gangs to get lost. Having suffered quite badly from bullying at that time I was saved by these men and woman standing outside drinking many many times. I instantly felt safe when passing by The Cow. As I grew older and at the age of 15 I was walking down my street with my friend George on our way to a friends party in Chalk Farm.

As I grew older and at the age of 15 I was walking down my street with my friend [REDACTED] on our way to a friends party in Chalk Farm. None of us new it at the time, nor even [REDACTED] but he was moments away from having his first epileptic seizure. This happened quickly just near the 31 bus stop, I new what do, I ran as fast as possible to the cow and begged the men and woman drinking outside to help. [REDACTED] quickly had a crowd of adults surrounding him, one was a nurse who new exactly what to do and quickly put him in recovery position, one was a minor celebrity who had a mobile phone, no-one else did at the time. The ambulance was called and [REDACTED] life was saved.

When I was aged 19 my parents got married and they had there wedding reception in the cow. I already new most of the local men and woman who had seen me walk past day in day out. It was really wonderful to enjoy a pint of Guinness with them. I remember looking at the murals and decor and being completely amazed. The environment was friendly and warm.

To this day I go for a drink after work sometimes and remember my old street and reconnect with some of the locals and friends. This pub is an important place in my life, it's the main reason why I've battled to stay in the Westbourne park area despite rising rents. It's my safe place and I love this pub so much, unlike other pubs in the area there seems to only be nice friendly people who drink here. I really would be devastated to see it taken away from so many of us. Please please do the right thing and extend the lease and save our pub! The Cow is a good place enjoyed by good people!

To whom it may concern,
I am writing to show my support for one of the most wonderful and welcoming pubs in London, The Cow at Westbourne Grove. I am deeply upset that this establishment has been threatened with closure and should this happen the neighbourhood would loose much more than a place to have a drink and eat.

This unpretentious, traditional pub offers not only fantastic food and their own beers but more importantly is a lynchpin in what is fast becoming a sanitised and soulless area of London, offering a vital place for locals from all parts of the community to meet and socialise, alleviating sorrow and loneliness that is rife in modern cities today. I have never experienced anything even close to crime, disorder, public nuisance or danger in this place, quite the opposite, it is a place for families, the first place I would chose to take my elderly parents for a lunch, often the tables have families with young children enjoying lunch and the bar has elderly local patrons quietly enjoying a pint and chatting to the lovely bar staff.

If this pub were to be closed this part of Notting Hill would be a much colder and sadder place, it is irreplaceable and I for one have had it top of my list of places to meet with my loved ones after this distressing and solitary year. Do not steal this gem from it's community ! It is unbelievable that we are having to fight for the right to have such a special place in what is fast becoming a sad and lovely city- the councils should be working to uphold and support these independent, community focused establishments!

With high hopes,

Dear Sirs,

We are writing to you as we are deeply saddened with the news that the licence of our beloved restaurant in Notting Hill is under review. For the past 15 years we visited The Cow on a regular basis to celebrate special occasions and anniversaries. The Cow's authentic atmosphere and spectacular food is second to none. Over the years we introduced The Cow to many friends, some became regulars, whilst some visit on special occasions like us but all are always amazed with the food, service and ambience.

I would like to stress that we have never witnessed anything that would spoil our visit to The Cow. As parents of young children we choose very carefully where we go out. It's important that we feel safe both inside the venue as well as in the neighbourhood. As an old establishment they clearly know how to keep their guests happy and are working hard behind the scenes to do so. We always feel looked after and it's clear that customers are their top priority. We feel that The Cow is a true land mark in Notting Hill and we can't imagine the neighbourhood without it. We always meet the most amazing people there, from famous celebrities to casual local artists. How many places like this still exist in London? Where both ends of the social ladder can meet and enjoy their evening? Without any question there aren't many of these left and as a London Council you should understand the importance of keeping it safe. The Cow has been there for 26 years and has a special place in people's hearts. We are not looking for much more at this moment than to having another anniversary dinner post lockdown. The Cow is the only place for it. Its been the most depressing year. Please save The Cow.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing in support of the The Cow. We have been customers since shortly after it opened in 1995. Living and working locally it has been a constant in our lives - a timeless space of safe and inclusive social interaction where it matters more how you behave than who you are.

We understand that this review is being undertaken following a lack of judgement at the beginning of lockdown. Although we do not support this breach of the law and fully understand reasonable measures to address the misdemeanour, we very much hope that you will consider a fine punishment enough without the threat to the longevity of one of the few remaining true pubs in our area and perhaps in London. The Cow has maintained a British tradition that is continuously being threatened. It is a tradition that should be supported and celebrated. It is somewhere to be together which, as we come out of a year of this pandemic and social distance, will be even more valuable and necessary for the well-being of all in our community.

Please, don't threatened The Cow with closure. We need it more now than ever.

I would like to voice my concern over the threat to the future trading of The Cow pub at 89 Westbourne Park Rd. I have been going to this pub for the last 20 years and have never, not once in all those years experienced anything untoward in this establishment. I've never had a negative experience at The Cow. The great food and the great local clientele has always been the attraction for me and I don't even live local. I live in south London but always visit at least once a month and its been nothing but a joy. It would be a great shame to lose this place. It would be an act of great folly and it would rip the heart out of the local community. We should be preserving great pubs like The Cow. Please get this right.

To whom it may concern,
I have been living in the Cow's neighbourhood for almost 6 years now, it's been the place where I would celebrate my birthdays, take friends from abroad to - knowing how much they would enjoy it and knowing that we would always take good memories with us, take friends from London to - for one of them and myself it's our number one meeting place and we have spent many nights, updating each other on our lives, shed a tear, laughed. Some of my most treasured dates happened at the Cow.... And I've enjoyed their great food whenever I wasn't in the mood for cooking or wanted to treat myself. I don't know any other pub in our or any other community, that is as personable. I would come back from months working abroad, stepping through the door and be greeted by Petro and the staff, like I've never been away...
I don't think I need to tell you how much of an unrepairable loss the closure of the cow would be, not only in times like we are currently going through (it's a light at the end of the tunnel to looking forward to my first visit back!), but any other time! The cow to me is one of the best things about Notting Hill, I have never witnessed any crimes, disorder or similar - much more to the contrary had always been gently shown the door at 11.00pm by Petro, no matter how much we'd beg him for another drink.

Don't destroy this gem!

I have been a patron since I was living in short-life housing on [REDACTED], then as a single first-time buyer on [REDACTED], as a courting couple from [REDACTED], as a footballer supporter for crucial games, and as a family for Sunday lunches in the following years. I now live in [REDACTED], but still think of The Cow as my local. My friends all still eat and drink there, my student children meet their friends there, my sister and husband always have their Wedding anniversary supper in the dining room upstairs, and I can guarantee to know at least five or six people whenever I visit. This is a rarity in London. A genuine social hub that inspires the loyalty and appreciation of its customers.

I have never felt unsafe or at risk at The Cow, either during the Carnival when that corner is a refuge, nor during the last twelve months of the pandemic. These have been devastating times for the hospitality industry and we should cherish institutions such as The Cow and support their courage and appetite for reopening in a time of the greatest adversity. Otherwise all our pubs will become bland chains. This establishment was a leader of the gastro-pub revolution twenty-five years ago, introducing innovative bar and restaurant menus of sourced British food and spectacular seafood. If I want a visitor to experience a typical English pub, one that I can be proud of, where the value of good food, good drinks and good company in a relaxed and friendly environment actually works, The Cow is it. Customers are connoisseurs, not drunks. Inviting a Japanese client for a pint of Guinness with a pint of prawns or a platter of oysters has a reassuring sincerity, level of quality and is part of our heritage. It is simply impossible to imagine that corner of our village without The Cow. Please listen to the community who cherish it.

The Cow means a great deal to me. It was the place my Dad and I would go to whenever I was back visiting. He was a seafood fanatic. We would get two pints, share a pint of prawns and catch up on life. These are dear, dear memories. Today marks a year since my Dad died. I still haven't been able to go back to the Cow, get our traditional pint of prawns, and tell him what life has been like without him. To have lost him is unbearable. To lose the Cow, before even getting to pay my respects to my father, feels unjust.

Dear Sir/Madam

I write in reference to the above premises.

I was shocked to learn that the license for The Cow was not to be renewed and it may cease to exist. I have been eating and drinking regularly at The Cow since it opened in 1995, even celebrating my 30th Birthday there in its opening year. In all this time I have never witnessed or experienced any adverse situations, on the contrary all my visits have been positive. I have lived and worked in Westminster most of my adult life and The Cow is the closest thing to a 'local' I have.

It would be beyond shameful if the council put a halt to such a unique establishment that is a positive to the local area, a simple pub that is known the world over for its excellent atmosphere and great food.

I live just off Westbourne Grove and the many generic take away establishments that proliferate in the area surely demand more attention, with the large amount of litter, parking chaos and rule breaking delivery drivers they generate. On a side, I live behind Whiteleys and have witnessed the destruction of a listed building that has caused plenty of pain to the local residents, sanctioned by the council, is this the general path we are going down?

I urge the council to not terminate The Cow, the loss to our area and community will be great, surely this is the time to preserve and work with established institutions, not destroy them.

Best regards

I am writing to pledge support for The Cow's license. It is an iconic establishment that is a mainstay of the Notting Hill community. It has an inclusive community welcoming feel and an excellent kitchen and bar.

To consider revoking its license during a global pandemic seem unnecessarily cruel as it supports jobs in the bar and restaurant. Local residents are the main customers and I know so many people who will feel an utter

I am sad to hear that you are reviewing the license of The COW pub, Bayswater / Notting Hill, especially since they've had a years of trade in question and as someone who lives on The Finborough Road Chelsea and travels to The Cow and The Westbourne as a regular, but when out of London, in Birmingham, would do the same as a "go to" experience for Notting Hill and a relaxed friendly inviting atmosphere which is more and more becoming a rarity in the bland corporate offerings of "global" London, I find this all very strange.

See above - friendly and welcoming, great music often harking back to The Clash and reggae which is quintessential old Notting Hill and a historic reminder of good open vibes; it also has a historic saloon look which with so many closures needs to be protected. Ian Wright walks in for a beer ... Tom Cruise and Beckham ... if they are relaxed and enjoy the atmosphere, how on earth could this not be sacred and protected? The staff are all fun and friendly and even during Carnival they manage the seemingly outside carnage by monitoring inflow. Never had an issue in the venue in or outside - always good times which should be protected as this is very much a Notting Hill : fashion meets music meets relaxed local hang out not to mention the quality of the product : food and beers, but is well run and should be absolutely protected. I've met French Brazilians musicians and footballers there, its a top gathering point without pretension and that cannot be replicated

It means a welcoming cosmopolitan pub full of friendly good time vibes and quintessential old school Notting Hill - where internationals can hang out with locals and all mix with no attitude whatsoever, great service, good vibes a real community hang out - which if lost will ruin the entire character of that corner, which runs from the Westbourne to The Oak, where old and young mix in a civil fun atmosphere.

To all,

A note on how much The Cow Dining rooms means to us.

Drinking and eating at The Cow is like a big family home, when we want local comfort to soothe our souls it is the first and only place on the list. When we need a fun night out in our local it always delivers. The atmosphere is always outstanding. We have spent many a Sunday afternoon into evening, sitting in the corner and playing that jukebox. When I walk in the barman knows what beer to pour me, always expertly done.

We have never had any problems with crime or antisocial behaviour. It is always a tonic just walking up to the doors in anticipation of our first drink and discussing whether we order the chicken Kiev, again. Sitting or standing outside trying to catch the last sliver of sun on our faces.

To hear discussion of closing down is the worst of news in such a delicate time. We cannot wait to frequent this most local of local pubs again.

Thanks

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to you today concerning the review of The Cow's licence, and why it would be a complete injustice to take it away. I myself, am both a member of staff employed by The Cow, and a proud patron of the Pub, and therefore have a strong insight what an asset it is for the neighbourhood and community.

The Cow hired me soon after the first lockdown, when most places were refusing to take on anymore staff, and provided me with the financial stability I needed at a time where this was looking impossible to find. More than just financial stability however, it gave me the training and support to help me develop my skills and to better myself as a person as a direct result of working in such a warm and loving environment. Taking away the licence would be taking jobs away from myself and the family of staff at the Cow during a time of uncertainty and instability, when people need them most.

Furthermore, as a member of staff, I have personally never experienced or witnessed any crime or safety issues whatsoever during my time there. I truly feel that The Cow is an invaluable piece of the Notting Hill and Westminster community, and by taking it away, you would be creating much more problems than you would be solving, for example, the loss of jobs, and sense of community that is so lacking in our difficult times right now.

As a customer, I can hardly imagine the community without The Cow, and as an employee, I truly fear what will happen as a result of losing the income and support that The Cow provides me with, at such challenging times.

Sincerely,

I would take dates there or meet friendly people at random - one of few places I'd actually just go on my own knowing the staff and the locals will be fine and enjoy Notting Hill.

Food is fantastic - its a local flagship whilst other places have actually dropped in standard. Staff are all a closed knit grouping and it works in tandem with the Westbourne in bringing the best internationals out ... French is a near second language in and around. What is good enough for the French should surely be good enough for and protected by Westminster council.

Zero and I've been there on the last two carnivals. The place brings out the best in people. Again why would Ian Wright walk in during a pandemic reopening if he knew he wouldn't be hassled ... its not a trouble spot because people respect the venue and the crowd and I know because I have also run music events - see www.musiclifepromo.com there's venues in and around Chelsea open until 4am with no CCTV cameras, whilst this place is fine and I've been there enough as my bank statements will testify to confirm this. I'd say I've been a frequent patron from 2018 - so that's a decent testimony to not seeing anything : only brings interesting and civil characters to the street and adds to the area which is meant to be fun and international.

I genuinely hope as a business man who works in the City who meets internationals including locally to that area and have used The Cow as such a meeting place, for a more relaxed Guinness, that this place is untroubled because it does look suspicious timing wise, and location, if developments are needed please look across the road and leave this magnificent pub untouched, lord knows we will lose enough shortly. Also it is Welsh ... please respect a traditional venue in west London with links outside of London especially if you want London to remain a welcoming hub for internationals and free thinkers.

Many thanks,

Dear Sir or Madam.

We are deeply concerned about the news you are reviewing the license of our favourite London pub The Cow.

The Cow was an essential part of our life when we lived in London 2013-2018. It will also be one of the first places for us to visit once it is possible to travel to the UK. My wife is [REDACTED], and I am [REDACTED]. We both experienced excellent customer service at The Cow. It was always a pleasure to visit there.

We are worried that in institutions like The Cow disappear. We have seen often bigger chains occupying traditional places.

My wife is waiting to have a nice glass of white wine and a pint of shrimps next time we visit at The Cow. I am waiting for a regular pint and the always so delicious fish of the day. We are already planning to visit there with my [REDACTED]

We ask you to respect this dream. The current times are sad enough. We have received bad news from left and right since the early 2020. And we ask kindly for you to not cancel The Cow's license.

To whom it may concern,

Westminster Licensing have issued a review of the Cow's Premise license on the grounds of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

I would like to place on record the following; that I have lived in many areas of London, from [REDACTED] and I have regularly gone to the Cow since its inception. It is a neighbourly, friendly, warm Pub that looks after its locals and many first comers. I have regularly met people from South Africa, LA, NYC, Iceland who have been told to go to the Cow because of its perfect food, atmosphere and it is the perfect London pub.

To consider taking the licence away is a shocking indictment, in my view, of an increasingly poorly run council. In 20 years of dropping by the Cow I have never seen any violence, any raised voices and no disagreement and you should be championing this pub not condoning it. It is considered a gem. One of the really special places in London and you want to close it down.

I would kindly urge you to reconsider this.

Dear Council,

Having lived in Notting Hill for over 15 years between us, the Cow has been a favourite neighbourhood restaurant and pub for my wife and I. Beyond the comfort of friendships built with just about everyone that works there, the incredible food and the extremely unique atmosphere, the Cow is very special to us. It is not only where we met but also where we have celebrated countless birthdays, special occasions and outings with our friends. The Cow brings together locals and destination diners alike.

With our neighbourhood becoming a place that seemingly only chain restaurants and corporates can survive, having a truly high quality and legendary independent restaurant / pub is not only rare, but a huge asset to our community.

Further, in the years we have been going, we have not experienced a bad situation, incident or public disorder, or witnessed any breach of the law. In fact quite the opposite, as those who run The Cow take these matters seriously and have created an atmosphere that always feels safe.

We support the Cow fully and can't imagine living in Notting Hill without it, and thus strongly plead with the Council to renew their premises licence to keep a very special corner of our neighbourhood and community thriving. We would be happy to provide any further information if requested.

Yours sincerely,

It has been and I hope will continue to be one of the most special pubs in London. A wonderful combination of great food, warm cosy atmosphere and lovely staff make it the perfect sanctuary after a long day at work. I think it is worth stressing that in my years of patronage I have never noticed or experienced any issues of safety / crime and disorder.

I have met friends there and made friends there. After so long with little social contact we must value and protect places that allow human connections to flourish.

Please make the right decision

Good Morning,

I am writing to you today on behalf of The Cow Pub (W2 5QH), which is currently under review.

I can reliably and firmly state that The Cow is an asset to both the area and the community. I have never witnessed The Cow to be a 'public nuisance', a threat to 'public safety', or a location of 'crime and disorder'.

The last 18 months have been incredibly difficult for everyone, but especially the hospitality sector. This is not the time to revoke licenses or prevent the reopening of businesses. This is the time to support local businesses and protect the assets which make our community vibrant and diverse.

I hope that this matter is resolved in a way that puts the community, and its businesses, first!

Best wishes,

Dear Sirs

I am writing to you in regards to the licence review for The Cow.

I am so surprised and very saddened to learn that The Cow's licence is even under review. The Cow is an asset to both the local community and to London as a whole. It is the perfect London pub, offering brilliant food, atmosphere and fun times. We frequently go with friends and family, and without a doubt it is my favourite pub in London. It is top of the list for my recommendations.

The Cow means so much to us that when my husband and I got married at Chelsea Town Hall, we went straight to the Cow after to celebrate (see photo attached). We wanted to be at the Cow for our special day, and we cannot wait for lockdown to be over to take our new baby to the Cow - and introduce him to oysters!

We have been going to the Cow for years, and have never experienced crime and disorder, or any nuisance or safety issues of any kind.

I implore you to renew the licence for The Cow. If it is lost it will be a travesty for all who visit it already and all those people that are lucky enough to discover it soon.

Very best

To whom it may concern,

My father always had some good advise and one of them was: when buying a home find a decent pub, draw a circle round it and choose a home within that circle....so what did I do? I discovered The Cow some 25 years ago and now luckily live within throwing distance of it. Not only is it a bloody good pub, but not once have I been disturbed by noise or any threatening behaviour. My kids have used Nogs as their local sweetshop for as long as they can remember and I have always felt most comfortable for them to wander there themselves. The staff are utterly charming and always wishing me a good day. If Westminster were to close The Cow, they would be shutting down an establishment. The Cow is Nottinghill!!

*The Cow has a place in the hearts of many locals as it has become such a firm fixture. [REDACTED], and on numerous occasions travel to my hometown of London to make the occasional film, attend the occasional film festival, and collect the occasional award, last time it was the Golden Trellick at the Portobello Film Festival for best music film!

During these trips it is an absolute pleasure to have a sausage and mash lunch at The Cow, take many social and business meetings there and follow through for dinner. Although not a regular as in a "local" it has become my go to place when in London (I stay in Maida Vale) - I have had the pleasure of meeting many London friends there and have since introduced it to my American girlfriend and my children who love it as much as I do.

I have never ever heard a raised voice there, let alone any "anti-social" behaviour, and would certainly not take my girlfriend or children to anywhere where "anti-social" behavior takes place. I was born and raised in Kentish Town so believe me I do know a bit about "anti-social" behaviour and The Cow doesn't come anywhere close. I have never seen, heard or become aware in any way of any criminal activity, public nuisance, or any safety issues at all during my many many visits there. On the contrary I have had nothing but attentive caring service.

I am writing in bewilderment and surprise at you servicing notice on The Cow pub. I am sure this has come about because of someone new moving into the neighbourhood not liking the pub on their doorstep. If you could provide me with details of how or why this pub has been singled out that would be fantastic. I know it may be an official information request so if you can supply the relevant details on your internal reference numbers that would be great as well.

But back to the Cow Pub Westbourne Park. In full disclosure of the frequency and type of drinker of the cow, I would describe myself as follows. I have been drinking there for over 10 years. I go to people watch, enjoy the company of the staff and say hello to the regulars dogs. I am known by face of Petro and Oscar but they probably have no idea of mine or my partners name.

We have been in the pub during World Cup football matches, New Year's Eve celebrations, Sunday lunches after big matches, St Patrick's Day celebrations and the usual Ireland vs Rugby matches and not once have we felt threatened, intimidated or out of place. Why you may ask, well to put it simply the team running it are respected by the Patrons, of who I would be guessing 95% are regulars. Even during Covid restrictions and the initial uncertainty of signing in and out they had someone on the door taking details of everyone, no matter who they were or whether she saw them earlier in the day. As I said I people watch and it is the most fun and amazing pub to do it. But been like this I have seen a lot over the years. I have never seen a fight, anything that would not be considered untoward or offered anything other than a beer and my usual pint of prawns.

It is very obvious the owner has a very strict respect between customers and staff is a two way street policy. London can be an extremely lonely place for people at times and the cow always offers a smile, a hello and a feeling of home away from home.

The pub has an amazing collection of washed up types well past their prime, trust fund kids with too much time on their hands, hipsters looking for the next new thing, locals who want to drink in peace, regulars who want to have a drink and chills and those who turned left at Great Western Road instead of right whilst looking for Notting Hill Road (Those newbies will forever continue to make that mistake and become for ever regulars). This is a community where every one comes together, no matter who you are or where you come from. When you walk into the pub you are Matt just a customs who is welcomed with a smile and a happy how are you!

This is my go to pub because I can get a good seat, I do not feel unwelcome and it is a pub run with high standards and integrity. It is not a cheap pub to drink at nor eat at by local standards, but I would rather pay a premium for safety, security and knowing I am having a great time.

So hopefully you will see sense and renew the license. And maybe after you do, pop down, have a drink and you will see why my partner, myself and everyone else picks the cow time and time again over so many other offerings in the neighbourhood.

It would be a huge shame to lose The Cow and a great loss to the area.

The area is losing its charm and its magic. Everywhere is closing down and being replaced by chain after chain. We lost Santo, Mau Mau, Babajani, to name a few..

I'm sure more will struggle to stay alive due to the pandemic on top of high rent prices already.

Excuse the rambling but i promise it will make sense in the end.....

I was born in Paddington and grew up between [REDACTED]
After moving out of London in my teens and only returning when i was able to by my flat in Westbourne Park i was so grateful to have found The Cow.

It reminds me of a London i thought had been lost, the ones you see in movies and people say, "nah it's not really like that any more", "it's too gentrified now, you don't get any real characters" etc...

People of every demographic frequent The Cow to chat, hang out, catch up and relax. A place for the locals, a place of our own, not a franchise, as place that has heart.

It's full of life and laughter and AMAZING food! - This, if you have eaten in any "gastropub" in recent years is a real asset not to be under valued.

The Cow is somewhere i will head to on a rainy Sunday afternoon when i can't be bothered to cook, or a mid week lunch with my dad (who is probably more opinionated about food than he is politics).
My partner and i stop in for a glass of wine or a pint of (the best) Guinness when we've had a tough day at work, my boyfriend desperate to make the bar man Pietro his friend.

It is a shining beacon in the community, not one who's importance should be underestimated.

We are currently in the process of moving to [REDACTED] and as well as the fact that our new place remains a sub 20minute walk to my best friend and godchildren, it is also a swift 27 minute walk to The Cow. Isn't this what community is about? Having these places that mean something to you, places that bring people together, where you can recall that insane fregola di mare you shared with your old man or the chicken kiev your cousin had to take home in a doggie bag because she underestimated the portion size.
That story of the funny couple you sat next to who quickly became your friends and that summer you ate oysters and drank wine with friends out front in the summer sun.

It's one of those places you hate to brag about incase it gets too over crowded and you can't nab a seat at the back for dinner!

I walk in and feel like i'm so lucky this is my neighbourhood. I can no stress enough that we have never experienced any crime or disorder - even when the football is on! - which in London really is something. I doubt you'll hear anything but love from it's patrons and all i can say is long may she reign!

Kind Regards,

Dear Westminster City Council,

I like sitting outside The Cow. It's an enticing and interesting world that goes by these days and the company I find sitting around me is convivial and relaxing. I write as someone who has lived in the area for over fifty years.

I am not a pub goer, but I have found myself invited to meet up with friends old and young at The Cow and have been very happy to do so. Many are from the area, but quite a few are from abroad, who have had the pub recommended by friends. The Cow appears to be part of the London experience for visitors in the feature film industry, but it's also a port of call for quite elderly people from the countryside.

I have, I suppose, found The Cow to be more like a café than a pub, which is why I like it. There aren't people around bent on drinking themselves into oblivion, but very pleasant folks seemingly having agreeable conversations, which show no signs of being driven by alcohol.

The restaurant upstairs is also a very welcome addition to the neighbourhood.

I guess I've been there around twenty times and it's always been a delightful experience in terms of food and ambience.

In the circumstances, I should stress the obvious; I have never witnessed any rowdiness or bad behaviour at the cow, which is also often on my route home whether walking or driving late at night.

OBJECTION

I'm writing in regards to matter 21/00981/LIREVP regarding the licence of The Cow pub in Notting Hill.

I used to live opposite the pub - you could barely live closer and had no disturbances, particularly given that the pub is mostly behind closed door and the clientele know how to behave.

I'm really shocked that this review has come about as I have never had any issues with The Cow (compared to other establishments in the area).

Further, I have never experienced any safety or other anti-social behaviour whilst attending the pub - even after I moved out of Notting Hill.

In fact, one evening I accidentally left my laptop in the pub and returned the next day to collect it. The staff had kept it secure for me so no one had taken it. There are very few places in London where this would happen.

Having moved out of London, The Cow is still a place I visit (when we're allowed/post Covid restrictions) and feel safe. There are very places like The Cow and I really do hope that it remains as an iconic establishment in Notting Hill.

OBJECTION

I am writing in regard to the upcoming review of the licence of the The Cow public house on Westbourne Park Road.

BACKGROUND

I have been a living at the same address [REDACTED], and have been paying City of Westminster Council Tax since the autumn of 1990.

When I first moved in, the stretch of [REDACTED] was a working 'strip' for prostitutes. There were at any time of day or night anything between a dozen and twenty working girls plying their trade. Drug abuse was widespread and open - I would frequently find homemade crack pipes and syringes on my front door step and in my front garden. Nights were frequently disturbed by loud and violent altercations between the women, their pimps and their clients.

The previous licensed premises that have now become Caractere restaurant, The Oak, The Cow, and The Westbourne were effectively no-go areas to anyone with any sense of self-preservation, and were the focus of much of the violence and criminality that then prevailed.

Since the mid-1990s the area has become a much safer neighbourhood, in no small part down to the change of management of those four licensed premises, and others in the area.

While other licensed premises in the area have changed hands and managements over the last three decades, in some cases many times, The Cow has been under the same management for the last 26 years, and has during that time consistently provided the same high levels of service. Over those years, The Cow has become not only a valuable and treasured local institution at the heart of the community, but has become a destination for international visitors from all over the world.

A brief Google search reflects the many plaudits and excellent reviews that The Cow has received over the years: this is not a pub that threatens public safety or causes public nuisance or the threat of crime and disorder. I

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

I have been going to The Cow regularly since it opened twenty six years ago. In contrast to its previous incarnation, it was, and remains, a safe and friendly environment, serving excellent food and run by a highly efficient and professional staff under the leadership of its owner Tom Conran.

At a conservative estimate, based on an average of at least a couple of visits a week, I have visited Cow some several thousand times. On no occasion have I ever witnessed any violent or unacceptably anti-social behaviour, and have never felt concerned for my for my own safety or for any other of its patrons, or the general public.

Of course, there have been times when individuals have become unruly, but on all such occasions the staff have dealt with the problem with the utmost courtesy and professionalism. Unacceptable behaviour is not tolerated by either the staff and management, or by the very many regular patrons.

It should be noted that there is a very low turnover of staff at the Cow - most of the staff, if not all, are full time employees of many years' standing, and are in my opinion the best that I have encountered in any licensed am writing in support of The Cow Pub. In the many years I have been a patron I have never seen anything untoward and have always found it to be an extremely friendly and well run place. We've all been through a lot in the last year and hopefully the end is in sight. It would be a punishment to the whole community to see this license revoked or changed in any way. I ask you for the Cow to be allowed to continue operating in its usual fashion.

Dear Westminster City Council

As a longterm residents of [REDACTED] and patrons of The Cow since it opened 25 years ago, i fully support the renewal of their Premise Licence.

The Cow is an exceptionally well run and successful establishment with dependable and professional staff and managers. It has always been a safe and secure environment to be in and i have never experienced any of the issues that i understand are the grounds that this review is being sought under i.e. prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

The Cow is a key community asset and a residential and public amenity within the area, playing an important role within the local community, both socially and economically, benefiting residents, local workers and visitors alike. It provides a meeting place, promotes cohesion and diversity and is of great social and community value in a part of London that is generally lacking in such things. The Cow is a local and indeed London wide institution and quantifiable cultural asset and the benefits it brings to the local area far outweigh any downsides.

If The Cow were not to have its License renewed it would jeopardise the viability of the business and there is a danger the pub might have to close, with the high probability that the premises would have a change of use from a pub. At a time when pubs are closing down at an alarming rate, resulting in irredeemable losses of important community assets and all the previously mentioned benefits that pubs can bring to a neighbourhood. it would be a crying shame if Westminster chose not to renew the licence of what is a successful and flourishing business, a rare thing in what is a very volatile industry at a time when most pubs are struggling to survive and that isn't even taking covid into consideration.

I fully support the renewal of The Cows Premise Licence and ask you to do the same.

Kind regards

To whom it may concern,

As a customer of The Cow over the past few years, when I heard of the Westminster councils decision to review its premise license, I felt compelled to write of the importance The Cow bears not only to me, my friends and my family, but the wider and surrounding community.

The Cow has found itself becoming an institution famed for its welcoming, jovial atmosphere, great food and kind staff. The Cow itself was shown to me by my father and I, in turn, introduced it to my friends and so on. It has provided refuge for me and those I've known when down and out, it has provided company to my friends when they were new to the area and it has continuously shown itself to be a warm, welcoming place to anyone who so enters. Open to any, kind to all.

It is this magnetism that The Cow bears that is exactly the aura that has drawn patrons from across the world, not only to The Cow but to the wider area too. I have met those who have come from New Zealand to Hertfordshire just because they've heard of it, its great food and better times.

But now, I want to be clear in that in all my time there I have not once experienced or seen any crime committed there. This is a credit to the staff and security, namely Pedro and Michaela, who are stringent and strict on their rules and highly considerate of the local area, never allowing for loud behaviour or nuisances to erupt. They deal with said issues quickly and efficiently in order to de-escalate as carefully as possible. As they are thoughtful to their customers, they are too to their neighbours.

The essence of what I am trying to get across is that, The Cow does an unfathomable amount more good than it does bad. It is an institution of cultural, spiritual and inescapable importance. Too rid of it would be a regressive move. I plead with you to take this into consideration.

Kindest,

Dear Sir or Madam,

The Cow is an institution and provides sustenance for both the body and soul.

Eschewing the cookie cutter sameness of the many chain restaurants and pubs that litter our fair city, The Cow lends a uniquely vibrant dining and social experience for all that pass through it's doors.

The Cow has terrific food. Fresh British oysters and seafood and delicious classic hearty fare.
The Cow pours the best Guinness outside of Dublin.

It has come to my attention that this fine establishment has come under review. I would implore Westminster council to maintain The Cow's license.

I had my first pint here 24 years ago. I have had memorable dates here with my future, now wife. I had my best friend's leaving drinks here when he went off to Shanghai for work. This is the first place I take visitors from out of town when I want to show them a proper British local non-touristic pub experience.

This place oozes with character, has a mixture of upscale clientele and everyone in between, and provides a friendly, warm, welcoming environment.

The staff are amazing, charming and know how to maintain a fun, yet civilised atmosphere.

I have never had one moment of ill will, or any bad experience at this one of a kind gem in the heart of Notting Hill.

Thank you for your time and I hope to visit again when London reopens after this awful Covid time.

Kind Regards,

am writing in connection with the City Council's review of The Cow's premises licence, and in support of The Cow, and the retention/renewal of their licence (as appropriate).

We have lived in [REDACTED] for the last 7 years, very close to both The Cow and The Westbourne.

As a close neighbour, I have reason to walk past the frontage of The Cow at all times of day and late into the evening. I have never felt unsafe, and we have never experienced any form of public nuisance resulting from patrons of the establishment, or any noise, cooking smells or other inconvenience. It is a very self contained, and responsibly run business which does not pose a risk to public safety in any way.

In 20 years of dropping by the Cow I have never seen any violence, any raised voices and no disagreement and you should be championing this pub not condoning it. It is considered a gem. One of the really special places in London and you want to close it down.

I would kindly urge you to reconsider this.

To Whom It May Concern

Good evening,

I recently heard Westminster Council is considering revoking the Cow's license.

My partner has already made representations to the Council, but I would like to add mine to the record as well.

I'm a very big fan of the Cow and I am extremely upset to hear that its future hangs in the balance like this.

It's a very special and distinctive place, with a great kitchen and atmosphere. Like my partner, I love going there for native oysters and Guinness. That is a very rare combination, and one that you would otherwise have to travel into central London for. I'm really grateful we have such an opportunity on our doorstep. The seafood at the Cow is first rate and very fresh (I've never once had any digestive issues, which can often be the case when eating seafood) and I am particularly grateful to the staff there who are very helpful when it comes to gluten free options and advice.

I was extremely surprised to hear the Cow is being investigated for disorder/crime or whatever it is exactly. I have never encountered anything of the sort when there, nor have I heard about any such things happening there, and I have been there many times and spoken to plenty of people who go there regularly (and rave about it).

I would therefore like my comments to be put on the record and I very much hope that the Cow's license will be renewed.

Thank you for taking the time to read this.

Yours faithfully,

I am writing in regard to hearing the distressing news that The Cow's licence is up for review.

[REDACTED]. The anchor of our neighbourhood, when I think of Notting Hill, I think of The Cow. I definitely ask, what is Notting Hill without The Cow? And to me and many others, it would be a very different place.

We've watched the neighbourhood change a lot over the years, some good, some bad, but nothing has felt more stable, more British, more neighbourly, than the fine establishment that is The Cow.

The staff have been the same for as long as I can remember, and are all invested in the neighbourhood and the people in it- I worked with [REDACTED], one of their most long-standing members of staff- many years ago (2000) when Woody's restaurant/bar was a thing....it's been nice to still have him, probably one of the people I've known here the longest, behind the bar across the street for so long. In London many people (like me) don't have family, so those familiar faces, mean a lot. They have a lot to do, with why we live where we do.

I have been dreaming of a seafood platter on The Cow's front terrace - an afternoon in the sunshine, 'when this lifts' - which is a phrase we are all sick of, but at least now it's feeling more hopeful. I know I am not the only one, who has held such visions - an afternoon with friends at our favourite local spot- it's been our ray of hope! I really hope we get to make it happen.

The Cow gives life to this neighbourhood and does more for it - battling the chains and other whistle stop vendors that have come into the neighbourhood- than anywhere else in Notting Hill.

Please renew their license.

We need it!

Dear Sir/Madam,

When I first moved to [REDACTED] in 1998 (23 years ago), The Cow was the first pub I went into. More than a decade on, it remains head and shoulders above all others as the quintessential "local" - an integral part of the community and a valuable resource for local residents.

The pub is also key in bringing visitors to the area - particularly the less frequented end of Westbourne Park Road. It would be an act of huge folly to do anything other than renew the pub's licence for as long as possible.

To Whom It May Concern:

I'm writing to you in relation to the review of the The Cow's Premises Licence.

As part of the review, I believe it is essential and fundamental to take into consideration how important The Cow is to the local community and its customers from all walks of life. I have been a patron for over ten years and I was a W2 resident until October last year. I can vouch for the friendly and professional service I have received at all times.

I have not had the opportunity to visit the pub since March last year. In the challenging times during the lockdown, the hope that I can return for a reunion with friends and staff once we are back to normal has kept me going. I know that many people in the local community feel the same.

Please can I encourage you to conclude the review, with any recommended changes to model operations, and allow The Cow to remain open.

To whom it may concern,

Having been a resident in this area for the last 5-6 years at [REDACTED], The Cow has been the one place near me that I have been able to feel connected to the community. It brings people together in the community and positively builds relationships that the area is struggling to do in any other form.

I feel so strongly that without the cow there would be many steps back and the community would suffer in a way that people would not mix as they should. In plain terms Notting Hill and the surrounding are would divide even more. I feel it would be a strong decision to widen the gap between people who clearly want to get along and have that strong sense of the community which the Cow has always promoted.

Visiting the cow with friends and family for me is a regular occurrence to celebrate birthdays, family events or a casual Sunday dinner. In that time I have always been looked after and felt a great deal of care by the staff at all times. I have never had an occurrence of anything untoward during my visits. I would visit the cow at least 3-4 times a month and I have always had a great and fun time.

Thanks very much to all those staff at The Cow for giving me great memories and long may it continue!

Thank you for your time,

With regard to The Cow Pub

I have been a regular customer at the Cow for the last 24 years ..... from the day I first arrived in London as a post graduate. Today I'm the founder of one of the UK's leading technology companies. The Cow is the only pub in London that I take my children to and I will explain why below.

The Cow is one of the few places in London where social and cultural differences are left at the door. Academics, artists, entrepreneurs, musicians and movie stars mix with painters, decorators, mechanics and maintenance staff. Social, cultural and racial differences don't exist there. Inside The Cow everyone is equal. The dedication to preserve this diversity and inclusion is unique and should be embraced.

I have zero tolerance for drugs and anti social behaviour. I am also very aware of my environment. I have never, in the last 24 years, seen any drug use, anti social behaviour or any criminal behaviour in The Cow. The same is not true of a hundred other bars and private members clubs that I have been to in Westminster.

By revoking the Cow's license you would be simply be removing part of the fabric of the community and a reason for people to visit the area ..... when my mother and father-in-law (a 68 year old lawyer) visit from New York it's the first place they want to go.

If Westminster really wants to stamp out criminal behaviour in licensed premises then a better return on council tax payer's money would certainly be found in Mayfair.

I hope the council consider what the Cow really means to the community. We have had enough taken away from us this year. Please don't also take our favourite pub along with the jobs of some very kind and caring people - the staff.

Kind regards

Dear case officer,

We are writing to you as we are deeply saddened with the news that the licence of our beloved restaurant in Notting Hill is under review. For the past 15 years we visited The Cow on a regular basis to celebrate special occasions and anniversaries. The Cow's authentic atmosphere and spectacular food is second to none. Over the years we introduced The Cow to many friends, some became regulars, whilst some visit on special occasions like us but all are always amazed with the food, service and ambience.

I would like to stress that we have never witnessed anything that would spoil our visit to The Cow. As parents of young children we choose very carefully where we go out. It's important that we feel safe both inside the venue as well as in the neighbourhood. As an old establishment they clearly know how to keep their guests happy and are working hard behind the scenes to do so. We always feel looked after and it's clear that customers are their top priority. We feel that The Cow is a true land mark in Notting Hill and we can't imagine the neighbourhood without it. We always meet the most amazing people there, from famous celebrities to casual local artists. How many places like this still exist in London? Where both ends of the social ladder can meet and enjoy their evening? Without any question there aren't many of these left and as a London Council you should understand the importance of keeping it safe. The Cow has been opened for 26 years and has a special place in people's hearts.

We are not looking for much more at this moment than to having a post lockdown anniversary dinner. The Cow is the only place for it. It's been the most depressing year and the idea of our favourite place closing down is hugely upsetting for us. Please save The Cow.

Your sincerely,

Dear Westminster Licensing Committee -

I understand that the licence of the Cow pub and restaurant is being formally reviewed following a complaint from a passing member of the public.

I wish to state for the record as a user of the Cow over the last 25 years and a local resident that I have never in all that time encountered any reckless, disrespectful, illegal or antisocial behaviour from customers or staff. The Cow is an important local amenity providing good food, polite service and a warm welcome. I frequently pass the Cow and have never encountered any disruptive behaviours from patrons outside. On the contrary, the Cow and its customers provide a colourful, lively and bright presence in the area which is very welcome.

The Cow is well run with efficient and friendly staff. It's been my observation that names and contact details are properly taken to enable track and trace to operate as required.

I look forward to being able to continue using the Cow and enjoying its vibrant contribution to the local community. It would be a travesty if yet another community meeting place was withdrawn because of ill informed accusations.

I hope that the Licensing Committee will support the community around the Cow, its owners, staff and patrons and continue to recognise and promote this valuable community asset.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you as a long term resident as I understand Westminster Council are currently reviewing the Cow's licence.

I moved into the area in 1995 and first went to the Cow in 1997. I've been a customer since then. It's a 'true public house' - it's well run, friendly, serves good quality food and beverage and where people from all walks of life are welcome. It's a place where I feel comfortable meeting friends but also feel happy to take work colleagues and my parents, who are struck by its convivial atmosphere. Over the years it has earned a positive reputation that has spread throughout London and beyond.

In the time I've been going there I've very rarely seen the kind of bad behaviour often associated with popular pubs. I was there when it reopened on July 4 last year, the first day after lockdown. Although I didn't see it, I was aware that there had been a fight that night - notable because such incidents are so rare in the Cow! My understanding was that the fight was between young men, some of who had come over from the Westbourne pub across the road. Given it was the first day the pubs had been open in nearly four months it was perhaps not a surprise that such an incident took place.

The Cow is one of the last true pubs left in the area, making it a real asset of community value. A couple of years ago a well known local resident passed away - the Cow was the obvious place for his many friends to meet and console each other. It's the place of choice for many in the local community to gather at Christmas and on other special occasions.

I believe it would be a huge loss to the area should it be closed, so was saddened to hear its licence was under review. The events of last year have been unprecedented making communal spaces more important than ever. It's often said that the difference between Covid and the war/blitz - was that during the war pubs and schools remained open which helped foster community spirit.

Tom Conran and his team have managed to create a seductive balance of serving a high standard of delicious food (better than many eateries in area) while retaining the welcoming charm of an old London local pub. Countless bars and restaurants of the moment have come and gone in the area in the 26 years since The Cow opened, but it remains a welcoming popular constant.

I'm West London born & bred and been friends with Tom since we were teenagers. He knows the business he is in well. His passionate approach and quality control makes The Cow one of the few places that is a second generation go to venue for me and many friends I grew up with locally. The "Cheers" of two generations already. The place where I will not only bump into friends I've known all my life, but my my now grown up daughters' friends too.

Since it opened it has also been the meeting point for me and my friends during Notting Hill Carnival. The point I used to walk my girls into Carnival from on the family day when they were little. Roll on two decades when it got to my daughters going to the Carnival as teenagers, with me or with their friends, the safe haven and meeting place if any of us lost each was The Cow.

For us it's a family destination and an important part of the community.

I personally have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. We need our friendly locals more than ever as we come out of this lockdown, to connect with people and see our friends. Particularly after the isolation many have faced during covid.

The council should be supporting all hospitality businesses, bars, restaurants, pubs and trying to save the jobs of the people that work in them after the struggle they've faced during Covid. Not closing them down.

Frankly, one of the few things keeping many of us going during these difficult times is the idea that the Cow will reopen soon and we will see our neighbors there again.

Given the Herculean efforts the Cow's management has taken to support its staff and customers during Covid, to destroy its business at this critical moment would not just be economically devastating to many, but would demonstrate an obscene callousness by the Council that would not be soon forgotten by the people of Westminster.

It seems strange to be writing in defence of one of London's finest, and most iconic, pubs when, as we know, the hospitality industry has been driven to its knees over the past 12 months. Indeed, a recent review from CGA and AlixPartners reckoned that 12,000 pubs have had to close since December 2019.

So, to have the Cow now in the firing-line seems somewhat unreal.

At the risk of repeating myself, the Cow is a London landmark, and it's been my regular haunt since 1996, soon after it opened in its current format. During that time, I have never enjoyed anything other than superb experiences. Certainly, nothing untoward at any point, whether criminal, disorderly, or of a public nuisance.

And as for safety issues, I'm always struck by the broad spectrum of people who frequent 89 Westbourne Park Road - no one feels the slightest bit threatened. And that spread, of course, is the mark of a brilliant community pub, it welcomes all-comers.

When London needs every string to its bow in order to get back on its feet, post-pandemic, the thought that the Cow might not be part of (what could be a very difficult) recovery is unfathomable. My god, not only are us regulars going to need it, but when we eventually get tourists back into the city, places like the Cow are one of the many elements that make our metropolis such an attraction.

I have lived in [REDACTED] for over 25 years and been a customer of The Cow for most of that time. It is my favourite pub and by far the best in the area, not only because of the fantastic team who work there but also the professional way in which it is run.

There is always a great atmosphere and I think it is quite unique in that it's the only pub where it's easy to get chatting to people in the bar - there's nowhere else in Notting Hill like that. People are very at ease there, it's very much a part of the local community and I have met some amazing and interesting people, many of whom have become friends. It's always my go to place for a good night out.

I would also feel totally comfortable and enjoy having a drink at the bar on my own - there aren't many bars I would say that about. The staff are super friendly and look after their customers brilliantly. I have never experienced any problems with safety, crime or anti-social behaviour.

It will be a massive loss to the area if The Cow's licence isn't renewed. I hope the views of local residents will be listened to.

To Westminster Council

I am writing you this letter to oppose the review of the Cow Pub. I am incredibly saddened and disheartened to hear that the Cow Pub is under review. I am very disappointed in the council's decision to review the license.

The Cow is an particularly important part of the community's life, where people can come together in one of the very few iconic English pubs left.

I have been a regular at this establishment for over 15 years where I regularly come to eat the most amazing English cuisine and socialize with the other members of our community.

I have never in all the years that I have visited The Cow, experienced any crime or disorder, nor any sort of public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow. Quite the opposite, I find the owner of this establishment to be a remarkably conscientious Business owner.

I am appealing to you Westminster Council to save this very important part of the community life, their beloved pub, The Cow.

Yours Sincerely

FOA Westminster City Council's licence team,

I am writing to support 'The Cow (89 WESTBOURNE PARK ROAD, LONDON, W2 5QH) in it's forthcoming licence review.

Community hubs, places to meet, and locations where we can regain our connection to each other are going to be very important in the coming months, and never more so in this instance.

A central part of the community around Westbourne Green and an employer of local residents, The Cow really embodies what it is to be part of the community as well as supporting and growing it.

Independent, well run, well managed and well respected pubs are few and far between, and it is essential we support the team at The Cow in their endeavours - especially after the brutally difficult year the hospitality industry has faced.

I urge you to grant the necessary licences to allow The Cow to trade, and to continue to support local businesses that are so important to very many people in the locale.

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to show my support for The Cow in Notting Hill. The pub is an institution and one that I have frequented for the past 7 years, particularly since I moved to the Holland Park area 5 years ago.

I have been on first dates here, eaten delicious dinners, spent long sunny afternoons outside, time watching football and having lunch with friends and their children. Quite simply The Cow is there for every occasion, whether that be a quiet lunch or a fun evening of drinks with friends and meeting others from the local community. Yes, it can be boisterous; however that is why we love it and it has such a loyal clientele. The staff manage this atmosphere incredibly well, it feels fun and relaxed; however, within reasonable parameters and the notion of feeling unsafe is not one that's ever crossed my mind.

It would be a real blow to lose The Cow and all the memories it holds for so many of us. As we look forward to brighter, freer days I very much hope that I will be able to raise a toast at The Cow again.

Please don't hesitate to be in touch if you would like any further comments.

To whom this may concern,

I find it completely and utterly absurd that Westminster council have begun proceeds to review The Cow's license under the prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

and I spent several weekends (especially sundays) at the cow enjoying oysters and half a pint of Guinness with friends. The Cow is a staple of Notting Hill bringing in celebrities, foodies and friendly locals.

This year has been hard enough, we are losing so much within the hospitality industry, losing my old local would be devastating for not only myself as an ex local but for the entire community that the cow has brought together.

Myself and my friends have the fondest memories there and I'd LOVE to be able to return as soon as we are back to normal!!

I was saddened to hear that it is under threat. I have lived in west London for many years having moved south from and it has become somewhat of a local institution enjoyed by myself, family and friends on a regular basis .

I feel that without this pub, the community spirit of this small corner of London will be destroyed .

I am unaware of any issues with local noise levels or disturbance in the past that would negate the renewal of the licence.

Dear Sirs & Madams of the Council

I was deeply saddened to learn of the proposed review of the licensing status of the beloved The Cow in Westbourne Grove.

Not only is this institution a bastion of the local community - that rarest of places which brings together people of all walks of life - but it is one of very few pubs in London which serves a proper Guinness as good as you can get in Dublin.

It is a place of much jollity and warmth - places with such heart cannot be created but are borne from the very soul of the people who frequent them. To revoke the licence is not simply removing one choice in the list of local hostelries, but depriving the community of something much deeper.

As a Brit with Irish roots, it was a moment of deep pride to take my daughter there for lunch on New Year's Eve in 2019 where she tucked into some soda bread and I enjoyed the home-made soup and a plate of perfect oysters (and of course a Guinness to wash them down). We were welcomed by the staff and other patrons with great warmth and made to feel part of this little community.

Finally, the hospitality industry has already suffered a series of devastating blows for the last 12 months as a result of COVID-19 restrictions, with all the uncertainty and financial hardship this brings upon proprietors and staff alike. To revoke the licence of this fine establishment on top of this only goes to cause further suffering to the individuals who rely on it as a source of income.

Please reconsider and listen to your constituents and SAVE THE COW!

Best wishes

Dear Westminster Licensing Team,

I am writing to support our local pub - The Cow at 89 Westbourne Park Road. The Cow is an essential part of our community offering the opportunity for people from all walks of life to come together and socialise. The pub exemplifies community spirit!

In all our visits to The Cow, my husband and I have never witnessed any issues with anti-social behaviour, public nuisance, crime and disorder, safety or disturbance of local neighbours. In fact, the staff go out of their way to make sure this doesn't happen and are very respectful of the fact that the pub is in a residential area. There is an outdoor area, but it is extremely well-controlled.

If The Cow were to close, it would be a huge loss to the local community. With pubs all over the country teetering on the brink of survival, we need to do all we can to support our local pub, and we hope the Council will understand how much The Cow has meant to our community for over 25 years.

In the letter that was sent to us it stated that the timings for late night refreshments were Monday- Saturday: 23:00 to 00:30 and Sunday: 23:00- 00:00 which are not in line with the Sale by Retail of Alcohol which is Monday- Saturday: 10:00 to 00:00 and Sunday: 12:00- 23:30. I would also like to mention that the pub does go over the time limit.

The music causes lots of disruption to children and working people as they are very loud and noisy and the music goes on until late which makes it difficult for people to sleep. This affects young people going to school due to the loud noise.

I also want to make a representation of Crime and disorder e.g. selling drugs just opposite the pub to pubs customers and our area's children. People gather around to sell drugs and are involved in fights. Our children and sick elderly people can't peacefully sleep and relax as a result of the noise.

We would appreciate our concerns being heard and action being taken.

The Cow is part of our neighbourhood. It's part of the social fabric of the local community. It's truly one of the only places in the area where we find an incredible mix of people from all walks of life, ethnic backgrounds, young people, workers, pensioners, etc. We find the cow to be a very warm, inclusive and diverse environment where everyone respects each other. We have never witnessed or experienced any disorder or crime inside the pub, or even outside the pub.

At the Cow pub, we enjoy the occasional pint or, even better, a fantastic dinner after work during the week sometimes. The food is truly spectacular for a pub, we always try to congratulate Oscar, the black chef, who is the real hero of this place. He manages to deliver incredible quality dishes to customers, always in perfect fashion, in a very busy environment.

[REDACTED] I can say that we walk past the pub several times a week when going grocery shopping to the nearby shops on the road. So we can see people outside enjoying themselves with a pint and friends. Like any normal pub in London.

This is why we believe that we are well placed to give our opinion about this establishment in the context of its license being reviewed by the Council.

If the Cow ceases to exist, this will negatively impact the local community in addition to the huge damages already brought by the covid lockdowns to the local area. The minority-owned family shops nearby benefit from the crowd drained to the Cow from all parts of Notting Hill and London. Their sales will be impacted if the Cow no longer exists. These shops as well as the Cow pub constitute our neighbourhood, a fragile economic and social micro environment.

I hope Westminster Council will carefully assess and take into account the importance of the Cow pub for our local community.

Thank you for considering our view.

I thus find it very surprising that a license review is underway on these grounds. *Why do you believe The Cow is an asset?
The Cow has been my local restaurant pub from before I moved to the area. I know I can go in and see someone I know either behind the bar or having a chat at the tables. The friendliness of strangers and new friends coming together I have not experienced in other pub restaurants.
What does The Cow mean to you?
I'm an Aussie in Uk since 98. On each of my family visits I take my parents abs sister to the cow. It's a must for every trip they come here. Most recently we had a "flight of largers" made up for my mum as we chatted away with the bar staff. The fish stew is a meal that everyone talks about. It's the answer for a celebration or a cold night. The public room feels like your family lounge with everyone joining in and laughing along as you wriggle between the tables to squeeze another new friend in.
What are all the great things about The Cow does Westminster Council need to hear from you?
Adding to my above points: As a female there are not many places I feel I can go alone and feel safe and welcome.
Importantly, can you confirm that you have not experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow?
I have never experience any issues. I have left my jacket on the wall, my bag under the table and never felt worried or had issues.*

Dear Sirs

*I understand there ia a question about discontinuing the licensing of The Cow.
I do not understand how this could be an issue.
The Cow is a local institution. It serves the community, in fact it serves many local communities. It is possible to drop in for a quick or a long drink, and meet with friends or make new ones from many walks of life. You can eat a large or small meal downstairs and the upstairs food is fantastic. Friends from all over London often ask to visit me just so we can visit The Cow together. It is a relaxed safe and friendly environment.
I understand that you are contemplating refusing the continuation of the licensing of The Cow because of questions of crime, disorder, safety, and public nuisance. I have never, in all the years I have been regularly going there seen or heard of even one instance of any of these complaints.
Without The Cow the neighbourhood will be much the poorer. Please do not withdraw its licence.*

*Dear Westminster Council,
I'm writing to ask that The Cow is left to operate as it has done for the past 26 years.
I believe it is one of the only remaining, truly exceptional landmarks of Notting Hill / Westbourne Park, and it* would be a dreadful shame to see it disappear. In my opinion, there is no other pub that comes close to being in the same league as The Cow, in terms of the quality of food and drink it provides, and also the unique and wonderful atmosphere it houses. For me, it wins both by way of being the relaxed, casual, 'go-to' local and also by being the perfect spot to bring visitors - one of the legendary London pubs which never fails to impress. I have only ever had positive experiences in this favourite neighbourhood establishment. I confirm I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting. To see The Cow cease to operate would be an extremely upsetting occurrence, particularly on top of the difficult and for many, a very lonely time we're going through. Once coronavirus restrictions ease, I know many, like myself will be looking to catch up with family and friends, and celebrate the pub being open once again.

Please let this wonderful icon continue to flourish.

Dear Sir,

I have just been informed that the Cow might be forced to close down. This is terrible news. The Cow is part of the lives of people who are resident in this part of W2. I consider the Cow to be my "local". I am now a pensioner and I still go either to the pub on the ground floor or to the wonderful dining rooms above. I have never felt unsafe there - there is always a warm and friendly welcome. I have never felt unsafe walking home.

I try to make it to London at least one a year. More often than not, we celebrate our first day in town with our London friends at the Cow.

We've never experienced any trouble. And more often than not we walk there and back from our base close to the Lancaster Gate tube.

To us, the Cow is London. Thoughts of it not being there are quite sad indeed.

I know that our custom there doesn't do a lot for the Council coffers, but our London friends spend a lot there.

Please reconsider any thoughts you have about not extending the Cow's license.

Thanks so much.

My husband has also had many successful opportunities to meet up with colleagues there .

For us it represents happy times , a night out ,fond memories .

Please don't refuse it's licence ...

Pubs like this should be cherished, not admonished.

Dear Westminster Council,

I recently received an email asking me to help save The Cow pub. I am distraught - surely nobody is thinking of closing The Cow? Please save The Cow.

The Cow is a huge asset to the local community. It is a place where friends gather, the food and drinks are always five-star, the staff have been there forever and it is a reassuring part of such an impermanent and insecure world. People behave well and are polite to each other. It is old school, high quality, reassuring and an oasis and a haven in these nerve wracking times. You may not realise this, is you don't live around the Grove, but The Cow is a local institution. People have grown up there, had their first drinks there and go there still. It's a meeting point, it's part of our community and you cannot take it away. I was distraught when I was sent an email to ask me to help save it - please ensure that you protect this place. It has great sentimental value to people from miles around.

Hello,

I am writing to you concerning The Cow - the long established pub on Westbourne Park Road.

and have often enjoyed meeting friends and family for a drink or dinner at The Cow. We always loved its friendly ambience that was redolent of the old traditional pubs that have become so scarce these days.

A pub has been there since the early 1900s and for the last 26 years the Cow has continued the tradition and provided a wonderful meeting place for many local people of different ages and backgrounds. I am an ex local school teacher and know many people in the area. We have seen great changes around here and much that gave it its unique character has been swept away. I suppose that is one reason so many of us have valued the continuity of pubs such as The Cow.

I believe there is a licensing review and I am writing to add my name in wholehearted support of The Cow and its owner and its staff so that once this challenging time we have all been going through together is finally over landmarks such as The Cow will still be there, providing sorely needed warm and welcome spaces in which to reconnect with friends and acquaintances.

I am not a great drinker but I do like conviviality and community and for that have always enjoyed meeting friends at The Cow or, even better, occasionally treating ourselves to dinner in their excellent dining room where the food is simple but delicious.

In all the times I have been going there I have never had a bad experience nor have I witnessed anything untoward or of the slightest concern. The staff and management are very good indeed.

I hope that the licensing committee will bear in mind my letter of support for The Cow in its deliberations and grant The Cow the means of continuing to serve the locals of this community for many years into the future.

Hello,

I'm writing about the Cow: 21/00981/LIREVP

I've lived in London my whole life. I'm half American, and no stranger to the joys of places of New York, New Orleans or wherever else, but there's something in London that's always drawn me back.

London celebrates community.

London celebrates taste, smell, fun, and joy.

London takes deep pride in its history and institutions.

London takes deep pride in its people.

London creates spaces for people to come together in positive ways.

London creates reasons to be excited any day of the week.

You could swap out "London" for "the Cow" in all of the above. The Cow has been a constant in my time in London. First dates, overdue catch-ups, reading a book in the corner, or a pint of prawns when it's too hot to eat anything else. The Cow is representative of what it means to love London and we absolutely cannot let it go.

I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or any safety concerns during my many many visits to The Cow. It is only a place of happy memories for me, which is why I'm writing to strongly advocate for its continued place in our community.

Thank you,

To Whom It May Concern,

I have been a frequent visitor to The Cow in Westbourne Park Road, West London for nearly two decades now. This is a place that truly represents the meaning and value of the words 'Public House'. You're as likely to find yourself partaking in conversation with a pop star as much as someone who sells melons on Portobello Market. Throw in to the mix the long serving bar staff and the house staples; Guinness, decent wine, fish stew, oysters, pint of prawns and tagliolini and you have everything you'll ever need. But unnerving news arrives with the announcement by Westminster Council that the pub's license is under review. For what good reason I have no idea. In over 20 years of frequenting The Cow I have never seen disorder, disturbance or troubling behaviour of any kind. It is a civilised house for civilised people and to deny it its right to exist is the removal of one more brick from the foundations of the greatest city in the world.

To the Westminster City Council,

I write to you in order to express concern with regards to the review which The Cow is currently undergoing for its premises license. As a resident of Westbourne Park Road for twenty years I feel I have a firm understanding of both the culture and community this neighbourhood has, as well as their evolution. I can say with unwavering confidence that The Cow is a pillar of both aspects.

The Cow welcomes diversity and creates a safe and inclusive environment for people from all different walks of life to converge and connect. Spaces like these have become increasingly scarce, not only due to the pandemic but through the changing face of society into one of fear and disgust toward those who are unknown. An institution can only exist in this way through time and trust being poured into it by the community for over two decades. Its popularity and success is exemplary of this fact.

Losing The Cow would be devastating, not only for those that live here already, but also for all those who would find a sense of belonging in this neighbourhood behind its saloon doors. This place is unique and irreplaceable. It needs to be supported.

Yours faithfully,

It's a Notting Hill institution and so many parts of the neighbourhood I grew up in in the late 80s and 90s have changed beyond recognition already. We need to keep some of the soul of West London before it is ruined by property developers. The clientele of The Cow are generally affluent, non trouble makers and I have never, in all my 38 years experienced crime & disorder, safety issues or public nuisance when visiting The Cow!

Not to mention that the food is world class, the pint of prawns is one of my particular favourites and I am always suggesting it to guests from abroad.

Dear sir or madam,

Hope this message finds you well.

Today I am writing to kindly ask you to allow the local pub The Cow carry on trading.

The Cow has a special place in the local community and outside of it.

I believe that The Cow is an asset not only to the local community but also to us tourists. As a foreigner myself, I can confirm that The Cow is a beloved place for many London visitors. It is the first place we go to to feel at home and welcomed.

The Cow has a lot of meaning to me personally. I have grown fond of their amazing food, kind people and warm atmosphere. During these rough times I have been daydreaming on a daily about walking through The Cow's doors and seeing the familiar faces of the staff. I will be confident in saying that I am not alone with these thoughts.

I can confirm that during all my visits to The Cow I have never experienced any safety issues whatsoever. I have never experienced any type of crime or disorder and have always felt safe at The Cow. I have however experienced things like delicious food, happy and welcoming people of any origins and ages and the most considering and helpful staff I have ever seen. I dream of seeing them again after the pandemic, chat about our lives and have a laugh like in the good old days.

Thank you for taking time to read my letter.

I am writing to tell you what an important and loved asset The Cow pub is to me and the Borough. I have been visiting it for over 20 years for the fantastic good value, food, wines and Guinness it serves. It has been a centre of culinary excellence for 25 years. The Cow is the original gastropub that has helped make the area the popular place to live, visit and work in that it is today. Over the years and countless wonderful visits I have never seen any crime or disorder only very happy customers in a safe and merry environment. The Cow, is in fact legendary for its friendliness, and being one of the most popular and famous pubs in London. Westminster council is lucky to have it in its Borough. You would be doing me and all other London residents a huge dis-service if you were not to renew its Licence. It is vital place for me and many friends who live in very small flats in the area to socialise, eat and relax. It is the best West London living room and dining room you could ask for.

Dear Sir/Madam

I hope this email finds you well. I am writing to you regarding one of my cherished local destinations - The Cow Pub. I am sure this is not the only email you have received on the subject. I have looked on your website and have read the concerns and complaints with interest as a local resident. Fundamentally, I did not want to write to you along the lines of 'I love The Cow and love drinking there so please don't shut it down'. This is clearly true for a lot of people but it is so much more important than that, for so many of us....

Not only have I not experienced crime, disorder, nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow for over a decade, as I allude to above, The Cow performs a much more important role in the community. In an area which is increasingly tailored to the transient tourist community, this place has remained a steadfast pillar in the community for exactly that, the community. For me, it provides a 'safe harbour' - as someone living alone, it is a friendly place where I feel comfortable and enjoy the company of others, never under threat. I worry that my mental health could take a big step backwards if this is not available to me. It is a place that us locals feel like we belong - something I am not sure any other similar destination in the area provides. By removing The Cow, you will be removing a hugely important part of the fabric of the local community. We need this place.

I would be delighted to provide any further information you require and hope that my voice, alongside many others, will help you to understand how important the continued presence of The Cow is to our lives.

To whom it may concern

I was sad and very surprised to hear that The Cow was undergoing a license review. The pressure of Covid 19 knows no boundaries and whilst I read the reports and they suggest some minor infringements relating to draconian regulations brought to bare on all of us during this "apparent" pandemic, I feel their might be a touch of anti Cow sentiment among some locals and officials which has led to an over reaction. The management are exemplary and some of the leading lights in the industry!

The Cow is quite simply the best of the best. I have enjoyed it and the community spirit it galvanises since it opened. Even more so when Pedro joined what must be nearly 20 years ago.

My family have celebrated important occasions and milestones at The Cow and these have all been assisted by the fabulous team. Yavor, the manager, Pedro a the most dynamic host and Oscar the chef is a genius. They are both held in huge affection and love by my family. My daughters view them as special friends and they have supported us with fine food, wine, and ale, ever since we could all enjoy such fruits at this most incredible of places.

We beg you to consider the impact on the community of taking any action against this outstanding community asset. It must have a chance to breathe again and return to being the treasure trove of humanity it is!

Dear Sir / Madam,

SAVE THE COW PUB!

I moved to California a few years ago and The Cow remains my absolute favourite pub in England. While I'm not much of a pub person, The Cow is so much more than a pub, The Cow is unique.

The Cow represents community, family, fun and embodies so much of the London spirit that is so hard to put your finger on....

Whether we were there for a Christmas lunch or a friends birthday you would always bump into familiar faces and feel part of the amazing, indescribable community.

It's one of the only places you can enjoy amazing food and company and feel comfortable to meet new people and even go on your own and feel part of the spirit of things.

I miss The Cow so much that every time I go back to London I would make my friends come from all corners of London to meet me there so I could pretend for a few hours that I had never left, sharing fresh seafood and traditional British plates, it really is one of the most charming and friendly places. It is the jewel in the neighbourhood crown and has so much character and charm.

Having now lived in the states for a few years it would be absolutely devastating not to be able to come back to The Cow and bump into those friendly and familiar faces the next time I am back in town.

I have never experienced any kind of crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues - the pub is a very special place, and it is a warm, friendly hospitable team and family and it would be such a shame to let such a unique and special place close down.

It would be a huge loss for the community and neighbourhood. It is loved by people across London and those like myself who are even further afield in recent years.

We can't let this happen!

The owners of The Cow provide service to the communities of Notting Hill and Westbourne Grove and more importantly provide employment and livelihoods to dozen of staff who are have already been through a dreadful ordeal over the past year.

There is no valid reason why you should revoke their licence, thereby rendering their entire staff and owners unemployed.

You should allow them to operate and continue to serve the community and provide gainful employment for their staff and families.

Your sincerely

The Cow in Westminster, is a magnificent bastillion of the best of London's, & the UK's culture.. an establishment of fine dining, fine drinks and the greatest of music. To force it to close would be a tragedy, and great loss for our civilisation.

We ask for a public enquiry into these allegations, as we believe them to be unfounded, and most likely based on complaints of one influential resident, who feels the Cow brings down the tone of this part of London. We believe you've chosen the wrong place to live. Or you're tone deaf.

I have NEVER experienced any problems that have come from people socialising at The Cow. I sincerely believe that the The Cow establishment is a jewel in the area and I believe that The Cow actually helps to bring the value of that corner of London up. It would be a disaster for the local economy if The Cow was to leave the area. I believe that The Cow brings people together, brings tourists to the area and is a well respected establishment run by hardworking and respectable people.

To: Westminster City Council

I write with regard to the up-coming review of the premises licence of The Cow pub on Westbourne Park Road. I am a [REDACTED]

The Cow is a local institution, much loved for its oysters, Guinness and fierce commitment to warm hospitality. It is that rarest of things in modern London, an old-fashioned local which knows its customers and goes above and beyond to look after them.

Since the release of the first lockdown on July 4th, the Cow has clearly found itself in the eye of the Covid storm. The huge pent-up demand for human contact and hospitality, and the great love that the community feels for the Cow in particular, may have resulted in the pub being overwhelmed from time to time. Based on twenty years of regularly visiting The Cow, it is evident to me that the owner and management team are capable of operating the premises in a safe and responsible manner, in normal times. But these are obviously not normal times. The cycle of lockdown and release has created circumstances which any licensed premises will struggle to cope with, let alone a small, quirky venue with a substantial local fanbase like the Cow,

I urge the Council to be as lenient as possible in dealing with this matter, it would be a huge loss to the community if this pub were to close. In particular it would be damaging if too many restrictions were placed on the license, potentially affecting the unique and important character of the Cow as an institution. I note that the current suggested wording of conditions in the email from Glyn Franks dated 14 Aug 2020, at 09:48 seems generally proportionate, assuming any new conditions are deemed absolutely necessary (which I would argue they are not). It would be regrettable and heavy-handed if the Cow was mandated to have SIA staff, or if staff were required to wear hi-viz jackets at any time.

This would inevitably create the impression that what is a currently a neighbourhood pub had turned into a late-night venue, and might exacerbate the challenge of improving the management of the external area.

We have already lost too many West London pubs in recent years and many more premises will close before the pandemic is over even without the additional legal costs and proposed licensing restrictions arising from this review.

I am willing to attend the review to give the case from a resident's point of view if this helpful.

Yours sincerely

I discovered to my absolute horror that you might be considering revoking the premises license for The Cow.

Are you mad?

*The Cow is an Icon of a generation and will be for generations to come.
An institution that has centred the community for 25 years with friendliness, camaraderie and excellent service.
There isn't a pint of Guinness like it for 5 miles.
Ask yourself what came first - The Public House or the upwardly mobile Middle-class?*

*With 50 pubs a week across the UK closing down, this is the wrong move - Especially now following the Covid pandemic when our social lives are more important than anything else.
The pub borders a main road in the 'edgier end' of Westbourne Grove. Its been like this in this part of town for 50 years. It won't change, it will always have an edge, if you look at the geography of it you will understand why.*

Do us all a favour.

Put the love back into the community. Support your local businesses and do what needs to be done to give people the opportunity to get together and have a decent pin.

Yours faithfully,

To whom it might concern

I am a resident of the borough and a Tax payer.

I live local to The Cow, in Westbourne Gardens, and I was very disappointed to hear that this Council is considering suspending the licence of this historical Pub, so important among people of THIS Community, especially today, one year after SOCIALISING with other people became illegal.

This pub and restaurant is dear to our community and it's an asset for so many people who live alone and meet up with friends and family in that place, since decades.

I never, in over 12 years here, experienced any issue related to safety and crime, which actually is something related to many other crime hubs nearby which need further and deeper monitoring (Brunel, The area next to Lord Bridge, off Royal Oak station).

Depriving the Notting hill community of such an important, precious and valuable place where to gather, where to have fun, where to enjoy a great meal and drinks, would not be only a huge mistake but also a unjust action toward a community that struggle for an entire year and now it looks very much forward to flourish and be (finally) human again.

I would like to write in support of the Cow pub, which I understand is undergoing a licencing review at present.

The Cow is my favourite pub in all of London. I have been going for nearly eight years, since my now-fiancé took me there on our very first date. It is therefore extremely dear to me, but not just for the memories of that life-changing evening in May 2013 (maybe it was the man, maybe it was the Guinness), but for all the fun, fine food and warm welcomes had there since.

We've become friendly with Petro, the manager, struck up countless conversations with strangers, celebrated several St Patrick's Days, always call by for a pint at Carnival and two of our best friends held their wedding reception there in 2019. We even rented a place around the corner from it for two years, and a key factor in taking that flat was proximity to the Cow!

When friends come visiting from overseas or out of town, a pint of prawns and a glass of wine there is a must. It really is the best of London pubs and a real locals' gem. I have missed it so much during lockdown and can't wait to go back once it's safe to do so.

I have never experienced any trouble at the Cow; I wouldn't bring my elderly parents and their friends there if I had.

Looking forward to many more happy days and nights at the Cow,

Dear Council,

It has come to my awareness that Westminster City Council have issued a Review of The Cow's Premises Licence. "The review has been sought on the grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder"

However I would like to stress how much the COW is VALUED in our community. It is our local spot/restaurant bar pre-covid, and I really hope it can still remain post covid.

I hope you can reconsider your review, with the knowledge of how well LOVED the COW is by its clients and community.

Thank you

Dear Westminster

I love "The Cow" and have been visiting it for 20 years .. it's a West London Institution and would be a tragedy if its licence were to be withdrawn.

Many pubs are owned by huge and faceless companies now - they have no identity, no character, no charm and mean nothing to the local community. The Cow is unique for its charm and personality. Please don't remove its licence.

Thanks

To whom it may concern,

I am writing today regarding the License Review of 'The Cow' on 89 Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH.

As a regular customer for the past 5 years, I can guarantee that The Cow is to the neighbourhood and its people more than just a pub. It is part of the community and it has proven this throughout the years, not only with excellent customer service, amazing atmosphere and high quality of food and drinks, but most importantly by bringing together people from different backgrounds and diverse lifestyles, fully expressing the heart of Westbourne.

Furthermore, I confirm that I've never experienced any crime, disorder, public nuisance or safety issues or have heard of anyone witnessing any such behaviour or incidents whilst visiting the Cow.

I do believe that the Cow is a great asset to the neighbourhood and it would be a great loss for the community if it wasn't to continue its vibrant, unique and important existence.

With Best Wishes,

The Cow is an institution in Notting Hill

Tom Conran created a unique drinking experience

Having lived in the area for more years than I care to admit the Cow was a watering hole that welcomed everyone. Tom didn't alienate any of the regulars who had been a constant before he even took over; everyone was welcome!

That's genius !

The most important element is the Cow never tried to be flash or hip just a great place where you felt welcome to meet friends and familiar faces A lot of the staff have been there forever that must say something for the institution it has become in the area. A true rarity!

It would be a tremendous loss to the community when in these days of so many drastic changes locals need to have somewhere they are familiar with when we finally emerge from this dark place we have been dealing with the last year.

Please reconsider this closure

Yours truly

I have been regularly frequenting The Cow for around seven years during which time I could only be amazed at how it is owned and managed by an extremely capable team, making this place a real institution in West London. The Cow's team leave no stones unturned making sure their guests have a memorable and safe experience. I have never felt unsafe in any way whether inside or outside of this great pub nor have I heard of any serious issues related to this place.

Quite simply, I've only ever had my experience of the borough, and indeed London, enhanced by trips to The Cow.

I always lived east or south of the river (12 years of my adult life), never near the Cow, yet I frequented it more than most other venues in London. Having moved back to Dublin in 2018, I miss an evening in the Cow more than anywhere else.

It's a traditional establishment that always upheld that which great about the London food and drink scene. Patrons, in my experience, were always friendly, interesting, quirky and respectful.

Should local residents have complaints about noise and so forth, I encourage you to look elsewhere for a cause or a solution. Blame does not lie with the Cow. At a time like this, it's important to support the best in class. The Cow is that, and more. It's a cultural treasure. It should be considered for being listed before it is considered having its license removed.

This letter has been drafted in response to the recent license review for The Cow.

[REDACTED]. At no time in my almost ten years of frequenting this establishment have I ever experienced any crime or nuisance. Quite the opposite in fact, The Cow has been a venue where I have come to seek solace, a moment of respite, a friendly face. It is where I have had several of my first dates with my now fiancé, where I have come with friends for a warming meal after a long day at work, where I bring my friends from out of town to experience 'one of the best pubs in London' and where I have been welcomed with open arms and a smiling face, every. Single. Time.

So dear is this establishment to me, that I have even considered hosting my wedding reception here and have one of the iconic Guinness Posters from the dining room hanging in my kitchen, after Mr Conran so kindly allowed me to purchase it at an incredibly fair price as a 30th birthday gift for my now fiancé (it may have even been the reason he proposed!).

For me, The Cow is not 'just a pub' - it has become an integral part of the fabric of our community. Where people go to meet friends and make new ones without any prejudice whatsoever. The Cow exudes an atmosphere, an ambiance that can only be built with time and by people who truly care and look after their customers - to me, the notion of crime, nuisance or any disorder taking place here is preposterous.

I urge you to treat the wonderful people who work here with the same warmth, generosity of spirit and kindness with which they treat their customers. Notting Hill and London would never be the same without The Cow, and were it to cease, it would leave a void that could never be filled.

Best wishes,

I am a local resident of 15 years plus in Notting Hill.

I understand there is to be a review of The Cow's license on Westbourne Park Road.

This is an absolute outrage. It is nothing less than a cruel attack. This pub is so loved by many and is an excellent example of a British public house...in fact probably one of the best.

When I look around Notting Hill, this pub gives me the very least concern but yet you choose to demonise it?

I suggest you use your time much more wisely to look at those pubs where there are commonly drug dealers frequenting them and dangerous criminals inside.

This pub is nothing but a wonder, full of well meaning, loyal, local Residents. I urge you to find your common sense once again and throw this review idea in the bin. Focus on what is ACTUALLY NEEDED IN THE LOCAL AREA, and WHAT IS ACTUALLY A PROBLEM!!!

As a very local resident to The Cow, I wanted to make you aware how important The Cow is to the community. I have been going to The Cow with my family since my early teens (now 32) and have shared many a drink, lunch, dinner (I would go for breakfast if that were possible) with friends and family. Without wanting to sound too sentimental, it's a very important place for me and my family, where I've gone to celebrate with others, as well as drink to loved ones that have passed. The warmth and welcoming feeling in The Cow, largely to do with the amazing people that work there, has never waivered since I first stepped foot inside and I have got to know several of the staff who have worked tirelessly to keep the place going over the past year within the boundaries of government and safety regulation. In my circa 18 years of going to the pub I have never experienced crime, disorder, public nuisance or any safety issues. I currently live within a stone's throw from the pub and have never considered there to be any issues with noise or a public nuisance, as a Westminster resident, let alone a customer. I can honestly say I miss walking past and seeing someone sitting outside with a pint of prawns in hand and waving at whoever's working inside. There is so much positivity associated with The Cow in the community that I would go as far to say that it really is an asset to the area and upholds the true values of what it is to be a Londoner - equality, togetherness and inclusivity.

In all honesty, I don't think I have ever had to write to the council on anything before but this is very important to both me and my family, hence I thought worth letting you know. Happy to expand further, if and when needed.

Dear Sirs

Re Review of The Cow's Premises Licence

When The Cow opened 26 years ago it was a revelation to the neighbourhood - a great pub, welcome to all, serving absolutely delicious food. And that has never changed.

The Cow is a huge asset to the area - somewhere warm and welcoming to go to, where you can enjoy a pint and a packet of Taytos, or have a full blown feast. If one is feeling bored or lonely, The Cow welcomes you in - I have often wandered in alone and always find someone to talk to, whether with the smokers outside, the bar-persons inside, or any of the regulars - the mood is one of friendliness, sociability and community. It is also a great place to catch up on local news, and meet newcomers to the neighbourhood. This will be needed more than ever, especially for the more vulnerable members of the community who will be feeling the effects of the pandemic and several lockdowns acutely.

When Crazy Homies and Lucky Seven closed, their absence was and is felt by many. A terrible result which has done nothing to serve the neighbourhood, indeed the opposite - empty premises are like ghosts, and make the area slum like - a huge loss caused (I heard) by opportunistic landlords. These were terrific restaurants, enjoyed hugely by the community (and those who came to the area specifically to experience them). The Cow is the same - plus their chefs serve some of the best food in London - from a pie and mash to seafood mountains, and the team are simply fantastic. People come to the area for The Cow - this can only be a go thing, for The Cow and other local businesses.

I am surprised to hear that there are concerns about public nuisance or safety - I have never experienced any problems at The Cow, and I am a regular and have been since it opened. We live around the corner and The Cow is our local, not only because of convenience but because it is the best.

It may be popular - and for very good reason - but I have never witnessed any form of nuisance, crime, or felt unsafe while there.

If the Council is concerned about crime, nuisance and safety, it is looking in the wrong place if it is looking at The Cow. Residents of the area are plagued by burglary and mugging, but that has nothing to do with The Cow or indeed any of the other local pubs. If the Council wants to serve the community, I recommend that the Council focus its efforts on slowing down the cars speeding up and down Chepstow Road, stop drivers openly selling drugs on Talbot Road and the little park off it, and install CCTV cameras in the area and reinstate some local bobbies.

The Cow is an asset and it would be sorely missed by so many - indeed, any threatened closure would likely lead to public disorder and nuisance as I do not think tax paying residents would accept that lightly.

I am happy to give evidence or other support to The Cow further if required.

Best wishes to Tom and his team and we look forward to the day when we can visit you again.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I write to you to speak of The Cow, Westbourne Park Rd, London.

For decades I have always felt completely welcomed in this beautiful establishment.

The staff have always been warm and more than helpful and the amount of attention spent on decor, layout and choice of drinks and food are most excellent indeed! And completely unique to anywhere in the world.

I work in the hospitality industry and have done for 35 years. So I know how much hard work goes into making a place feel really good, as soon as you walk into the door!

The Cow is the epitome of a great London Pub.

Also, being Irish, there are only a handful of great London pubs that serve excellent Guinness.

The Cow is most definitely a place I'd go to to feel a connection to my homeland. Which is vital to making all who live and work in London feel welcomed and safe.

This feeling is paramount to making one feel at home, secure and comfortable.

On this note I can confirm I have never experienced crime and disorder, public nuisance or issues whilst visiting The Cow, Quite the reverse!

I have always felt like being in The Cow was like being in a lively abode of dear friends. This is something you cannot replicate. This is a feeling that comes from years of love, dedication and hard work! Everyone needs a place that's home from home where they can go to unwind, relax and let go of life's stresses before going home, so home life is peaceful and stress free!

Surely everyone knows that!?

More so now than ever.

I pray you'll find compassion in your hearts and let The Cow carry on its magnificent role in aiding our lives so wonderfully.

I was deeply saddened to hear that The Cow Pub's license is under review.

The cow is an iconic landmark in west London. It attracts tourists, locals, tradesmen, fine diners and young professionals.

It's a place where young and old can sit together and share stories, life experiences and even a song. We all need places like The Cow, especially when there is so much change in the world, having a familiar place where you are guaranteed to see a friendly face is a great comfort.

It's the only pub in London where I have never seen anyone discriminated by income, age, race or sex. This is so important where £10 million pound houses sit alongside social housing.

For those who live alone, and have suffered immensely from isolating lockdowns, they will be looking forward to the doors of this indiscriminating pub opening once again, so that they can feel a part of a dynamic community. It will be what keeps them going!

Please keep this institution open we are longing for are all depending.

Good morning,

I am writing to you regarding the news that you are reviewing the licence of The Cow public house in Notting Hill. The grounds of this review are, I believe, the prevention of public nuisance and public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder.

We are living in difficult times and people are looking forward to the end of lockdown and getting together for a few pints and a good meal to reconnect. Oh how we have missed each other so badly.

It is during this lockdown that perspectives and priorities have changed. Everything we took for granted will never be taken for granted again. Arguably the most common line I am hearing from my friends is 'I cannot wait to get down the pub for a pint'.

The importance of pubs to our city has been realised by so many. They are where we go to unwind, to celebrate, to drown our sorrows, to remember friends no longer with us, to eat something we don't cook at home, to connect not just with each other but with the staff too. Many become good friends, many become our therapists and many offer comfort to the elderly widow or widower when they don't want to be alone in the house. I have seen this so many times in London pubs. Just the little fact that someone can get up and go to the bar and get served without having to tell the bar person what they want, who knows them by their name is a beautiful and important thing.

Now more than ever we need to protect our pubs, our city's little treasures. Loved by locals, adored by tourists.

The Cow is a wonderful, traditional establishment. The staff are incredible, many of whom have worked there over many years. The decor is worth the visit alone and the food is just sublime. It is an important part of the community and to that part of Notting Hill. The area would not be the same if it was closed. The character of the area would change and local businesses would suffer I am in no doubt.

I have drunk and eaten in The Cow countless times. I have never witnessed any crime and never have I felt unsafe there. The clients are respectable and are not a public nuisance and do not generate any disorder whatsoever.

Having worked in Mayfair for many years which hosts a great deal of pubs with limited outdoor space, it would not be consistent to not renew the licence of The Cow and keep every pub in Mayfair open. I can assure you I speak with great experience in this regard.

Please keep The Cow open. It means so much to so many people not just in the area, London, the UK, but abroad too. We need to look after our city's assets not replace them. You cannot replace the irreplaceable.

Many thanks

I was deeply saddened to hear that The Cow Pub's license is under review.

The cow is an iconic landmark in west London. It attracts tourists, locals, tradesmen, fine diners and young professionals.

It's a place where young and old can sit together and share stories, life experiences and even a song.

We all need places like The Cow, especially when there is so much change in the world, having a familiar place where you are guaranteed to see a friendly face is a great comfort.

For those who live alone, and have suffered immensely from isolating lockdowns, they will be looking forward to the doors of this indiscriminating pub opening once again, so that they can feel a part of a dynamic community. It will be what keeps them going!

As I young woman I have never felt uncomfortable or unsafe sat alone, and I have never once had my bag stolen or experienced any other crime or disorder - In fact I have experienced the opposite! I once left my hand bag and it was returned to me the next day...still with cash in my wallet! Please keep this institution open! We are all depending on it!

Dear Sir/Madame

I am writing in regards to your decision to review the license of my favourite place to drink a proper pint of extra cold Guinness, The Cow. Over the years I have enjoyed drinking and eating amazing food there and being served by polite and caring people . What really pushed me to send this email is the grounds of which this decision has been made, 'public nuisance , public safety and the prevention of crime and disorder' I never have seen any of those during the time I spend there , I always felt safe , welcomed . Compare with what I've seen around London pubs The Cow is the safest place to enjoy a meal , drinking , socialising so please , please don't take away our Cow . We love it.

Kind Regards .

To whom it may concern,

I was shocked to hear that The Crow's Premises Licence was under review.

Born and raised in London, The Cow has been home to many happy memories and life milestones. It's more than a pub or a place to meet friends for a drink after work, it's a place of acceptance, warmth, great food and a staple of London history and culture and it allows dogs!

I can't even begin to fathom how or why the notion of an establishment like The Cow could be thought of as a place that causes crime and disorder? There are many other establishments that I can think of that do deserve their premises licence to be questioned over these issues but not The Cow.

I spent the last night of 2018 at The Cow. New Years Eve. It is, to this day, one of the happiest memories I treasure to date. The reason we chose to spend it at The Cow was because we know it would not be grotesquely crowded, there would not be hords of intoxicated, disorderly people celebrating and it's a safe and local space for three girls to celebrate with other people and have a dance (a forigen concept in these times!). Even on New Years Eve at no point did me or my friends feel that anyone was a public nuisance, putting risk to other members of the public or in any way being disorderly. There was a bouncer on the door, who was kind but firm and did turn away a couple of people who were too rowdy and did not even let them enter the premises. This is why it remains and will remain a beacon of London life, for families, friends, couples, dogs and people who are just seeking a nice place to sit and enjoy a good glass of wine and home cooked food.

I have never experienced even the smallest hint of crime and disorder, public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

Please, please, don t close it down or revoke its licence. London is already losing too many important, historical establishments to COVID, we can't lose this one too. Please.

Dear Westminster City Council,

I'm writing to express my support for the renewal of the license for the Cow Pub. The Cow is a refuge for many, many souls, and is an anchor to the community. For somewhere so fiercely local and community driven to have so far thrived is testament to the Cow and all it stands for.

I am imagining this is one of many, many emails you are receiving about this pub; it's rare for a business to touch so many people. It would be a real loss to the area—indeed London—if the Cow were to close its doors after last orders in the near future.

I do hope you reconsider, and allow the business to continue to serve the neighborhood in the magical way it has done over the years.

Hi!

I moved to London a year and a half ago and my life would not be the same without The Cow. It was, the short times during COVID/ pre-Covid I've gone, the central fixture of so many memories, of so many different social scenes, and o so many people's lives. Every pub, integral to British social life, absolutely pales in comparison. Not only does it have innovative, delectable food, a wonderful atmosphere, it exudes incredible energy that impact everyone around it. I can't tell you how many times I and everyone around me went on a Sunday and were brightened by being there. That is very rare in a single institution and the entirety of West London would be hard pressed to find a replacement, nor should they have to! It is a singularly incredible place and strives to bring warmth and cosiness to its many adoring patrons.

I've never witnessed anything untoward, illegal, discomfoting, or annoying at The Cow nor have I ever heard of anything to complain about, except for not being able to get a table!

Thank you,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I write this short note in support of the licensing of The Cow, Westbourne Park Rd. It is a wonderful addition to our community and an example of exactly what a local, well run pub can be. Clean, cared for, lively, safe and offering terrific food and drink with great service.

Don't snuff out its flame. We need to encourage more of this kind of establishment, now more than ever.

When the pandemic passes and we're all back on our feet and ready to meet the world again, we will need to talk about these strange times, reconnect with each other and embrace the familiar. A good pint with an old friend. Let The Cow play its part in bringing us Londoners back together again.

Dear Westminster Council-

I'm writing to you to express my love for The Cow. I am not a Londoner but rather a US citizen writing from across the pond. I'm New Yorker where I've resided for the last 20 years.

Long story short, I worked for [REDACTED], [REDACTED], years ago and our UK showroom was [REDACTED]. The Cow was a mandatory visit when I was in Knotting Hill for business. Heck it was for any of us who popped into town. I was there twice a year for a period of 7 years and each time I had a meal and several pints there with colleagues or clients and honestly it was some of the best times I had in London. It's not a secret that the food is just alright-- but it's the authentic colorful characters and their selection of music and topics of discussion that makes the place a relic.

In more recent visits to London I took my wife and her colleagues for a Sunday pint and diner. We had an absolute blast and a meal not to be forgotten. To do away with this place is to do away with a spirit of the neighborhood and fond memories of a place with so much character and legacy.

I've never experienced any negative going on's in the establishment. Let The Cow be please.

Warmest,

I spent about 2 evenings per week, every week in the cow when I was living in my own and at a lonely time in my life, the cow was always a place where I could seek company and make friends.

In all the visits I made to the cow, I did not experience even a loud voice, never mind any fracas or disagreement in this establishment. Any accusations of anything to the contrary, to mind mind is simply false. I would opine that the source of this complaint might be a disgruntled resident with false accusations.

Finally, it has to be noted, in my experience, the average age of the customers, must be 50+, certainly not the type of clientele who bother with making noise or fighting.

This review should be looked at from a community as a whole and the benefits we derive from the cow. Not from the opinions of a few neighbours who are happy to take great food, a safe haven and more importantly jobs from the area.

As a resident of Notting Hill for 35 years I feel qualified to pass judgement on which establishments in this borough are worth keeping and which are not. The Cow is without doubt one of the places which draws in everyone from celebrities to the common Londoner and losing it would not only be a loss to the borough but also to London itself as can be seen by the 5.5k Instagram followers it holds and the 16.5k tags it has, it is one of the most popular pubs in London!

I personally have had many happy times there from my birthday to friends christening parties, and never have I seen any kind of activity that would be considered a nuisance or any of the other untrue accusations which this institution is being accused of.

It would not only be a disaster to close it, but it would add to the issue of London pubs closing down when they should be supported before we end up losing our heritage and the loss of one of the great pubs of London.

I urge you strongly to reconsider any idea of closing this pub and to consider what is best for the locals of the borough, the pub trade in this city and for London's heritage.

licence for The Cow pub on Westbourne Grove.

[REDACTED], and The Cow Pub has been a staple pop in for all our staff and clients since we opened. Not only that but I have been a regular customer for all the years the pub has operated!

I find it odd that the licence review is on the 'grounds of prevention of public nuisance, public safety & prevention of crime & disorder', whilst as a neighbour, I can verify that there is no such complaint from me or from any one in the shops near us. In fact we find the pub's proximity to be the the very antithesis of your proposal. They offer us safety & security against crime & disorder by simply being open!

Not only do they offer us a sense of community & good neighbourly spirit but they're also a deterrent against street pick - pockets and mobile thieves.

I am surprised that at a time of such economic devastation to the retail & restaurant sector you are seriously considering revoking the licence of our neighbourly institution on the grounds of what appears to be a flimsy reason!

1,300 pubs have been shut down from the high street in the last year with at least 25 pubs shutting down each week.

Surely, you as a borough representing the needs of your residents should be focusing on the well being of whom you represent rather than being lured by the prospect of yet another developer coming in and swooping at another profit churning opportunity to the detriment of your residents!

We would all be grateful if you do the right thing at a time of great social & economic challenge for all of us!

The Cow is an asset to the neighborhood and surrounding neighborhoods, offering a unique setting and "other worldly" feel that can only come from a longstanding relationship with its patrons. One feels that from the moment you walk through the doors. You can feel its soul...and that is so important in this ever-changing world of ghastly brightly-lit, trend-following establishments that will be gone in 4 months time. Please let The Cow continue to offer its traditional yet eclectic beverages and fare to those who seek a moment's peace. And no, I have never experienced any public nuisance or safety issues whilst visiting The Cow.

Hi there, I am making a private representation on behalf of myself and my wife, [REDACTED], arguing for the continued licensing and operation of The Cow Bar and Dinning Rooms.

We have regularly been visiting The Cow for nearly 25 years. It is a fixture of the area and a remarkable point of continuity. It provides an incredibly friendly atmosphere, well looked after beers and top quality food. It's deservedly considered one of the best pubs in the area - and probably London.

The pub is supported by local people and is hugely appreciated and valued. The clientele are very well mannered and considerate of the neighbourhood and passers by. In 25 years I have never seen any rowdiness or poor behaviour. It's the closest place I have seen to a community pub that reflects the area and is part of the local fabric. It would be an extraordinarily unpopular action for the Council to not continue the license at The Cow.

With my business partners I opened [REDACTED] a short while before Tom Conran opened The Cow 26 years ago. The police used to come and talk to us now and again and told us that The Cow then was a complete no-go area for them. It was a destination for the worst criminal element in the community. Mr Conran acquired it and made it into the wonderful, warm, stylish, embracing pub we have all frequented and enjoyed for 26 years. Huge credit must be given to him for cleaning up the area and providing a much loved social amenity. I have never experienced rowdiness or bad behaviour or indeed any problems of access to the road. Depriving the community of the conviviality and pleasure that The Cow provides would be a very retrograde step and I sincerely hope Westminster Council does not revoke or change Mr Conran's license and allows the pub to trade as before.

The following relates to the case reference 21/00981/LIREVP.

I cannot speak for the private behavior of the Cow's ownership but as a local resident [REDACTED] I believe strongly that any action to punish, control, tame or influence it as an institution would be wrong. It is a vulnerable, rare and valued public house that is held in the highest regard by both locals and visitors to the area alike.

The Cow has character, the type that almost no other local pub, restaurant or bar can claim to. It would not be pushing it too far to say that it is unique within West London. What it represents is no pastiche, it is true to its surroundings and offers what it always has and all good pubs should, a comforting, welcoming, beautiful and fun place for people to meet, drink and eat delicious food.

The staff of the Cow exemplify each of my above points. The longevity of their service and the evident skill with which they conduct their roles is obvious to see.

If you wish to make a justifiable point, consider it made. Any further action will only punish us, the innocent and dedicated locals (and taxpayers) who I think have quite clearly made our voices heard, and the staff, who rely on this pub for employment.

I'm writing in support of The Cow pub and restaurant. Last summer, I returned from living in New York after eight years, and one of the first places I went to for some lunch and a drink with a couple of friends was The Cow. New York has a lot of great eating and drinking establishments, but nowhere in America comes close to emulating the best of British pub culture, and the Cow is one of the finest examples of that. Before I moved to New York, I went to the Cow on various occasions, day and evening, and never once noticed anything untoward in terms of nuisance, safety or disorder. I really believe that The Cow and other fine establishments like it are absolutely essential to the social fabric of our neighbourhoods, and an important part of what makes London life the envy of other cities. We must not kill off those things that make us great.

Hi - I am writing to quote the reference in subject "21/00981/LIREVP" about saving The Cow please.

The Cow is a place where I've shared many memories with friends ... the St David's day dinners with Rhys Ifans at the bar making everyone laugh... my 5th wedding anniversary dinner with my husband when we shared the seafood platter and many pints of Guinness... the first (and last!) pub where my son accidentally tried Guinness. It is an establishment full of love, happy memories, sad memories, laughs, life, creativity, and genuinely the most authentic place in London.

Please renew their license, in the spirit of a culture that is slowly disappearing due to gentrification we need to keep these kinds of cultural experiences alive and well for our future generations and the sake of the public.

To whom it may concern,

I have lived in Notting for over 20 years and The Cow has been my local pub for all that time. The Cow is the heart of the Notting Hill community, our local "Cheers" where everybody knows your name. It's my destination point to catch up with all my friends, a home away from home as it were where you know you will be in a totally safe, homely environment.

Everyone there is so friendly and kind, you can go in alone and leave with a lifetime friend. Tom and all the staff are amazing, Luti and Pedro to name just two. This is a place you go to see locals. Most of the people you see in there have been going for decades and we all know each other. It would be heartbreaking to see it go.

I understand that it is under review for safety, crime and disorder. This is utterly untrue, if anything, it's one of the safest pubs in London. It's the only place I feel safe to go to alone. Further more, I would like to say that I have never witnessed any crime, disorder, safety issues or public nuisance in all the time I've been going there, and I go nearly every week.

If you need any further information, don't hesitate to contact me.

Dear sirs,

I am writing to you in relation to the Cow pub in Notting Hill and its license review

I firmly believe the Cow is an asset as it is a cultural, social and culinary destination of London and particularly Notting Hill. It is beyond a pub, it's an institution.

What does the Cow mean to me? I've had some of the happiest times in the Cow so it means a lot.

A few great things about the Cow include:

- sense of community
- neighbourhood
- quality of produce
- quality of service

together.

For much of the last thousand years, the pub is where we've socialised with friends new and old, met spouses, celebrated birthdays and weddings, and said goodbye to loved ones.

Never more so than this establishment .

As we know, this VITAL social history of Britain is fading frighteningly fast..

The Cow is where I meet with good friends , talk business and meet some of the social cream of Notting Hill....

Founding member of The Groucho Soho? Check....

Haute' Couturier? Check...

Aircraft Engineer/Musician/Stylist/Artist/Armed Forces/Wine supplier/Movie special effects Director/ Movie Producers...

.....check

The varied list is unbelievably endless..I've not come across a place like it..

Ever.....

I've lived in the Notting Hill area for 28yrs..Trust me, the surroundings have changed (partly for the good) almost beyond recognition

But

I have NEVER EVER witnessed a crime , a fight, stolen property or any sort of unruly behaviour....

I must say this, Its one of the very few establishments that I can walk up to at night & never feel threatened at all Period!

The Cow has achieved the impossible (by todays standards) ..maintained quality clientele and the best atmosphere by far (nearly every pub in the area has changed hands countless times) and has a gentle easy atmosphere...never ever aggressive or unruly!! On the whole the clientele is of an older demographic..of which I am one..

I am welcomed not just with my drink served at the Bar before I step up to it, But Petro will run round the bar & give me a hug..

Tom, the owner, will do the same (despite sometimes tweaking my nipples v hard)

George Orwell celebrated the pub as part of the informal cultural network that we choose for ourselves rather than having our leisure pursuits chosen from above.

In 1946 George Orwell's wrote an essay, The Moon Under Water, which is a absolute classic about British pubs. Orwell's pink china mugs, liver sausage sandwiches, scotch eggs and barmaids who call you 'dear' may sound archaic now, but the unique spirit they create - where as a punter you feel not just like a customer, but a stakeholder in the establishment - is still present in ways Orwell would recognise. That is The Cow in a nutshell....

So when pubs had to close on the 20th of March, it felt like Coronavirus was a bombshell not just physically, but to our very culture and the bonds that tie us together. We all knew it was coming, and on my last visit to The Cow, I realised (despite I'm not a visitor every evening) this was a place I'd greatly miss I've drank a few beers under lockdown, supporting my local breweries by buying from them direct.

But nothing is quite like a freshly poured pint (or must say Guinness - the best in West London)

The weight of the cooling glass, the first pint clearing the dust and cobwebs of the day, surrounded by enlightening conversation....

The only thing that makes this better is being somewhere with others enjoying the same experience, a silent moment of communion with friends at The Cow I've known for years, or even friends you've only ever met in The Cow, knowing that you're sharing a moment that is simultaneously normal and banal & guaranteed barking hilarious,

But yet also, marvellous to a degree ,where I often remember these moments for the rest of my life (& believe me , Ive met some utterly incredibly talented people there!) Assuming you can find a space at the bar, aside from getting up close and personal with the most incredible locals, you'll be able to come face to face (literally) with The Cows famously brilliant de_ "øcor. Tom Conran has collected an amazing smorgasbord of Guinness advertising art....its even more Irish than a Dublin pub....

The walls display a range of particularly weird and wonderful objets d'art/paintings and curiosities . The crowning glory is main painting ,which is stunning, graces the stair wall in which the great and the good who have graced The Cow for years are illustrated and enshrined in acrylic paints..their likeness preserved as comic characters..

I am honoured to be one of them...I hold the banner NIRVANA...

I couldn't of put it better myself...

I implore all those who read this to look kindly upon The Cow

Yours

Re: Premises Licence Review - The Cow, 89 Westbourne Park Road

I have been a patron of The Cow since 1996.

There is a reason why The Cow has been able to continue business uninterrupted for 26 years, and that's the community spirit it evokes, both within the pub and within the area.

It promotes a positive and progressive image of West London and its community, and is celebrated not only in the UK, but also recognised worldwide as one of Britain's best independent pubs. It's been awarded Pub of The Year by The Evening Standard, and featured in globally recognised food guides such as the Michelin Guide and Zagat Food Guide. I know people come as far as Japan and Australia to experience the pub and its atmosphere.

The pub has played an important part in the regeneration of Westbourne Park Road, and has long survived all of the other local drinking establishments by many years. Incredibly, the pub has employed some members of staff for 25 years straight.

The Cow is synonymous with the simple pleasures of food, drink, friendship and good company. For many years, The Cow has celebrated key calendar dates, which have become cherished moments for their customers and for their neighbours, from St Patrick's Day, to Notting Hill Carnival and New Year's Eve.

In my many visits to The Cow, I have not at any time experienced issues with crime or disorder, public nuisance or safety. I would say it's an incredibly welcoming place. The Cow's clientele is genuinely reflective of the area's diversity. There aren't many pubs left in London where you can take a seat at the bar and strike up a friendly conversation with a stranger.

Although I now live in South East London, when the opportunity arrives (and particularly when I have friends or family visiting from overseas) I love to bring them to The Cow. It is a place that hosts fantastic memories for myself and my friends.

It's one of the best pubs in the world, and a testament to its owners that it continues to shine so brightly some 25 years on.

I feel strongly that The Cow deserves its rightful place as an outstanding drinking and eating establishment, and removing the licence of The Cow would result in a terrible loss in London's social, cultural and culinary scenes, and frankly, a deeply embarrassing misstep by the City of Westminster.

Please don't hesitate to contact me should you have any further questions. I can be contacted at [REDACTED] or on [REDACTED]

Re: Westminster City Council - License Review - Reference Number: 21/00981/LIREVP

Dear Sir or Madam,

It's not often I spend time to put pen to paper (or finger to keyboard :- ) to write a long letter these days - short and concise emails tend to get me by (as I am sure they do for you also), but after reading that The Cow pub is under license review from Westminster City Council I had to act immediately. This is a local establishment I am so deeply passionate about I had to lay my feelings bare and down in words. It made me think a great deal about what this place really means to me, feelings that are brought into even greater clarity and resolution with the current lockdown restrictions and the pub being closed. So here we go...

Firstly for me personally it is a place I can come to and have a pint or two of Guinness (the best pint of Guinness you will find this side of St. James's Gate) and a very decent hot meal (the fish stew being my favorite - with a potato gratin on the side if I am feeling hungry). It also has a vinyl jukebox - for me vinyl only way to listen to music. A place that has enabled me to engage with the local community - I have made many close friends here from all walks of life... all people with their own important story to tell, also people to listen to my own story. A place where the pub landlord and staff treat you like family.

It may sound funny but The Cow reminds me of the lyrics from the classic TV show 'Cheers' that I used to watch when I was growing up:

*"Be glad there's one place in the world
Where everybody knows your name
And they're always glad you came
You want to go where people know
People are all the same
You want to go where everybody knows your name"*

So looking at these lyrics now for the first time in some 35+ years they are in fact very poignant...

The Cow welcomes all facets of society through it's doors, inequality does not exist in this establishment. It's really the only place I know where you could be sitting next to and having a deep conversation with a local tradesperson, school teacher or social worker while David Beckham (or other celebrity, or company CEO...) is having a quiet pint at the bar, it's a melting pot representing all walks of life... it does not discriminate, nor do it's patrons - that's something really hard to find. To give you just one example I have a neighbour who has a mental health condition and special needs - she regularly has lunch at the pub, invited by another local resident, a now retired American 'hot-shot' Wall Street lawyer, tell me where you find that? It's just one of many examples of local social cohesion and engagement that this pub uniquely facilitates. In this world of increasing inequality, I quote cheers: "You want to go where people know, People are all the same, You want to go where everybody knows your name".

I moved to [REDACTED] over 21 years ago. I have only ever known one other pub in my 46 years on planet earth that even came close to the special warm, welcoming and magical atmosphere that The Cow creates, every time it feels like you are coming home - it's a wonderful thing and so rare to find now. The Cow is like an endangered species, it's such a rare beast it should be cherished and protected.

The Cow has significant cultural importance, it really is the beating heart of the local community, it should receive listed and protected status, not a review of it's premises license. Revoking the license for The Cow would be akin ripping the soul from the body, leaving it flaccid and lifeless.

This pub's reputation travels much further than the local community - particularly for the food it serves. It punches well above it's weight, in my opinion the food at The Cow is vastly superior to most of the restaurants in the local area and beyond. I have seen many tourists from all four corners of The World wowed by the cuisine and hospitality here. A go-to destination for the savvy traveller, it's exactly what we need post Brexit, promoting and championing a unique British cultural experience - not destroying it!

So there you go... that is my 2 cents into the pot. If you would like to clarify any of the points I have raised here you are very welcome to call me and discuss further on: [REDACTED]

Yours faithfully,

[REDACTED]

To the Westminster City Council,

I am writing to voice my ardent support of, and wholehearted affection for, The Cow.

I have lived in London off and on for the last fifteen years, and visit often for purposes both private and professional. One constant, throughout all of this time loving London, has been The Cow. Every return to the city has as its fundamental requirement for a successful and fruitful stay, time spent at The Cow.

As a female both accompanied and solitary, I have relished my time at The Cow – whether to spend a few leisurely hours reading the weekend newspapers, for dining or drinks with friends and colleagues, or to celebrate special occasions. Never once have I felt unsafe. Never once have I felt uncomfortable. Never once have I experienced a moment of pause in my enjoyment of this premises. And I have both friends and colleagues who live in the immediate vicinity of The Cow who share my sentiments exactly.

It is for all of these reasons, that I heard with surprise and great disappointment of the Westminster City Council's Review of The Cow's Premises Licence, and the stated reasons for such a review.

The Cow is a gem. The Cow is an icon. The Cow is a vibrant thread weaving through the tapestry that is the urban experience of London. To censure or penalize such an enterprise would be a terrible mistake. I say this both as a patron of The Cow, and as an Urban Studies professional.

To be clear in my intent for writing this letter, I have never – not once in many, many visits – experienced crime nor disorder, public nuisance, nor any issues with personal or neighbourhood safety when visiting The Cow.

I hope you will take my advocacy of such a treasure under consideration as you work through this review process.

With best regards,

Dear Sirs/Madams and all who this may concern.

I have been a local resident in both W2 and W10 since 1970. I have been a regular diner and patron of the Cow since it opened 26 years ago in 1995.

In all the years I have been a customer here at this fine establishment I can confirm that I have never witnessed any form of public nuisance, any threat to public safety or any form of crime or disorder.

The Cow is a particularly well run pub with fine dining as well as simple homely family style meals. A place I often bring my aging mother who lives nearby in Paddington for lunches.

Its a great classically principled Anglo-Irish themed public house that combines the local pub feel with an internationally welcoming spirit.

The regular clientele strike me generally as mainly an older customer base of good breeding, well mannered, polite, educated and friendly.

The pub embraces the seasonal traditions elegantly, colourfully with great panache and style. Never pandering to rowdy sports driven crowds that may tarnish the excellent reputation this very special place has.

I am right and dignified in writing this letter to you in the hope and determination that West London doesn't lose this exceptionally fine pub/restaurant. A local sanctuary that we all look forward to revisiting after current lockdown restrictions ease.

Yours sincerely

February 28th 2021.

Attention:

Licensing office. Westminster City Council.

I have been asked by the owners of The Cow pub London, to share my thoughts about the license review currently in progress.

I have frequented this establishment for over fourteen years, for social, and work purposes.

I have only had positive experiences from visiting The Cow pub. It is well run, and I have been lucky enough to meet some of London's brightest minds over the years there. I've never witnessed any disturbances, and have always found a homely, and welcoming atmosphere.

To me, and many others, The Cow is not just another pub. It is one of London's most revered Independent establishments, that has a reputation for incredible food & events.

In light of a year of devastating Covid restrictions, one would feel those that have managed to survive nearly a year of closures, should be supported, when they are able to re open. By their customers, and their local government bodies. We need these places to commune and re connect after a long period of isolation.

Most of all, The Cow has always been a meeting place that includes everyone, from all walks of life, and has been a great asset to its community since it opened many years ago.

Annex B4 – Premises Licence Holder's supporting documents

Submission in Support of The Cow, 89, Westbourne Park Road, W2 5QH

I wish to support The Cow in this review of their licence. For over 20 years it has been a well run and hugely popular pub and restaurant serving both locals and visitors. There has never been any trouble reported before the events of 2020. Since Covid19 was declared a pandemic by the World Health Organisation we have seen massive disruption to social and economic life with many businesses struggling for survival and many casualties. Life has not been anything like normal and it is against this background that the unfortunate events of 2020 occurred. I believe that the licensee has every intention of cooperating with the Licensing Team and with goodwill on both sides I hope that a positive way forward is found and that The Cow can continue to serve the community for many years to come.
